Billy Dieutch's Proposition Staggers Congressman West.

How Two Enterprising Young Men Overshot Themselves.

PROMINENT PITTSBURGERS IN GOTHAM

[CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, March 16.—In certain circles here there is probably no man better known than Billy Dieutch, a man about town who, for a pastime, solicits life insurance for a large company at $15,000 per annum. He is a handsome man of about 35, with a fund of good stories and original sayings which go toward making him agreeable company in a party of New Yorkers. He has had a varied career, being worth hundreds of thousands of dollars many a time, and as often having dropped it into the coffers of the custodians of Dame Fortune over the green cloth. It was Billy Dieutch who bet and won $100,000 on the turn of a card at Monte Carlo some eight or ten years ago. He is ever willing to speculate on anything which has a semblance of chance around it. He is a good conversationalist, and his urbane manner wins the listener to his smooth flow of words. As an instance of this fact, he was in the Fifth Avenue Hotel last night with a party of friends, when Congressman West, the ten-millionaire paper manufacturer of this State walked in. Dieutch was attracted by the gentleman's distingue air and inquired who he was. When told, he said: "I'll bet I can talk to that gentleman five minutes and know him well, and inside of ten minutes can have him over drinking a bottle of 'fizz' with us. Watch me."

He walked over to the Congressman, and said, "Pardon, but isn't this Congressman West?"

"That's my name, sir," answered the statesman, stiffly.

"My name is Dieutch, and I am about embarking in the manufacture of paper in Pennsylvania, and I would be pleased to see you to-morrow on some important business."

"Why, certainly," said Member West, "at what time and place?"

"Right here. We expect to go into the business on a very large scale, and in our mill contemplated a capacity of 100,000 tons per day will be attained."

OVERSHOT THE MARK.

The Congressman turned quickly, raised his hand high in the air and said: "You're a liar. I am interested in eight mills in this and the old country and all of them do not turn out over 35,000 ton per day."

Mr. Dieutch saw that he had cornered himself, as he endeavored to extricate himself as best he could. Being quite versatile he resorted to some pathetic recitations, a song or two, several . asts and good stories, until he had captivated the Congressman entirely and the wine was flowing rapid at his expense. Billy had succeeded in ingratiating himself thoroughly, and when the two parted the rich paper manufacturer invited Billy up to spend a week at his Hudson River home.

A gentleman who attracts a great deal of attention from the guests of the Fifth avenue is Col. J. M. Guffey, the natural gas king, of Western Pennsylvania. He dresses like a Southern planter, with a soft slouch hat worn slightly on the side of his head, Prince Albert coat, low cut vest, displaying an immaculate shirt front with a large solitaire diamond sparkling from it, tight trousers and neaty fitting boots. He is a perfect Chesterfield in his manner and a well-informed man of the world. He says the natural gas status has not materially changed in his district and the wells are putting forth a goodly quantity everywhere, regardless of contrary notwithstanding. Along the Southwest line there is no complaint from consumers. Col. Guffey tells a good story of the Uniontown gas well.

"When the Rider well was struck four miles from there," said he, "I saw that it would in a measure hurt our interests in Uniontown, having laid pipe from our field to that place. Of course the owners of the new well were crazy with joy, and their dreams of untold wealth were many. After they had piped it to town and offered it to the consumers at almost nominal rates, we had to come down also in ours, which was a loss to us, as the expenses were far greater. Several industries located there, drawn by the cheap facilities, etc., and for a time it looked very blue for the Southwest Company around Uniontown. I saw that something must be done, and immediately made known to the officers of the Rider Company that we would buy them out.

MILLIONS IN IT.

"Two young boys, Minor and Ewing, were sent to confer with me, and I explained the situation to them, afterward offering $20,000 for their well. They thought that ridiculous, and wouldn't hear to anything less than $40,000. Talk was useless, because they saw millions in it, and would not be convinced. They proposed to supply our consumers if we would sell them our low pressure line. We finally agreed upon a price, and they took it upon themselves to furnish the town with plenty of fuel. As soon as winter came on them they saw their mistake. There was little or no gas, the new glass works had to shut down, and the people burn coal and wood to keep warm. The Rider well was not strong enough, and another was drilled, with bad results. The town is as bad off as ever, and it only shows another instance of people biting off more than they can chew. If they had accepted our offer they would have had $20,000, where to-day they are probably losing money."

Miss Daisy Ahl, who formerly resided in Pittsburg, has developed into a promising vocalist. She is under the training of Madam Shelley, and sometime ago Colonel McCaull offered Miss Ahl the under study of "Marion Manola," which she refused. From the flattering reports I hear of her Pittsburg will have the honor of producing another fair songstress.

Cora Tinnie, who will be remembered as Cora Powers, in Pittsburg, is here making her mark in the same line. She is a protege of D'Oyley Carte, who bears her expenses until she is formally engaged by him to sing in public. She has had a minor part with the "Gondoliers" here, but next month sails for London to join Mr. Carte's own company there. Young Charlie Clarke is also spoken of frequently about the Casino, and I hear that his voice is a good one.

PITTSBURGERS ABROAD.

C. L. Magee and E. M. Bigelow were at the Fifth Avenue conferring with a Philadelphia gentleman last week. It is said the matter discussed had something to do with new pavements for Pittsburg.

Ex-Mayor Fulton is a familiar figure on Broadway. He is as well known here as in Pittsburg, and if this week's such a Democratic city he would stand a chance for the Mayoralty.

M. K. McMillen, of the Exchange, is at the St. James.

I saw Sheriff McCandless here one night last week. He said he was down in New York investigating, through the aid of some chemist, the merits of "Emmetsite," the recently discovered explosive, which is claimed as powerful as dynamite. The Sheriff was accompanied by T. S. Messler, Commissioner, who is also an enthusiast on the new agent of death.

C. L. Magee and wife, E. M. Bigelow and wife, were registered at the Fifth Avenue last week.

Billy German, of the Sheriff's office, was a Hoffman House guest last week. He has just recovered from a severe case of carbuncle.

Captain J. J. Vandergritt was in the city Friday en route, with his stepson, Mr. Hartly, to Florida, where they will remain a month.

C. W. Schwab, C. E. Dinkey, James P. McCollum are registered at the Hoffman.

West Guffey is a Fifth Avenue guest.
