A CHARGE AGAINST JUDGE MAGEE.

Priends Deny That Democratic Politics Will Influence Rim.

THE COURT WORKING DOUBLE TURN

The License Court is wearily dragging its way through the third week of the torture, The spring weather of yesterday had the effect of keeping the few people who have been making up the audience of the court away, and for a time the Judges, reporters and the applicants had the room to themselves. Sixty applicants were heard, and law. the Judges heartily wish the agony was over.

Of the 60 applicants for retail liquor licenses, on the docket for hearing yesterday, one was withdrawn, that of Margaretha Horn, at No. 4 Federal street, just across the bridge, and two were not responded to. Of the latter, one is rather curious. Jerry Key has on file an application for Nos. 35 and 36 East Diamond street. Attorney B. C. Christy says that Key first made out his application for No. 29 East Diamond, and had it signed by the owner of that property as bondsman. When the application was filed with Clerk Me-Gunnegle, the figures 29 had been scratched out and 35 and 36 written in. The name of the landlord of No. 29 was still attached to the paper. This, Mr. Christy says, amounts to perjury. The landlord referred to called upon Mr. Christy and retained him to contest Key's application for Nos. 35 and 36.

Yesterday afternoon Key was in court. He saw there his bondsman and the owner of No. 29 in conversation with Attorney Christy. Before his name was called M.r. Key slipped out of the courtroom. When he was called and failed to respond, Judge Ewing said: "Mr. John S. Robb is the attorney in the case." Mr. Robb arose and said: "There must be some mistake. I am not the attorney in the case, but I know that Mr. Key will not respond." Attorney Christy was in court all day, but rarely took any part in the examinations. His information was generally passed to Judge E ring. Mr. Christy says that his active work will be done in the boroughs and townships. He intimates that proceedings for perjury may be instituted against some of the applicants.

Yesterday was such a fine spring day that the court room lobby was not crowded, but the front steps of the Court House and the broad pavement were thronged, and every applicant, as he came down from the inquisitorial chamber, was surrounded by anxious friends.

A court official who yesterday asked Judge Magee when the city list would be announced, was answered: "You cannot find out." The impression prevails about the properties of the Court House and the broad pavement were thronged, and every applicant, as he came down from the inquisitorial chamber, was surrounded by anxious friends.

ONLY TWO SPECTATORS. HOW THE INTEREST IN THE COURT

IS PETERING OUT. In a Few Days More the Lobbyists Will Have Disappeared-The Ailegheny Applicants Being Hustled-A Number of

New Saloonists Turn Up. There must be a remarkable lack of interest in the Allegheny people. At 9:30 yesterday morning there were only two spectators in the courtroom. After that they dropped in slowly until there were about two dozen, but court opened with the smallest lobby since the hearings began.

Frederick Lang, the first applicant called, keeps a licensed house at No. 148 Madison avenue. Without interruption, he has kept a saloon for 30 years. During the past year his trade has averaged about $50 a day, of his trade has averaged about $50 a day, of John D. Mabold, who applies for No. 34 Fed-

Martin Ley, who applies for No. 351 Ohio street, is an aged Dutchman with a large, benevolent, bronzed face, and long gray beard growing from his throat. He wears an old-fashioned, soft linen collar, and looks like a well-fed farmer. He has never been in the saloon business, and the house has never been a saloon. It is a new man in a new place, for which Judge Ewing has so long been look-

Frederick Lang was recalled, at the instigation of Attorney Christy. Judge Ewing asked if he trusted the men from the Grant Engine Company. Mr. Lang said that he did at times. Judge Ewing said: "You had better stop all that, right short off." Mr. Lang said that his second son, only 18 years old, sometimes assisted at the bar, Emil Wey applies for what he calls the French restaurant, at Nos. 9 and 11 Middle street. He is a Frenchman, and says that his customers are mostly of that nationality.

Frederick Werner, No. 62 East street, has had 17 years' experience as a saloon keeper.

W.P. Mack, No. 70 Federal street, is now conducting a restaurant. He is a professional cook, and used to be employed at the Unior depot.

