a Much-Wanted Oil Lease.

In Hustling a Couple of Pittsburgers to Beat a Fast Roadster.

ELECTRICITY OF GREAT AVAIL

AN EXPRESS WAGON HELPS 'EM OUT

Probably as novel a race as ever occurred for an oil lease, occurred between this city and Westview, yesterday afternoon. Those famous old oil scouts, Ben Tupper, Charley Newlon, or that prince of them all, Joe Cappeau, may unwind a yarn or two of the good old days of Bradford or Pithole and of the breakneck rides 'cross country, and burrah for the first and condemn the last, but the electric cars, an express wagon, and of the breakneck rides cross country, and burrah for the first and condemn the last, burrah for the first and condemn the last, wale suits. We have them in sacas, three or four-button cutaways in all sizes.

the pre-historic and time-honored errand of working a farmer for his lease.

The warm car, padded seats and easy motion seemed a revelation to the two used to roughing it, and some pleasing comparisons between the present and the rough old days of Cherry Grove were being drawn, when Johnny drawled, "Oh, me! Oh, my! Look ALSO AFTER A LEASE.

"That" was nothing but a plain man in a buggy, urging his horse up the steep hill back of Allerheny. He was clad in the usual oilskin and was in the normal condition of the average oil man, in a great hurry, as flecks of foam whirled back on face and coat to mix with mud fresh from the heavy roads."

"He's atther me lease" said Newell "He's afther me lease," said Newell, falling into his humorous brogue when getting the worst of it. "He's afther me lease and I'm afther getting lett." A chill silence settled over the car pair, broken only by the monotonous hated ring of the conductor's bell and the heavy breathing of the electric current as a few thousand more ohms were turned on, and the car volted forward and madly down the first grade. Then something happened, no one knows what, and the driver will never tell, as it is against the rule to talk to the bang and an upheaval, and the car glided smoothly on, leaving a plowing horse and a wrecked buggy on one side of the road, and a steady volume of choice oil-country En-glish from a man who glish from a man who had evidently devoted much of his time to accumulating expressive adjectives. The rival lessee was floored, or rather grounded. No, hardly that for the determined man undid the traces in a moreent, cut the lines, clambered on the horse's back and came on again. "Lukkat him gallop," said the conductor,

"No," said an excited passenger, "he's went lame," which expressive phrase tossessed the merit of truth, if not of grammar. The horse had gone lame badly, and so the first half of the race ended, with the car leading to its terminus at Perrysville, and the lease still two miles away.

"Now," said Newell, "sprint," and they sprinted. He carried weight of some 80 pounds over his friend, but the latter soon accumulated more than his share or mud, though the other didn't object, so honors were gasy.

I wonder what that rattling is behind?" "An exprees wagon." "Whose in it?" "A man. "The dei"!"

"No, a m-" THE LEASE LANDED.

"Come on," and away the two went to Westview, with the steady plunk, plunk of the express horse behind, that wouldn't be urged, and thought he knew his business, and then was in no great hurry.

So the procession reached Keating's and landed the lease, Newell winded but leading, his friend a plodding second, and the other sellow distanced so badly that the flag on the Ivory well broke loose and fell on "I'm dhry.

Legally, this expression might be objected to as an attestation to a lease, but practically it seemed to meet the approval of the witnesses present. After a lunch and a cigar the return trip was suggested, and it did seem tough to walk back those dreary miles in the mud and rain. "Not a rig here," said jovial Joe Keating, who has struck it rich out there. "Nothing but this express wagon that has just come in

I think the man is after leases, and may stay all night."
"Well," chuckled John, "I never take anything I can't get. It says 'For Hire,' so we'll just hire it awhile."

So it was arranged that Keating pay the hire, if an owner appeared, and the winners in the race clambered into the wagon and turned the now willing horse toward home. Arrived at the bottom of the long hill, just before the turn, John pointed back, and there in the fast darkening night could be seen a tall figure, clad in bespattered oil-

"He looks as if he'd lost something." Yes, evidently something had happened to disturb his equanimity. He had not only lost the race, the leuse and the rig, but also his temper. The long, thin figure in the road ever and anon would point to high heaven, then pound himself vigorously on the chest, as is to enforce some mental re-solve; then he would point to the ground, as an indication of some people's final destruction, and then pound his chest again -all to no purpose; Rosinante scented oats.

The favorable impression produced on the first appearance of the agreeable liquid fruit remedy Syrup of Figs a few years ago has been more than confirmed by the pleasant experi-ence of all who have used it, and the success of the proprietors and manufacturers the Cali-fornia Fig Syrup Company.
