the Senator Declares.

Senator Quay was vesterday enjoying the vernal breezes of the beautiful afternoon in the open doorway of his residence on College avenue, Beaver, when a representative of THE DISPASCH unloosed the latch of the gate, made his way to the Senator and received the genial greeting which Colonel Quay invariably accords on his own door

THE DISPATCH man went armed with a choice assortment of inquiries of a local State and national character. Senator Quay, however, with much justice. interposed the plea of a lack of intimate knowledge which would enable him to speak by the card. The following queries and answers indicate, however, that the junior Senator from Pennsylvania has not allowed the piscatorial phenomena of Southern waters to prevent him from keeping an eye upon what's in progress.

"Your famous remark about the National Republican Committee 'holding with a mailed hand the advantages gained' in the national election is now being recalled by those who wonder what will be done by courself and the National Committee to offset the Ohio gerrymander.' AS HE SEES IT.

"I think that it is beyond dispute that the National Committee has held all that was ained in the last campaign," was Senator Quay's restonse.

"Enthusiasts in the party are looking to you as its political leader for a policy which will retain the control of the House of Representaas its political leader for a policy which will letain the control of the House of Representatives."

"The policy will be forthcoming at the proper time. I have not had an opportunity to consult my colleagues on the National Committee as to the future. I have six received an urgent summons to Washington, and will probably return there to-morrow. I shall then be prepared, possibly, to express some opinion."

"It is rumored that the State Legislature of Pennsylvania will be called in special session
after the United States census enumeration, for the purpose of reapportioning the Congressional districts on the basis of increased population, and with the intention of relegating some Democrats to private life. Is there any foundation for the report, Senator?"

"What ont heard of it."

"Will Pennsylvania or other Northern States be cerrymandered?"

"Whatever the policy of the Republican party may be, it will hardly be modeled upon Democratic methods, past, present or prospective."

"What will be your response to Congressman

spective."
"What will be your response to Congressman
Dalzeil's latest gage of battle?"

CAN DO AS HE PLEASES. "So many have been thrown down that I nardly know to which you refer. He is welcome to conduct his battle after his own fashion." And then the Senator asked the news-paper man if he had ever read "Don Quixote" n Sparish. "Did you notice the note of discord sounded in this morning's DISPATCH by Wharton Bar-ker?" was next asked.

he to most more asked.

"Wharton is a perennial Barker," said the Senator, smiling grimly at his pun. "Mr. Barker and his protest have been features of every State campaign time out of mind. It may be fashionable to assail the Republican organizations in certain States, but it remains to be seen whether it is judicious. Pennsylvania will give an old-time Republican majority, no matter who may be the nominee. As to State or Allegheny county matters, I have no intention of being quoted. I shall probably find much unfinished work in Washington, and I feel in excellent mood for undertaking it. If you want to hear anything about fishing, I can talk upon that subject."

Southern 9,775, and was brought here by the Missouri Pacific Pittsburg agency for this special shipment. It was built for furniture and other bulky freight, and it is likely the cars will be used hereafter for the shipment of chimners. The car is 43 feet 3 inches long, 13 feet 3 inches high and 9 feet in width. The capacity of the car is 40,000 pounds. About 75,000 pounds of window glass could be put in it, but only one-fifth of this amount of lamp chimners could be shipped. The minimum weight on car loads of chimners is 16,009 pounds, and an ordinary car cannot hold this weight of chimneys. This will make the car valuable to shippers of glassware.

George A. Macbeth said yesterday that the prices on chimners were about 16 or 17 per cent lower than they had ever been before. Several factories, he said, had shut down on account of the poor condition of trade, and several more would follow their example.

Mr. Ross so fully convinced President Wimick that the band was all right, that the latter gentleman thought it unnecessary to look at the charter.

Rev. W. J. Holland Disagrees With Mr. C. L. Magee

He Thinks Mr. Carnegie's Views Should be Respected.

ON THE LIBRARY MATTER.

