Beckley Declares He Has Not Received Scandrett's Check. THE SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

J. Palmer O'Neill, of the old club, and Messrs. Hanlon and Tener, of the club, have a long argument regarding the baseball conflict.

Probably the present baseball conflict in many of its bearings was never more interestingly discussed than yesterday in Al Pratt's store.

Manager Hanlon said: "Didn't you sign Beckley when he had already signed a contract with us?"

Mr. O'Neill—That is all nonsense. You said that you had numerous grievances, and these grievances you speak of have many of my own.

Mr. Tener—But were all players transferred as they wished? COULDN'T DO OTHERWISE.

Mr. O'Neill—Why, we couldn't do otherwise, because we could not force a man to go to another club against his will.

Mr. Tener—How about Rowe and White and Gunning? Mr. O'Neill—Well, now the case of Rowe and White was exceptional.

Mr. O'Neill—No, no. That was never intended. I will prove it. A League pitcher, now a member of the Brotherhood, was asked his terms last summer.

THE NATIONAL AGREEMENT. The national agreement was then discussed. Mr. O'Neill said: "Let me tell you that you cannot get along without a national agreement of some kind."
