BEAUTIFUL WINDOW DISPLAYS.

And the Way in Which They Are Trimmed by an Army of Experts.

A VOCATION THAT'S ALMOST AN ART

"His sisters and his cousins and his nunts," and he, himself, have united in the was born in Pennsylvania, and gradu-caring at and admiring the many beautiful sted at the old Washington and Jefferson gazing at and admiring the many beautiful Easter windows that have graced the stores of the principal business thoroughfares of the Twin Cities during the past two weeks. And the exclamations of admiration have been as varied, both in language and emphasis as the speakers have been in appearance and education. The beauties of the windows have been free to all, the rich and the poor, and all have availed themselves of the privilege of gazing upon the most elab-orate display in the windows ever witnessed in either city. Millinery and drygoods dealers have had a decided advantage over other merchants, but all have made a creditable showing. Jewelers' windows have fairly dazzled the beholder with their wealth of sparkling gems and their rare vases and ornaments, and even the grocery men have come to the front with the sign "It is time to clean house," and made a most novel but unromantic showing of dusters, soaps, mopsticks, scrubbing brushes and sapolio.

A UNIQUE DISPLAY.

The druggists have not been behind, and ment of a real live hen with a family young ducks and a small tank of water in his window, managed to have a crowd in front of his store from early morn till late at night. Of course the little ducks desired a bathe and a swim, and the poor distracted stepmother hen, in her frantic endeavors to vent such a dire calamity, made life a burden for herself and her family, but was intensely amusing to the spectator.

Such a window denotes originality, but does not require the art of the pro essional trimmer, as the more pretentious and artistic windows. Apropos of the professional window trimmer: He is a genius in his way. He is much like the poet or the archæolo-gist-born, not made. Beside having an excellent eve for coloring and the blending of colors, and naturally the attractive draping of goods, he must be an artist with the saw and hammer. He must be able to make his own toundations upon which to display is pretty goods; have the knack of transinto whatever his artistic seuse may suggest, and trimming it in such a way that the resuit will be a paragon of beauty whose ple-beian origin will never be imagined by even the most cynical and inquisitive person.

OTHER QUALIFICATIONS. With paint and brush he must be compe dazzle the eyes of the observer as much by their beauty as by the exceedingly small figures (in value, not in size) with which e adorns them.

With the multitude of requirements nee essary it is not surprising that there are but few, comparatively speaking, in the profession and that they command good salaries. They are not in as great demand in the Eastern cities as formerly. New York, as a city, does not do the window trimming that it West spends lots of money in making store windows attractive.

handsome windows. The sanctum sanc- churned up by oil teams in that section. sional window trimmer or his "den," as he is pleased to call it, is a very interesting place to visit. The re-porter found Mr. Pinckney Epstin, who is with Gusky, in his den on the second floor of the store yesterday, surrounded with velvets, plushes, satins and silks of every color and in great variety. Huge rolls of expenrial lined the shelves of the apartment, and boxes marked "screws," "fancy tacks," "ribbons" and "cards" were also visible, beside paints of all colors, as the young man was engaged in manufacturing some very taking window cards for an East-

SATISFIED WITH PITTSBURG.

In reply to inquiries Mr. Epstin said he had been in the business 14 years, and had devoted his whole time to it; that he really knew nothing else, but of that statement there is much doubt. He learned the art the part that is learned by practice-in New York City, with one of the leading firms there. He came to Pittsburg about three years ago, and receives $50 a week salary from Gusky, beside the compensation he receives from Eastern firms, many of whom he supplies with fancy cards. The young man has issued a very complete little manual called "How to Dress Windows and Write Show Cards," which, he says, will assist one immensely in the work, if they have a natural aptitude for it, to

There is no school for learning the art. The student must act as an assistant to some expert until he finds he has mistaken tempt individual work.

Mr. Frank Renolds is the young who keeps the windows of Boggs & Buhl in the attractive state for which they are noted. He said, in conversation with a reporter, that he had only been engaged in the business five years. He began the work in Philadelphia, and from there went to Chicago, but was dissatisfied with the world in general until he was able to call the Gas City his home. He has enjoyed that pleasure for three years, and has every indication of contentment and plenty. He is an enthusiast on the combining and blending of colors, and says that in church or at the theater he involuntarily notes all pretty effects gained by the combining of colors in the ladies' costumes, and utilizes his knowledge afterward in his window trimming.