Joseph Yeager finished the Third ward. He is the proprietor of a restaurant at the corner of Second street and Madison avenue, and wishes a liquor license.

Gottleib Brinkman, No. 18 South Canal street, kept saloon for many years. He is a veteran of the Civil War.

William Burdett, whose house at No. 2 Federal street is now licensed, passed as easily and quickly as most of those who now enjoy the layor of Judge White.

Anton Briegel, No. 31 East Diamond, is running a double-header, having applied for both licenses. There were no special features in the examination of George Boeshaus, No. 26 Chestnut street; Thomas Burger, No. 140 South Canal street, or John H. Bracken, No. 8 Anderson street, Mr. Bracken's house is now licensed. At this point the noon recess was taken.

AFTER GETTING RESTED.

SEANCES BETWEEN APPLICANTS AND THE COURT.

Judge Ewing Insists Upon Them Getting Restaurant Experience Before Getting of License-Many Try to Evade the Pointed Questions, but Fall.

Mrs. Jane Dickroeger, of No. 73 Main street, a short, heavy, kindly-faced woman, was the first called after dinner. She kept a saloon, she said, for 17 years, and is now keeping boarders. Her proposed barkeeper is a son of 23 years. Judge Ewing talked with the lady as if he would give her a license, but he told her that she must be much more particular than under the old George Elbourne a gentleman of very respectable appearance, who looks more like well-to-do merchant than a saloon keeper, asks for a continuation of his license at the corner of Sandusky and Robinson streets. He was worried with no questions.

Joseph Fillinger, of No. 367 Lacock street, had for attorney Mr. George Shiras III., the new Congressional candidate, Fillinger was licensed in 1888, and in 1889 kept a boarding August Freinstein, No. 358 Ohio street, kept saloon before the Brooks law went into the a saccon before the Brooks law went into the sifting business.

Joseph Guckert, of No. 246 Ohio street, has a pool room. His voice is thin and weak. The only salcon experience he ever had was as a silent partner in a house in 1887.

CLOSE TO THE RAILROAD. Joseph Gruener, applying for No. 142 South Canal street, is a thin, hollow-cheeked, sallow young man, with the faintest suspicion of black hair on his upper lip. His places is near the Chesinut street station of the West Penn Railroad. It is Tempelmeyer's restaurant, and Gruener has married Tempelmeyer's daughter.

Gruener has married Tempelmeyer's daughter.

"Do you know anything about liquor being sold there?" asked Judge Ewing.

"No. I don't."

Mrs. Kate Gerst holds a license for the Keystone Hotel, at the corner of East and South Diamond. She is a pretty, young widow, fair of face, trim of figure and stylishly clad.

Joseph Hartle, applying for No. 53 Chestnut street, is a cigarmaker who wishes to quit that husiness. He has been told by his doctor that he must quit, and he is not averse. He is already tixing the place up for a restaurant, "Don't you think" said Judge Ewing, "that it would be well for us to have a trial of that restaurant for about three months before putting in a bar?"

Mr. Margaretha Horn, who had applied for No. 4 Federal street, withdrew her application. Charles H. Jacoba is analyting for a base. No.

restaurant at No. 74 now. "From outside appearances it seems to be a very good restaurant," said Judge Ewing, "and I fear a bar might spoil your good restaurant," Wilhelm Kennewig, who has a licensed house at No. 352 Ohio street, was aleeping sweetly when his name was called. He aroused and hobbled slowly to the bar, where he managed to keep his eyes open during a brief examination.

CLEAR OF THE ROCKS. Hugh Knox possesses a license at No. 168 Lacock street. The past year has furnished his first experience in the saloon business, and he seems to have steered clear of the rocks and sboals which beset the route of the unwary saloon keeper. John Lynch is licensed at No. 18 Chestunt street. He went through quick and slick.

George Lehner, No. 135 Ohio street, although only 34 years old, has tended bar for 12 years and run a saloon of his own for eight years.