THE ORDINANCE IN DEEP WATER

Rev. W. J. Holland, of the Carnegie Library Commission, was seen at his residence yesterday evening, and in reply to the inquiry whether he had seen the interview with Mr. C. L. Magee, published in yesterday's DISPATCH, replied in the affirmative. He added: "I am sorry to see that Mr. Magee takes the position which he does. He is a thrifty politician, and generally takes pretty good care of his 'fences,' but in this case I fear that his desire to keep up the palings has led him a step too far. Thereby hangs a tale. "On February 10 an ordinance which had been prepared by Mr. John Lambie was introduced into Councils, accepting Mr. Carnegie's magnificent offer of the gift of $1 000,000 to the city of Pittsburg for the purpose of establishing a number of free libraries, and a central library building, which should have incorporated in it an art gallery, a museum, and accommodations for the learned societies of the city, founded for the purpose of promoting a knowledge of science and art. IN HARMONY WITH IT, "This ordinance, which was in thorough harmony with Mr. Carnegie's letter, was referred to a committee. It may be noted, in passing, that Mr. Carnegie's letter, by the terms of the ordinance, was incorporated with it and made a part thereof. In this form the ordinance was published in most there was a very general and widespread feeling of satisfaction among the citizens that affairs had so far progressed in such a manner, and that the Councils had met the large-hearted and generous philanthropy of our foremost citizen in the cordial and heartily appreciative manner in which so generous an offer deserved to be met. The committee to which the ordinance had been referred met on the 20th, and it was affirmatively recommended as prepared by Mr. "At this stage of the proceedings Mr. W. A. Magee appeared upon the scene of action as a legislator bent upon amendments. Repairing to the office of the City Clerk he demanded the ardinance, and receiving it, read it over, and left with it in his pocket, exclaiming as he did so: "This will not do;

AS IT WAS AMENDED. "The next day the bill was returned, with written in the handwriting of Mr. A. F.

we can't stand this.'

the following words; 'And any vacancies occurring in said Board of Trustees other than those caused by changes of the public officials, shall be filled by a majority of the remaining members of the Board." "On the 22d of February a meeting was held, and in five minutes the ordinance was reconsidered, the amendment adopted, and in the amended form the bill was affirmatively recommended and passed by Councils on the 24th of February. "It will be observed that this amendment to the ordinance is in conflict with the terms of Mr. Carnegie's letter, which, after designating certain officials of the city government, to the number of nine, who shall be members of the Board of Trustees, says: *To these I would add the names of 12 well-known citizens of Allegheny county, who should have power as a body, to provide for the re-election its members at stated times, and also to fill vacancies in their number. Mr. Carnegie, upon reading the ordinance in the form in which it had finally passed, quickly detected the incongruity between his original proposition and the amendment, and called attention to it at the first meeting of the Commission. He pointed out the fact that the discord between the terms of his letter and the final part of the ordinance might lead to embarrassment and complications.

INSISTED ON AMENDMENT. "The members of the City Government promptly arose and said that the ordinance should be at once amended so as to conform with Mr. Carnegie's letter, and deprecated the unintentional oversight. 'With the un-derstanding, then, that the ordinance shall be so amended,' said Mr. Carnegie, 'we will proceed to organize."

"Thus far the promise made to amend the ordinance by striking out Mr. Magee's amendment has not been fulfilled, and we now find Mr. Magee taking ground against the conditions which Mr. Carnegie has named. Mr. Magee says: 'I think, however, that Mr. Carnegie's proposition to change the form of the ordinance for acceptance is more or less a reflection whether intended or not, upon the capacity or the integrity of the city's representatives.' I ven ture the assertion that the only reflection which could possibly arise in the minds of those acquainted with all the foregoing facts is upon the wisdom of Mr. Magee in insisting upon the amendment of the original ordinance in such a manner as to cause it to become more or less incongruous in its provisions, and pave the way for misunderstandings and wordy conflicts.

"It is not for me to defend the author of 'Triumphant Democracy' from the inuendo contained in Mr. Magee's criticisms. He wields the pen of a ready writer, and by his words as well as actions, has proved himself most heartily in accord with our American forms of popular government, and in sympathy with our free institutions MR. CARNEGIE'S DEMANDS.