A FASCINATION IN IT.

Mr. Renolds says that there is a peculiar fascination in the work, after one becomes interested in it, and trummers are continually on the alert for new and unique featurer with which to make their work attractive; also, that there is an unlimited scope for individuality in the work, but with all that there are some unpleasant features connected with it. The continual reaching to heights above is one; the elimbing around on stepladders and dry goods boxes is another, and being cooped up on a hot summer day is sometimes quite trying.

Kaulmanns' windows, with their everchanging beauties, are kept in order by a Pittsburg gentleman, Mr. John Werner, who commenced 15 years ago holding the hammer and tacks for Mr. Kaufmann, who did his own window trimming at that time. With Hugus & Hacke is to be found a very pleasant gentleman, by name A. G. ton, who from the Quaker City arrived about two years ago, and has found dressing Pittsburg windows for Pittsburg people such a pleasant and remunerative onstime that he intends sojourning here for he rest of his life. Fleishman & Co. have an artist in their store, and he has done some very effective work during the past week.

SOME OTHER WINDOWS. The People's Store, and windows have been essentially just what the name of the store signifies, and thoroughly appreciated during the last few days. Joseph Horne & Co., have only during the past year employed a professional window trimmer. Before they engaged Mr. James Crogan, a New York gentleman, to make their windows the models of beauty that they are, the head of each department kept his individual window in order. Mr. Cropan is an prove. He learned the business, what little he had to acquire, in New York, but native ability in that line makes his work a pleasure instead of a task. Numerous other stores and windows de-serve mention for their Easter display, but Allegheny County Deprived of a Valuable Citizen by His Death.

Edward Gregg, of the firm of Logan, Gregg & Co., who died at his home, Irwin avenue, Allegheny, late Friday night, was one of the foremost citizens of Allegheny county. He was a self-made man, so far as the control of circumstances which surrounded him justifies the use of the term.

He was always a leader in charitable enterprises, being one of the most active workers in securing the funds for the erec-tion of the Homeopathic Hospital, and he was among the first to contribute for the aid of Johnstown's afflicted. He was a successful business man and an honored citizen. He was 74 years of age, and leaves a wife and a number of grown children. Colonel Al Young Comes Out of the Furnace Without Smell of Fire.

Alderman Cassidy yesterday began the investigation of the cases of the men accused by the Pittsburg and Lake Erie Railway Company of selling liquor without license ning a plain, unpretentious drygoods box at Chartiers station. With the exception of Al Young the parties were not ready to go into a hearing, and all the cases except his were adjourned for a week.

Mr. Young's case was short and sweet. Perkins had made the mistake of supposing that Young was running a saloon on a boat, but Young speedily showed that he had not had any connection with the boat since last March a year ago, and the magistrate discharged the case at once.

MOLDERS TO

They Will Combine Their Forces Against Four Non-Union Shops.

THE OLIVER STRIKE IS SETTLED. Mr. Carnegie's Letter Received by the Central Trades Council. M. C. FRICK HAS NO FEAR OF A STRIKE

The machinery molders met last night in K. of L. Hall and decided to use the surplus money in the benefit fund in fighting the four non-union shops. The meeting comprised the members of the Iron Molders' Union No. 46 of North America, the International Brotherhood and L. A. 1030,

The report of the Strike Committee was submitted by Treasurer Thomas Wisdom. It showed that the committee had paid $5 per week to single and $7 per week to married men from October 7 to the last week in March. About $2,000 was paid the men. but all the men who were on the payrol are now at work. Several hundred dollars were left in the fund, and the committee recommended that the money be used in fighting the firms who still refuse to sign the scale in settlement of the strike.

The men struck for an advance of 10 per cent. There were 42 shops involved and as fast as the men secured the advance they agreed to pay it to the men who had not secured it, until all were paid the increase. Thirty-eight firms signed the scale inside of three weeks, but four firms still refuse to attach their signatures. They are Wharton McKnight, the Scale Foundry and Machine Company, the Steel Casting Com-pany and the Fischer Foundry and Ma-chine Company. The principal fight is being made on Mr. McKnight. He claims to be paying the 10 per cent advance but re-fuses to sign the card.

