

IN THE COURT, Some Amusing Scenes Break the Monotonous Grind. AN APPLICANT GETS MAD And is Threatened with Punishment for Contempt. A WHACK AT THE WHOLESALERS.

Right under the shadow of the Court House, it is a disgrace to the city and to the members of the bar... How he would sell. Hugh McCutcheon, beer and ale bottler at No. 27 Second avenue, was closely questioned by Judge Ewing.

A LITTLE LIVELIER. SOME HEARINGS DEVELOP CONSIDERABLE EPIC. A Number of the Applicants Get Through Easily—Remonstrances Against Others on Account of Character—A Number of Withdrawals—A Spirited Hearing.

Money in the Business. Otto Frey, No. 7 Diamond square, said that he was in the business of wholesaling beer and wine... Max Friedman, No. 15 Market street, is another new applicant.

Sells His Own Liquors. A. Guckenhelm was kept long enough to name his partners and to say that he dealt only in his own liquors. John P. Goldberger, the old gentleman who keeps a cigar store at No. 1 Wood street, was refused a retail license.

Nothing special was developed by the examination of D. F. Dougherty, No. 21 Water street; Philip Hamburger, No. 23 Diamond street; Meyer Rosenblatt, No. 499 Ferry street; Otto Schmidt, No. 12 Diamond square; Schultz, Benzelhaus & Co., No. 19 Market street; Abel & Beech, No. 145 Water street; Chas. F. H. Bruning, No. 228 Second avenue; John Frisch, No. 18 Water street, and such like.

THE HEARING WAS THE longest and most amusing of the day. Mr. McGirr's objections and questions made the little applicant wild, and he danced about wildly, shook his hands under the lawyer's nose and talked a blue streak.
