Division Orders, March 17, 1780. The commanding officer desires that the cele-bration of the day should not pass by without a little rum issued to the troops, and has thought proper to direct the Commissary to send for the hogshead, which the Colonel has purchased, already in the vicinity of the camp. While the troops are celebrating the bravery of St. Pat-rick in innocent mirth and pastimes, he hopes they will not forger their worthy friends in the kingdom of Ireamd, who, with the gratest unanimity, have stepped in opposition to the tyrant, Great Britelin, and who, like us, are de-termined to die to be free. The troops will conduct themselves with the greatest sobrlety and good order. IN HISTORIC TIMES,

A PARTIAL DEPOSIT.

"About 10 o'clock a letter came with $25 enclosed, sent by a messenger boy. The note stated that he would have balance, $61 90 at the bank before 1 o'clock, as it we did not receive it by that time, the check would have been returned to the clearing house marked 'no funds.' About 1 o'clock a second messenger brought a check for the balance of the amount. The check was on a city bank, and we had it certified by telephone. Our suspicions were then aroused, on account of his being so hard up or money. I concluded we would have his indorser call at the bank, for the purpose of having an understanding, as his notes had been carried a considerable length of time, and although Mr. Brosi had been requested repeatedly to reduce them, he had only done so to a very trifling extent.

"Well, his indorser called Friday morn-ing at 10 o'clock. After a discussion, he said he could not state the exact amount for which he had written his name, and asked us to wait until he would have a talk with Brosi. When he returned, in the afternoon, after having consulted the family, he said he had not indorsed any paper for Mr. Brosi for some years.

MADE THEM SUSPICIOUS.

That proved to us that Brosi had undoubtedly secured money on forged paper, and we figured up the amount to be $1 035 He also lorged his tather's name to notes aggregating $300. He forged his father's name as the maker of the notes, and also forged the indorsement. The notes signed by his father were presented and discounted at the bank by Mr. Brosi, Both the maker and the indorser of the notes claim their names were forged. While this is claimed by these gentlemen, the signatures are such periect fac-similes of the original, that the most expert could hurdly detect the difference. The notes we now hold are all renewals, the original of which were properly made and indorsed in the bank, in the presence of the officials. "Our directors held a special meeting to day and placed the matter in the hands of the bank's attorney, Mr. George N. Munro for prosecution. We are patiently awaiting further developments now. While the bank officials refused to state who Brosi's indorser is, it is learned through his friends that it is J. E. Miller, an uncle, of Hazelwood, J. C. Butte, Steubenville, another uncle, is also a victim. It is said that his name is fraudulently placed on the paper held by the People's Bank. It is a note made by Brosi and indorsed by John O. Slemmons, the wholesale jeweler, of Fifth avenue, with whom Brosi dealt, and Mr. Butte, the Steubenville uncle.

TOO FAR FOR HIM.

When THE DISPATCH reporter called on Daniel Berg, the cashier of the Manufacturers' Bank, that gentleman felt disposed to deny that they had any of Brosi's paper. "We haven't any of any account," he said. "Mr. Brosi was either too far away from us, or we were too new for him." However, a relative of Brosi's fixed the amount said to have been secured from the Mauufacturers' Bank.

Mr. Thomas Atterbury, of the Iron and Glass Dollar Savings Bank, tried to give out the impression that he was aware of Mr. Brosi's method of doing business by saying that he supposed Mr. Brosi had issued forged paper to people who did not know his business as well as the people of his bank did. But it is admitted by the relatives that the amount they are involved for is as formerly stated.

The Western war on passenger fares continues unabated, but the chances are the fight will soon be settled. Local passenger agents report that the low rates have not ncreased the number of travelers.

Either people are not traveling or they do not care to take advantage of the slaughter. One agent remarked that the public generally succeeded in hearing of the fights aiter they were over.

IN HISTORIC TIMES.

The reference, which Washington makes to the "heavy and tyrannical oppressions of their trade" occurred a short time before the famous Irish struggle for independence in 1782 commenced. Previous to this the Irish Parliament had refused to send troops out their brothers' throats in America." and the Tory resolution was roundly denounced by the Irish members. The order to observe St. Patrick's Day was issued while the American army was used at Norristown, New Jersey. Washington had many Irishmen among his troops and he valued their worth and valor highly. In 1776 also he ordered that the day be cele brated with "all due respect and decorum."

Mr. Stewart, who bored the Arbuckle wells, and is also interested in the development of the Fortwaugler farm, states that the old Arbuckle No. 1 is still doing 130 barrels a day, and that her daily product for eight days past was so regular that the variation was but a fraction of an inch in the tank.
