bell ring two short peals, tollowed by two long ones. Then I heard Commander Me-Calla come up and attempt to open the door to the pilot house. He called out: 'Get up, sir;' and entering, said: 'You were asleep. At the time I was on my feet.

ORDERED UNDER ARREST.

Commander McCalla said to the orderly and Quartermaster: "Youthave been asleen Then he asked for the officer of the deck. At the time witness stood within five feet of McCalla. He told witness to put both men in double irons. He again charged witness with sleeping, and was met with a denial, but suspension by the executive officer was ordered. He (witness) stood watch on the bridge instead of the quarter deck because of the heavy squalis. McCalla all this time was much excited and would receive no explanation. No explanation was allowed from witness that he had given the Quartermaster permission to go to the head when the latter and the orderly were ordered into irons. Apprentice S. R. Graham, Quartermaster watch, was the next witness. He told how Klein gave him permission to go to the head. He was not gone from his post more than seven or eight minutes.

SNUBBING THE ADMIRAL.

John Flynn, the orderly on deck at the time, told how he carried the message to Ensign Klein from Lieutenant Worlich. The witness went below and washed clothe until 12:40. Later the Captain ordered him to light his cabin. Witness did not hear the Captain's bell ring. It was then brought out that witness stood watch for the Quar termaster while the latter went to the head, Admiral Kimberly-Is it usual for the orderly or corporal of the guard to keep out-look for the Quartermaster in his absence?

Witness-It is usual, you know, sir. Admiral-No, I don't know. It is what I want to find out, Witness said that this did not interfere with his duties as orderly. He admitted, however, that if the Captain called him during the Quartermaster's absence there would be no lookout.

WILD'S CHAMPIONS

Are Scored by the Counsel for Lieutenant Steele-He Says the Press Has Been Impased Upon-The Trooper's Bad Reputation.

CHICAGO, March 20 .- At to-day's session of the Steele court-martial evidence was produced that Wild had said, in talking about the case, that the only reason he refused to obey Steele was because he had a grudge against him and wanted to get even. If he could get Steele behind the bars he would testily. Wild was recalled and asked what he had to say to these statements. He declined to make any statement, saying that he was not on trial and didn't have to.

Members of Lieutenant Steele's troop testified to his kind demeanor as an officer and Wild's bad reputation. The question of admitting the 22 witnesses to testify against Wild's veracity, and of admitting Lieutenant Steele's entire troop to testify to his humane conduct was then re-argued. The prosecution admitted the nature of the ee and the defense decided not to introduce the witnesses.

Lieutenant Crowder then offered in evidence the record of Wild's connection with the Eighth Cavalry. It showed that it ex-tended over a period of 16 months, during which time he had spent 59 days in the guard house and had been court-martialed six times, imprisoned once for disobedience of orders and once for quitting his post of duty, and four times for other offenses.

This evidence, the Lieutenant said, he introduced for the purpose of showing that Lientenant Steele in striking Wild did so with provocation, knowing as he did that Wild was an habitual guardhouse charac

The Judge Advocate objected to its introduction, but before the Court rose to go into the private room Lieutenant Crowder said he hoped the members would recollect that Wild had been lauded all over the country as one of the country's brave defenders that his cause had been championed by the authorities of the land from the highest to those of the dime museums, all of which was due to the press, the representaPenn Avenue Stores.
