DUMB FOR SIX YEARS.

An Old Soldier Recovers His Speech as Suddenly as He Lost It.

In Order to Properly Celebrate the Strange Event, is Arrested,

One of the most remarkable cases, either in the police or medical records of Allegheny county, came up yesterday afternoon in Central station. Inspector McAleese was told that Mark Kinney had been arrested for being drunk and asked to see

"Bosh," replied the Inspector, "that man has not spoken since he was struck by paralvsis six years ago. I have known him for 20 years and seen him every day since. It must be an impostor." But it was true, after all, and Kinney was identified by other officers and spoke fluently for the first time in six years, having always in that time used a slate to com-municate with others, although he retained his power of hearing. He was so delighted nt his sudden good fortune that he got drunk to celebrate the event and was arrested.

Kinney is 45 years of age, an old soldier having served in Company D, One Hundred and Second Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. His story is certainly a most remarkable one. One evening in July, 1883, Kinable one. One evening in July, 1883, Kinney, who had been for ten years employed as a salesman in George Biggs' jewelry store, went home to his supper feeling as well as usual. He threw himself into a chair to wait until the meal was ready. In a few minutes his wife came into the room to call him to supper, but was horrified to find him lying back unconscious in his chair. She roused him so that he opened his eyes, but he could not move his right side, and his speech was gone. A physician was hastily summoned, who, after an examination, pronounced it a case of paralysis.

AN UNFORTUNATE CONDITION. From that time the unfortunate mac has been speak, his little home has been wrecked, he has been a charitable charge to his friends, and his five children have been placed in the Jumonville Soldiers' Home at Uniontown. His friends have exhausted the skill of the best surgeons and physicians in the State from time to time, in the hope of restoring him to health and strength of his former manhood. He was sent to Philadelphia once for six weeks, but returned if anything worse than when he started, turned if anything worse than when he started. The physicians, however, insisted that the man could be cured, and the treatment was kept up until about a year ago, when he hecame disgusted and refused to bother any further with medicines or doctors.

About three months ago Kinney, who had been walking about with the aid of a crutch and a came for a couple of years, began to feel something like life in his paralyzed limbs, and then, about three weeks ago, his crutch and then, about three weeks ago, his crutch and walked, though somewhat feebly, without aid.

He became more hopeful then, of being ahie once more to earn his living and get his family circle around him again, but still despaired of ever recovering his voice. But even tails pleasure was in store for him. One evening last week he attended one of the theaters, and while watching the play he became interested to such an extent in one of the characters that he attempted to pronounce her name. To his survives tempted to pronounce her name. To his sur-prise he was successful, and when he ex-claimed "Maggie!" he was so pleased that he got up and left the theater, so that he could practice speaking without attracting the attention his first utterance had done. But when he got outside the power was gone and he could not articulate a syllable.

CAME FROM A COLD. Last SunGay he caught a severe cold which settled in his throat, and on Monday his throat swelled up so that he tied flannel around it. On Thursday morning he felt so much better that he substituted a silk handkerchief for the flannel, and during the day he made an effort to speak. The attempt was again a success and he began to talk to his wife in a blue streak, fearful every moment that his precious voice would leave him again. But it did not, and vesterday he went around among his friends, surprising them by calling them by name and conversing as if he had always been able to do so. Being satisfied that the recovery of his voice was permanent, he yesterday afternoon threw away the little slate which has been his constant companion for six years, and in order to properly celebrate—the occasion, he started down town and got drunk, with the restarted down town and got drunk, with the re-sult noted above.

Inspector McAleese was so much pleased that his old friend had regained his speech that he ordered him set at liberty at once, say-ing if there was any such thing as an excuse for a man getting drunk, Mark Kinney cer-tainly had one yesterday.