The workmen claim that as a matter of principle they must compel these firms to sign, in order to save them trouble in the future. The surplus money now in the fund will be used, and, if necessary, an assessment will be levied to carried on the fight to a finish. The union men will be taken out of the shops, and an effort will be made to induce the non-union men to stop work. If the fight cannot be won in any other way, it is likely there will be another strike, as the men are fully determined to

for a Cut in Mining Rates. The circular to labor leaders, issued by some of the coal operators, as published in THE DISPATCH of yesterday, excited considerable comment. A number of the other operators who are running company stores. stated that if they could get 10 cents per ton of a reduction in the price of mining, or even 5 cents, they would be willing to abolish the stores. Some of the operators look on the letter as a scheme to reduce the price of mining, and if that result can be uaranteed they will indorse it.

The New York and Cleveland Gas Coal

Company has no company stores. Last year their men allowed them a cut of 3 cents in mining; that is they worked for them for 70 cents, while other operators paid 73 cents. The difference, though slight, gave this com-pany somewhat of a handle, so their competitors claim at least.
Said an operator yesterday: "The com-

Chief Engineer George Price read his report. He recommended the adoption of the Chomson-Houston electric system, and there was no opposition, but the matter was left undecided. Messrs. GLEANINGS FROM ALL THE COURTS

Judge Slagle yesterday handed down an opinion in the case of the appeal of the Central poor district of Luzerne county from an order made by Aldermen Tatem and Mc-Kelvey, of Allegheny, for the removal of Bridget Barrett, a pauper, to Wilkesbarre. The woman is 23 years of age, and came from Belmullett, County Mayo, Ireland, in down furnaces, or for other reasons, have 1883 with her mother and younger sister. They came as "assisted emigrants," the testimony showing that their passage had been paid to Pittsburg by some one connected with the English Government. They came to Pittsburg, but in 1887 Mrs. Barrett went to Wilkesbarre to nurse a sick daughter, living with her until 1889.

Bridget, who was weak-minded, remained here, living with the Sisters of Mercy and afterward at the Home of the Good Shepherd in Allegheny, and then at the Pittsburg Poor Farm. Chief Elliot, o the Department of Charities, maintained that the girl should be kept where her mother had acquired a legal settlement, as the girl had acquired none, and the order for her removal to Wilkesbarre was made. The poor authorities there appealed from Judge Slagle, in his opinion, said that neither mother nor daughter had acquired a legal settlement anywhere, Mrs. Barrett being kept by her daughter, in Luzerne Therefore the girl would be supported by Pittsburg, where she first became a charge. Continuing, he said: "It is to be regretted that there is no power to return ese paupers to the authorities who thought cheaper to ship them to an inland city of this country than to perform the duty they owed to their suffering poor, and were mean enough to avoid their duty by imposing it on others who have no legal redress. But we are without such power, and Pittsburg must suffer the wrong thus unjustly in

In conclusion, the order of removal is vacated, and the costs placed on the city Pittsburg.

The couple were married in 1881 and lived in Beaver Falls, and shortly after began to disagree. The wife refused to wash the dishes, and he ate off unwashed ones. She took their infant to a tailor shop where he worked and left it in his care, refusing to mind it at home. When he demanded that she care for it, she tied it to a pump on the street and left it there. In the fall of 1883 she leit him, accusing him of intimacy with a Mrs. Hu'nagle. In her testimony the wife alleged that her husband was in the habit of kissing girls in his employ, even in her presence, and on one occasion he held both herself, and a Moss Annie Geieler, on his herself and a Miss Annie Geisler on his knee at the same time. W. J. Brennen, Esq., as counsel for I. R. Stayton, Mayor-elect Wyman's contestant, of Allegheny, filed a petition and made a motion before Judge Ewing yesterday, asking that the ballot boxes in the recent election be taken into the custody of the Court. At present they are in the Allegheny lockup, and, it is alleged, are under no special protection or care of anybody. F. S. Ben-net, counsel for Mr. Wyman, opposed the motion, saying that the new Mayor would take his seat on Monday, and if the motion was granted and the boxes taken away it would create an unflattering insinuat Judge Ewing interposed that no doubt Mr. Wyman would be glad to be relieved of their custody, but Mr. Bennet did not look at it that way. The motion was granted, however, and a rule was issued on Mr. Wyman to show cause why the decree should not be granted. It is returnable next Saturday.