"Mr. Carnegie has neither intentionally nor unintentionally, directly or by fair im-plication, reflected either upon the capacity or the integrity of the representatives of the city government. He has simply demanded that the ordinance shall be restored to the shape in which it originally came from the hands of the representatives of the people, without Mr. Magee's additions and amendments added thereto. "Mr. Magee is a private citizen, he is not a member either of Select or Common Councils, and yet we find him venturing to extend the ægis of his protection at this mo-ment over both bodies. The fair-minded and intelligent citizen of this community ill ask what right, human or divine, has he so to pose, and what right has he to take city ordinances out of their pigeon holes and write in his own amendments, and then demand, when they are found to be crudely digested and incongruous in their provisions that they shall be retained.

"Mr. Magee says Mr. Carnegie's proposition is 'unfair,' in that it gives a perma-nent majority to Mr. Carnegie's representatives. The unfairness exists only in Mr. Magee's fancy. In creating a great institusuch as this, Mr. Carnegie has consulted precedents. He gives the institution to the people as theirs, he asks them to contribute to its support, because thus their interest in it will be assured, and when he comes to its erection and administration, he demands that a large number of their representatives in the City Councils shall have a voice in its management.

WHAT THEY'LL REPRESENT.

"But because the '12 well-known citizens of Allegheny county' whom Mr. Carnegie designates as the coadjutors of the city fathers do not happen to be members of the Council, does it follow from that that they are not representative men-or, if you please, represents tives of the people? They will possibly not at tives of the people? They will possibly not at all times represent Mr. Magee, but it is but fair to suppose that they will represent the intelligence and will of the people from among whom they come, and whose wishes and hopes and preferences they probably will be fully as able to ascertain and secure as those who happen to be for a year or two invested with Councilmanic honors. To confine the power to represent the people to councilmanic bodies is a logical fallacy.

"History has revealed to us that the representatives, so-called, of the people, have at times not fairly represented them at all. It certainly it to be gravely questioned whether Mr. Magee, who is only a private citizen, represents the people of Pittsburg in his factions antagonism to the conditions suggested by Mr. Carnegie. As I remarked before, Mr. Carnegie as undoubtedly not actuated by distrust of the representatives of the people or by the spirit of unfairness. Mr. Carnegie was moved by the consideration of precedents. With the exception of Allegheny, there is no city in this broad land where a trust, such as that created by Mr. Carnegie, is administered in the way Mr. Magee says he would have this administered. And there is reason for this.

NOT AT ALL STABLE. "Experience brings knowledge, and knowledge power. But councilmanic bodies are more or less fluctuating, and even the best men in such stations are liable to be unconsciously influenced by considerations which should not be paramount. Mr. Carnegie has, therefore, roposed to lift his noble gift to the people of proposed to lift his noble rift to the people of Pittaburg as far as possible out of the reach of those disturbing influences which might defeat his generous will.

"But the question is asked, why does Mr. Magee take this position? An answer may be found in the remark of his brother: "We can't stand this,' and in the remark made by another geutleman of the same circle: 'There is too much patronage here which is likely to go to waste. To save this precious perquisite of the politician, 'patronage,' the amendment was introduced; for, as was said by one of its advocates, with deaths and resignations occurring, we can vote the councilmanic contingent solid, and gradually work out the Carnegie crowd, and have things our own way." But if it is patronage' that seems to be the great issue in the mind of the practical politician, I can say that there need be no fear that a proper amount of it will be at the disposal of the proper parties. For my part, if the gentlemen representing the Councils have any special choice of a worthy sort in relation to the people who shall act as janitors, wash windows and handle books, I will not for a moment, as one of the commissioners, stand in their way, and I venture that the same may be said of all of my colleagues.

