NEGROES MUST VOTE

Sherman Declares That There Shall be a Change in the South.

SENATOR HOAR'S RETRACTION.

Some of His Statements About Louisiana Not Quite Accurate.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON AS A DEMOCRAT

WASHINGTON, March 13 .- In the Sen ate to-day Mr. Eustis referred to the two statements made by Mr. Hoar yesterday, in reference to the Southern States, one of them being that in the State of Louisiana and in some of the other States, there were laws which made it a penal offense, punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, for a white man to associate on terms of equality with negroes. There never had been a necessity for the State of Louisiana to enact such a preposterous law.

The other statement by Mr. Hoar was to the effect that there was another law in Louisiana which provided for the sale of any colored man found for a certain time out of work, and that the former master should have the preference in the purchase He asked Mr. Hoar whether he could find any such law on the statute books of Louisians. He (Mr. Eustis) knew that the criticism was directed against the Legisla-ture of Louisiana of 1866-7; but he had never heard a Republican Senator criticise the infamous laws enacted in Louisiana by Republican Legislatures.

DID NOT HAVE EXISTENCE.

There was no such law, however, as that which Mr. Hoar had referred to, and any pretense that there was only illustrated with what recklessness, with what destitution of sense of responsibility, Republican Senators spoke of Southern affairs. They seemed to be restrained by nothing, not even by facts, for there were two statements made by the Senator from Massachusetts for which there was not the slightest foundation.

At the close of the colloquy the educational bill was taken up as the "unfinished business," and Mr. Blair addressed the Senate in reply to certain strictures on the bill. He also read extracts from the speech of President Harrison when Senator, in 1886, favorable to the bill, and said that he knew that the President held those sentiments with the same earnestness to-day as when he The Southern question came up again and after a brief discussion Mr. Hoar admitted that his former statement about the laws of

A HEATED POLITICAL DEBATE. Mr. Sherman then took part in the dis-cussion which became a heated political controversy. He traced the course of the reconstruction movement and said that at the close of the war it had not been contemplated, at that time, to arm the negro with suffrage. But the laws passed by some of the Southern States had been so unjust to the colored people and to the white Republicans in the South that the people of the North became convinced that the object in the South was to overthrow the results of the war and to deprive the treedmen of all the rights of citizenship. Up to that time all the legislation had been guided by the one generous feeling that all the results of the war should be blotted out except the one growing out of the abolition of slavery. But when the time had come that it was seen that there was no way to protect the emancipated people except by arming them with suffrage, Congress had, reluctantly, slowly, but deliberately, adopted that remedy as the only one fitted for the case. There had been no feeling of passion or

A FEELING OF REGRET.

He (Mr. Sherman) had sometimes thought that it might possibly have been better not to have adopted the Fifteenth Amendment conferring suffrage on the colored man, because that right had been nullified and uprooted. The right of suffrage did not now exist with colored men wherever it might be valuable to them. The result of the fifteenth amendment was, practically, to give to the Southern States increased representation in the House of Representatives and increased power in the electoral college. If there was anything wrong in the situation of Southern affairs, the people of the South had brought it on themselves. There was no feeling of hate existing in the North against the South—as intimated yesterday by Mr. George. If the equal rights of all people in the South were secured the people of the North would be satisfied. That was the universal feeling.

Mr. Butler suggested that the reconstruc-tion measures and the adoption of the Fifteenth Amendment were not so much owing to objectionable legislation in some of the Southern States as to the conflict between Andrew Johnson and the Republican Con-

ANDREW JOHNSON A DEMOCRAT. Mr. Sherman replied that the selection of Andrew Johnson-a Southern man and a Democrat-for the Vice Presidency was another proof of the generous treatment which the North had shown to the South. But Mr. Johnson had deserted the Republican party and turned his back upon it when he same into power; and Congress had tied his hands and prevented him carrying out his policy.

Mr. Butler—Then I understand the Senator from Ohio practically to admit that the Southern people were not alone responsible, but that Andrew Johnson, his President, was more responsible for the enactment of extreme measures against the South—
Mr. Sherman—I look upon Andrew

Johnson as a Southern man and a Demo-Mr. Botler-He was your Republican President; and the people of the South had no other authority to look to after they surrendered their armies except the executive Mr. Sherman-The Southern people had the right to look to Congress as the governing power of the country.

After some further remarks, Mr. Sherman

A SERIOUS SPEECH.