Albert Lhota, applying for No. 21 Chestnut street, was asked by Judge Ewing, "Weren't you twice convicted for illegal selling within 18 months?" The applicant was at first in a mood for general denial, and displayed marvelous inability to comprehend English. He finally admitted that in one case he had paid $16 to Alderman Carlisle. What he paid it for he did not know. He has no chance for a license. Charles Merker keeps a licensed saloon, No. Charles Merker keeps a licensed saloon, No 108 Ohio street. John D. Mabold, who applies for No. 34 Federal street, said that he was unable to do hard work because he was wounded at the battle of Spottsylvania Court House. The house which he is preparing to fit up was a saloon for 24 years. He was licensed in 1888. He had two attorneys, Messrs. McCutcheon and Erskine, bu Judge Ewing said that the Court could only stand one. So Mr. McCutcheon conducted the examination, Mr. Erskine standing by nervously. Mr. Mabold said: "I have a large stock left over from one year ago, and I must dispose of it. If I am not licensed I will be ostracised from this State. I cannot sell my liquors here and must sell them somewhere." must sell them somewhere."
"But you have also applied for a wholesale license," said Judge Ewing.
"Yes, sir, Your Honor: but I do not understand that business. I have always been in the retail trade. I would have to learn the wholesale business, and there are so many whole houses. It was not my notion to put in the wholesale application. It was on Mr. Mc Cutcheon's advice." ERSKINE'S ELOQUENCE CUT OFF. "And my advice," said Mr. Erskine.

William Neider is a very big fellow, with a round, smooth face. He looks more like an Irishman than a German. He has a house at No. 12 East street, which has been a tavern for 60 years. He has kept the house for mine years. Henry Roth, a sandy-bearded German, who applies for No. 132 East street, tomerly kent a saleon in Reserve township. "What do the poor people who used to patronize you do now for refreshment?" asked Judge Ewing. The applicant smiled a sad smile but he did not answer.

Mrs. Catherine Schneider, No. 48 Cedar avenue, has an invalid husband who must be supported.

John Stotz, who applies for No. 17 East street, looks like a picture of Father Abraham. He has an immense, pear-shaped nose, which droops over his shaven lip until its tip depends to the level of his mouth. His record, when he kept under the old law, was good.

Where Louis Schneider wishes to keep, at No. 77 East street, a building and loan association meets. This, the Court thought, was rather dangerous.

William Seker keeps a restaurant and lodging house at No. 58 Second street, which he calls the Farmers' and Drovers' Inn.

The cases of Leonard Stolle, No. 28 East street, and Frederick Ulmer, No. 32 East street, were without unusual features.

"Is not he man who had a from in your house?"

"No, sir; you are referring to another Meyer, who lives in the Third ward, at the corner of East and Second streets."

Charles R. O'Brien applies for Nos. 56 and 58 Sandusky street, corner of Lacock. He moved into the new house on Tuesday. He used to run a saloon and restaurant at No. 68 Lacock street, and was refused a license for that place in 1888. In the new house he intends to keep a hotel. During the past year he has been tending bar at the Red Lion Hotel.

Conrad Rosemaler, No. 184 Ohio street, is now keeping boarders. He was asked:

"Has any beer been delivered at your house during the year."

"Any empty kegs taken away?"
"No, sir."
"None at all?"
"No: there was some empty cases taken away "No; there was some empty cases taken away left over a year ago."
"Don't the beer wagon stop at your place often?"
"No, sir. Next door to me is the Allegheny Gymnastic Club, and they get beer."
"Who runs that?"
"I don't know. It's been there for 15 years, The club hires a lady to take care of the rooms."

"Who is the President?"

"I don't know."
"I think you don't wish to know very much about it."

John Rauber asks for a license for Nos. 192 and 194 Robinson street, where his wife has had an eating house for 11 months, while he has attended bar for his wife's sister, Mrs. Margaret Sauers. Rauber used to keep a saloon at the corner of Federal and Robinson streets, but he did not have control of the entire huilding. In did not have control of the entire building. In answer to questions by Attorney Christy, he said that Redpath, Robert Taylor, Joseph Knox and Quinn, objectionable gentlemen, had occupied rooms in the same building, but they did not rent from Rauber.