THEY MAY BE TRUSTED. "No, I repeat it, the representatives of the people may be trusted to do their duty if left to themselves, and I sympathize with the remark of Mr. Carnahan, reported in THE DIS-PATCH, that if there were less outside dicta-tion in this whole matter it would be better for all. I could much wish that Mr. Maree had of the papers of the city upon the following recognized that Mr. Carnegie, who offers the morning, and I venture the statement that city a million to-day, which he stands ready, if all goes well, to vastly increase, has some rights, and that it is not in good taste, to say the least, to 'look a gift horse in the mouth.'

"I like Mr. Magee. He is bright. He is in many respects a useful man. I do not like to take up a stick and 'go for him,' as I have done, but he is making a mistake, and if, by pursuing his course, he causes the citizens of Pittsburg to lose the chiefest benefaction which has been offered them since the foundation of the city, he will discover what the will of the people is as to himself, in a way he will remember to all eternity."

eternity. THE MAYOR'S POSITION. Mayor Gourley said yesterday, in speaking of the library question: "I am fully in accord with Mr. Magee's ideas on the subject, as expressed in The Dispatch. I think the question of uccession is one which should be gravely considered. Although at present the appointees of Mr. Carnegie have a perfect right to a majority representation, as it is his funds the commission will handle, not those of the city, and until the building is completed and turned over to the city, of course the city representatives could not expect to control the matter, but, nevertheless, I think the city is entitled to an equal voice in the arrangement of affairs, even in the preliminary arrangements. I concur with Mr. Magee's ideas thoroughly,"

George L. Holliday, Chairman of Common Council, and also a member of the Labrary Commission, said he had read the ideas expressed by Mr. Magee in THE DISPATCH vesterday morning, and was very glad he had exsidered. Although at present the appointees terday morning, and was very glad he had ex-pressed the opinion entertained by so many people, and in such a definite manner. He thought that, whether through design or acci-dent, a slight was put upon the city through its representatives, and the whole course of the commission had been one which indicated a steady purpose to ignore the city's rights in the

R. B. Carnahan again protested that he would say nothing, but thought the commission as organized was thoroughly well-qualified to per-form the functions required. from the ordinance as passed. There is considerable feeling expressed as to the manner in which the city, through its representatives, has been treated in the matter, and from the consensus of opinion obtained it is more than probable that no change will be made. A BOY BADLY CUT UP.

The Outcome of a Fight That May Prove Fatal to a Lad. Yesterday morning Lawrence Breitweiser, a 15-year-old boy, employed as finisher at Hogan, Evans & Co.'s chimney factory, at the head of South Twenty-second street, was seriously injured by Maurice Nichols. A quarrel arose be-tween young Breitweiser and Junker, another boy. Junker struck the former in the face. Breitweiser pluckily retaliated. Then Nichols, the man under whom young Junker works, leaped into the arena, and savagely beat and kicked Breitweiser, who fell into the box of glass, cutting his right hand and severing an kicked Breitweiser, who fell into the box of glass, cutting his right hand and severing an artery.

The boy was removed to the Southside Hos-pital, where it was found that, beside the injury to his arm, which may prove fatal, his hips and legs are badly bruised and swollen. Breit-weiser's father went before Alderman Flach and entered information against Nichols. He was at once arrested and entered builfore and entered information against Nichols. Negro Who Acknowledges Having Cut a Man in Pitteburg. Shortly after 9 A. M. to-day an officer will leave Pittsburg to take back an old offender from the tender care extended by the Wheeling officials under advice by wire from Inspector McAleese. He forwarded a request to arrest William Reed, colored, on a charge of larceny, and the Wheeling officers secured a brawny looking darkey answering the deorawny looking darkey answering the de-scription sent. The prisoner at first denied with great stress that he was implicated in any larceny case, but afterward admitted under pressure that he had been concerned in a cut-ting case in Pittsburg a short time ago. The police authorities of Pittsburg last night telegraphed to hold the man, and he agrees to return without a requisition.

SETTLING THE GLASS SCALE.