Testimony in the Pinte Glass Hearing Not All Yet In-Treasurer Scott Still on the Stand-Several New Damage Suits

Brought-Other Court News. HE GETS DRUNK IMMEDIATELY, Glass Company vs the company and Captain J. B. Ford was on again yesterday be-fore Master H. D. Gamble, of the United States District Court, Sol Schover, Esq., for plaintiffs, and D. T. Watson, Esq., for defendants, consumed an hour in argument BUT IS FREED IN A SHORT TIME as to whether plaintiffs should put in evidence a private agreement between Captain Ford and John Pitcairn, stipulating that the latter should not enter into business in opposition to the Tarentum firm. The Master reserved his

the Tarentum firm. The Master reserved his decision.

J. B. Scott's examination was resumed. He said the check-book of the company would show whether $14,000 in dispute had been paid. He said there was a written agreement between Pitcairn and Ford, and winness' father had said there would be no more selling out, as he had an agreement with Ford to that effect; $1,000,000 would not have been paid it such paper had not been in existence. At the meeting on September 20, 1887, the directors' resolution was presented. McLain offered a resolution to build new works, with 300,000 feet capacity, and, after amendment was passed, Vice President Pitcairn refused to surrender the agreement to the stockholders, holding that it was a private matter. Pitcairn said the works contemplated could be built for $1,500,000.

700. The rest of the forenoon session Mr. Watson The rest of the forenoon session Mr. Watson spent in cross-examining Scott. He said he was elected treasurer at the organization of the company. The majority of the capital stock was held by the Fords. Accounts were kept at the Masonic Bank. Preferred stock was to get 12 per cent dividend before common came in. In 1886 32 per cent was paid. Witness had been indirectly interested in a sale of 1,000 shares of stock sold by Ford and was offered a one-half interest by McLain. Shares bought for $150, sold for $175 to $182. Ford wanted to sell 4,000 shares, but was dissuaded by Scott. He could not say whether he had about $100,000 of Plate Glass Company's money at that time in the Masonic Bank, of which McLain was cashier; didn't know whether Ford was paid by Glass Company's money at that time in the Masonic Bank, of which McLain was cashier; didn't know whether Ford was paid by check on the Masonic Bank or by drafts on New York. No opporition was shown to his or his father's election to the Board of Directors up to the time of the death of Scott, Sr. The latter at the time of his death held 800 shares of stock and witness 1,100 of original stock, on which there was a stock dividend of 33 per cent. All of his father's stock was sold at $147 for common and $200 for preferred. Pitcairn and Scott bought their stock at the same time. Ford wanted new capital and said he sold stock below its value because he must have money. At the afternoon hearing Mr. Watson continued to press Mr. Scott for dates of meetings, conversations, etc., to which he had previously testified. Mr. Scott could not fix many dates. He admitted that his father was the person who offered the directors' resolution at their meeting September 20, 1887, providing for the building of the new works. The witness did not know what directors attended the meeting. He stated that before this meeting of the directors Ford had acknowledged to him that he was not satisfied with the way the works were being run, and wished to sell a number of shares to bring in money, as it was badly needed. A statement of the earned income up to January 1, 1857, showed $179,000 on hand. When asked by Mr. Watson why a dividend of $200,000 had been declared then and was to take effect shortly afterward, the witness stated that the condition of the business warranted this statement, as the increased income would cover the necessary $20,000.

A DISASTROUS DELAY.

Sult of a Cont Firm to Recover $11,267 From a Bridge Company. W. H. Brown & Sons, the coal shippers, yesterday entered suit against the Keystone Bridge Company to recover $11,267 50 damage. They state that the bridge company built a new superstructure for the Lake Eric Railroad bridge over the Ohio river at Beaver, which was bridge over the Onio river at Beaver, which was completed October 10. They obstructed the main and north channel spans by false piers supporting a false superstructure, leaving only 50 feet space above a 13 feet stage of water.

October 29 Brown & Sons sent out 159 barges loaded with coal, which were unnecessarily delayed by the bridge company's neglect, and one steamer was unable to pass at all under the false superstructure. The delay to their shipments caused them considerable loss, and they hold the bridge company liable. ments caused them considerates hold the bridge company liable.