AN APPLICANT'S LUCID ANSWERS. Mr. Christy-Wasn't there more than the usual number of visitors at your house last Sunday a week? Mr. Rauber-Why, we have Il boarders.

of beer there?"
"Well, I don't know but he might."
"They do sell beer there?"
"Well, I never paid for anything."
"Have you seen it paid for for!"

"Have you seen it paid for!"

"Yes, sir, I have."
"When you were an applicant two years ago I did not write down all the points. I got tired and stopped. But I had this much: You sold and stopped. But I had this much: You sold whisky on a $100 license; allowed card playing for drinks, allowed the playing of pool for drinks, sold on Sunday and sold beer in buckets. I stopped when I got that far."

"I don't think you could have gone any further," said the jolly applicant. There was the heartiest laugh of the session, in which both Judges joined. Judge Ewing told Mr. Seifert that he could run a house properly if he would only exercise care. This ended the work of of the day, and at 5:10 o'clock court adjourned.

in others laughed at. Pat Foley and Dennis Boyle, two of the best known among the "unterrified," were accosted on Smithfield street yesterday, and the former said:

"I can assure you that I have never seen Judge Magee since the February election, nor have I mentioned the subject of licenses to him. I am not interested in the license business, nor do I wish to be. The last conversation I had with Judge Magee was with regard to getting up a campaign fund."

"How much did he give?"

"None of your business."

This settled it, and the West End contractor and ex-Councilman retired from the field with all the honors of war. An attempt was made to see Judge Magee last night in the Court House, but although lights burned in the License Court room up to 9 P. M., showing the Judge to be at work, he would not be interviewed, although the outer gates were stormed viewed, although the outer gates were stormed and an entrance effected.

Among the stockholders was Mr. McGilvery, who had a deposit in the bank, of $12,000 or $14,000. He claims that he transferred his stock, and in consequence contends that he comes in with the rest of the depositors and also wants a wad of the depositors, and also wants a wad of interest of more than $1,000.

KAUFMANNS' DAILY CARD OF REASON,

APRIL 3, 1890.

There's a man in our Merchant Tailoring Department who understands his business. His name is Sam Williams, and he is our Designer and Chief Cutter. He has fitted most of the best known and most particular dressers in both cities. Put yourself in his hands and you'll be both pleased and

The principal secret of Mr. Williams' success and popularity is due to the fact that he never walks in the beaten tracks of others, but marks out his own path. He is the acknowledged originator of new styles, and his art, skill and good taste indellibly impress themselves upon every garment that passes through his hands. The Tuxedo Sack is the latest production of this famous cutter. It certainly is the most graceful thing of the kind that ever hung on a man's back. Next year the other cutters (imitators of Mr. Williams) will catch on to it, but, then, the inventive genius of our artistic cutter will have devised something else.

Another very pretty style that Mr. Williams has paid much attention to this spring is a Shawl Collar Cutaway Frock. It is his own exclusive design. The next matter of

FINE PIECE GOODS

From England, Scotland, France, Germany and Our Own America.

It is a fact, generally known, that we are the only merchant tailors in this city importing our cloths directly from the European looms, and buying them in big quantities and for spot cash, we get them from 15 to 25 per cent cheaper than the competing tailors must pay the jobbers. Of course, you get the benefit of this saving.

Above all things, we want it to be distinctly understood that we make to order first-class garments only. We don't come in competition with the hundred or more of little tailor shops (one-horse concerns that are in this city. Our fine ready-made garments are far superior to their custom work. Don't come to us, then, for poor work. If, however, you want to leave your measure for a first-class Spring Suit, Light Overcoat or a pair of Trousers, and want to avoid the exorbitant profits of the exclusive, tony tailor, then call and see us.

We Have No Judgments for Unpaid Tailor Bills for Sale.

Why? Because we don't trust. You don't have to pay for the bad debts of others, if you come to us. This is quite an item in your pocket,