Let me say to Senators on the other side, in all seriousness, that there is a feeling in the North that injustice has grown out of the Fifthteenth Amendment, and that not only Fifthteenth Amendment, and that not only have the negroes of the South been deprived of their votes, but that the people of the South now enjoy larger political power than the same number of the people of the North. You have 30 odd members of the House of Representatives based upon negro representation. Now let the South do as it ought to do. Let it obey the constitutional amendments. Let it give the megro his vote and permit him to vote as he will. We are not there to control him. We are not there to control him. We are not there to control him. We are not there to drive him. And I would not care if the whole of the negroes would vote the Democratic tloket. But this feeling of injustice does prevail in the North—the feeling that while you are depriving the colored people of their votes you are exercising an undue power in the Government. And until that is remedied—either through the negro being excluded from the basis of representation—there never will be a feeling of content and equality among the people of the Northern States. And now you complain of us. For what? For injustice, wrong, violence or bloodshed? No. You complain of us that we hate you. We deny the hatred, but we demand the justice. And until the Southern States give these colored people their rights under the Constitution there will be disquiet and discontent, and a feeling of injustice.

JUSTICE FOR ALL.

JUSTICE FOR ALL. I trust that the time will come when even this feeling will disappear and when every man shall have a right to vote. And I now say, that beyond and above this educational bill, or any other pending measure, is an act of Congress other pending measure, is an act of Congress that will secure to every man in the United States, who is entitled to vote his right to cast his vote and have it counted. Whenever Congress rises to the dignity of passing such a law that will be uniform throughout the United States, affecting Massachusetts and Ohio as well as South Carolina and Mississipp, every man will feel that it is just and a fair law and there will be no further ground of complaint. Congress cannot exercise any control in local affairs in the Southern States and does not claim a right to do so, but what we insist upon is that there shall be a law that will protect the right of suffrage and that that law will be executed with such power that no man dare to expose himself to its penalties.

Mr. Butler replied to Mr. Sherman. He spoke of the exclusion of colored men in the Northern States from all political offices, and said that on the contrary there was no discrimination in the laws of South Carodiscrimination in the laws of South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana or Georgia against a man on account of his race, color or previous condition of servitude; and that a number of colored people in those States were holding offices to-day, and one colored man was representing a Congressional dis-trict of North Carolina; so that he would say to the Senator from Ohio who had renarked with such a promising attitude that the South should do so and so, that the Northern States would do right to the col-ored people a good deal of the iriction would

THE SOUTHERN IDEA. The Southern Idea.

The Senator would find, whenever he attempted to re-establishing the South, those reconstruction Governments, which had leit in their train the black mark of spoliation, of disgrace, of humiliation, and which would always be a reproach to the history of this country, a protest in his own State, and in his own country, that would cause him to hesitate before he carried it out to its fullest extent. He (Mr. Butler) would not exchange one hour of good order in the South for all the political power that negro suffrage had given to the South.

If he had the power to-morrow he would transfer every atom of that political power o the North and wish the North Godspeed in the solution and management of it. He appealed to Senators and he appealed to the cople of the North to believe Southern men when they said that they were far more nterested in an orderly, humane, honest settlement of the question than the people of the North could possibly be.

CORAOPOLIS IS CRAZY.

Land Two or Three Times Over a Month Ago-A New Well in the Chartiers Field. The enthusiastic driller who puts a girdle around oil territory, if not in 40 minutes or in a week or two, flies off the handle, condemns it and indicates some other spot, coming back perhaps to the condemned territory and rehabilitating it within a month, has been working Coraopolis this week, and the price of property has gone out of sight. The Ferree well was not drilled in at noon yesterday, but the village was still swarming with oil smellers and men rushing hither and thither with surveying instruments sighting up this ditch and down that, ments sighting up this ditch and down that, and there has been more excitement since Saturday than ever known before in the place since the Millerite scare in 1846. The Guffys, the Galleys and other operators are making the mud fly, and municipal grievances are for the time being forgotten. The cause of all the excitement is the result of an accident. The drillers on the Ferree well having made their calculations from data taken from the boring of a well on Neville Island had about decided that the Ferree well was dry when the jars broke. During their efforts to get the tools out they thought they discovered grease signs. After the well was cleaned they decided to smite the rock a few more times for variation. They did so and the oil began to squirt. Had there been no accident the well would have been dismantled.

Since then Harry Boyd, who had bought an acre and a half on the hill and had put a small building on it at a total cost, ground and building, of $500, was offered $1,200 for it and let it go. Dan Gold, one of the drillers, owned 34 acres on the road leading to Ewing's mill, and he sold the supposed oil under it for $3,500, retaining the land. Alfred McCabe got $800 bonus and gets one-eighth of what oil may be found for a piece of ground that he offered to sell outright three years ago for $350. A. W. McDonald was offered $500 bonus by a company that wanted to bore in his stable yard. Mr. McDonald says it will take $1,000 to come in. A farm on the top of the hill that was sold by a man named Smith for $65 an acre, has been leased on a bonus of $80 an acre and one-eighth of the dil. There is scarcely anyone in the neighborhood who owns a piece of land that hasn't had an offer.

In the Chartiers field the Fortwangler No. and there has been more excitement since Sat an offer.

In the Chartiers field the Fortwangler No. 2 was showing yesterday for 75 barrels. No. 1, on the same farm, was making 21 barrels an hour. Mr. Stewart, the man who drilled the Arbuckle gusher, is interested with the Guffys in this farm.
