PASTOR VS PREACHER

The Former is What the Faithful Minister Will Ever Aim to Be

IF HE WISHES TO HELP HIS PEOPLE

Mr. Moody's Very Successful Visit to Princeton College.

NEWSY ITEMS OF RELIGIOUS WORK

What true minister is there that likes to be introduced to strangers as "our preacher?" Whatever other title may be chosen he feels that while preaching is a very essential part of his life work, still it is far from being the one thing he ought to do. He soon realizes that if he only gives his Sabbath to the people, they will fail to even give that much to his ministrations.

The Congregationalist has an article on this subject by the Rev. S. Baker, of Lowell, Mass., which many a minister might read to his benefit, in which he says: "The pasfor was never more needed than now. The minister needs the pastorate for his own sake. He cannot do his best work as student or preacher without the experience of the paster. The preacher must know his people, and in order to know them he must see them, and in order to see them he must visit them at their places of toil and in their

"The preacher is not a mere lecturer to unfold the truth, but his work is higher. His question must be how can I so present this as to help the people in the struggles of the Christian life? Next to the Word of God, the most important book for the preacher is his parish, and in order to have the benefit of that he must be a pastor. The invisible minister during the week is apt to be both incomprehensible and unhelpful on Sunday. Six hours' good work in the study and three hours' good work as a pastor each day, help both the preacher's brain and heart. All study makes full preaching; all visiting makes thin preach ing; but together they make clear, tender and helpful sermons.

"The preacher's influence depends upon the people consider him a mere preacher or a sincere sympathizing Christian brother seeking to belp them heavenward. Just in proportion as the people realize that the minister is their personal friend and that he takes them into his heart and holds them with a sincere affection—just in that preportion will his spoken words have power over their souls. The office of the preacher has lost souls. The office of the preacher has lost much of its power because too many ministers are merely efficial in their methods. It has been the minister and not the brother who has called upon the people. It is well that the mere dignity of the office has lost its influence, but the manly, unselnsh, brotherly pastor has lost none of his; he is loves, and honored as much now as ever. When the people feel that the minister has come not only to preach, and in a patronizing way visit them, but rather as one who enjoys their joys and shares their sorrows, then his preaching may be plain and simple, but his influence will be increasingly great.

"It is sad to hear a minister speak of paroch-"It is sad to hear a minister speak of parochial calling as 'hard work, 'a 'kind of drudgery,' which they must do.' When the pastor feels thus, the people will see it and he is no longer a pastor to them. A minister must be glad to see his people; it must be real gladness. Equally unwise is the remark that "this running round among the people is a waste of time.' When a minister is so small a man, so cold a man, that the call at the home does not do him good, then he would better resign.
"Let the pastor be impartial, not yielding to the delightful temptation of calling upon a few select and leading lamility; rather let the pilans' take care of themselves, and let the pillars' take care of themselves, and let the has or shepherd the uncertain ones. Be a master of the men as well as of the women. The pastor who thus ministers to the people is blessed more than he blesses. The people need shepherding."

Lord, speak to me, that I may speak In fiving echoes of Thy tone: As Thou hast sought, so let me se k Thy erring children, lost and lone,

O lead me, Lord, that I may lead The wandering and the wavering feet; O feed me, Lord, that I may feed Thy hungering ones with manua sweet.

O teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things Thou dost mpart;
And wing my words, that they may reac
The hidden depths of many a heart.

O give Thine own sweet rest to me That I may speak with seething power A word in season, as from Thee To weary ones in needful hour.