The Pressed-Ware Branch Was Arranged Yesterday-No Trouble Expected. A conference between the table-ware class manufacturers and the Scale Committee of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union was held yesterday in the rooms of the former in the Stevenson building. It took all day to settle the pressed-ware scale. A great eliminations and additions were made, but nothing of importance was changed. The engravers' scale will be tackled to-day, and to-morrow they will try to settle the iron-mold list. No trouble is expected to result from the probable changes. Several of the changes wanted by the manufacturers will have to go before the annual convention of delegates of the American Flints in June.

It is said that what is alleged to be standerous in the publication had its origin in the late political contest in the borough.

A Cyclone Sweeps Over Pennsylvania Railroad Conductors.

TAKING OFF MANY OF THE MEN.

The Others Anxiously Awaiting the Light-ning's Next Attack.

WHAT THE VICTIMS HAVE TO SAY A thunderstorm which has been gather. ng in railroad circles for the past two months, has burst in all its force. The lightning has already struck 14 heads in Pittsburg, and it is not known just how many more at other points. Every conduc tor on all of the lines of the Pennsylvania Company is quaking in his shoes, and some are even handing in their resignations, in the full knowledge that if they do not they will be requested. The discharged men are the oldest, the most trusted, and most popular conductors on the lines. The cause of the storm is given in a speech which General Passenger Agent E. A. Ford gave utterance to in outlining his policy. He is reported to have said: "It is bad policy to keep a passenger conductor in that capacity for more than three or four years. By that time they be-come too well acquainted with the travel-ing public and know too well how to knock

SOME OF THE CHARGES. He also claimed that conductors on through trains were carrying traveling mer for less than the full fare, and dividing up with the company. Pursuant to this, spotters were put on the through trains. Where a full fare would be $4, the spotters worked the sympathetic racket. They told conductors they only had $2. They accompanied this statement with a pitiful tale, and some of the most generous conductors were caught. The result was that two conductors were summarily dismissed. conductors were caught. The result was that two conductors were summarily dismissed. In order to follow out the already outlined policy of the Passenger Department of the Pennsylvania Company, brakemen, flagmen and geight conductors were called from their posts to attend the conductors' school in Pittsburg. This was done about six weeks. In Philadelphia, it is understood, the same plan was followed. This alarmed all the conductors, and they naturally asked themselves the question: "Where are all these new men to be placed?" They started their inquiries, and learned the policy adopted by Mr. Ford. They feared to say anything, and each hoping that the lightning would not hit him, kept silent. Spotters were placed on every train, and each conductor was kept under constant surveillance. The result was that the spotters handed in to the officials a list of 180 conductors whom they accuse of having carried passengers free.

they accuse of having carried passengers free.
They have also handed in long lists of men who are accused of "knocking down." They are said to have even gotten ahead of the company with the duplex receipts which they are compelled to give whenever a cash fare is taken. A SPRINGTIME STORM. The gentle springtime was chosen as the time for the sacrifice, and, with its coming, off wen the heads of Conductors Gilson, Whipple and Sharpless, of the Eric and Pittsburg road. On the same line Samuel Vance anticipated the officials by handing in his resignation. They were all the oldest men on the line, and had the respect and confidence of all the people who traveled over the road. They were given no reason for their discussion.

respect and confidence of all the people who traveled over the road. They were given no reason for their dismissal.

The storm then struck the Chicago division, and the head of Pat Travis, a conductor of 25 years' experience, fell into the basket. From there the tornado jumped to the Wayne division, and conductors Gruber. Gray and Jackson saw their positions vanish like the fog before the wind. Gray and Gruber especially were regarded as leaders in railroading, and are well known by all people on through trains on the Ft. Wayne. Gruber had been handling the punch for 23 years. Gray vied with him in dexterity, after an experience of 23 years, while Jackson bad worn the blue and the silver buttons for 15 long years.

Then the cyclone took a sudden twist and struck the through trains running from Pittsburg to Crestline. Jolly Captain Jack Day, who has courteously handed ladies down to the platform for 20 years, and who did not have an enemy among the passengers that were under his charge, fell the first victim. He was asked to turn in his cap and keys on Monday. Following him was John Reed, who went on No. 3 and came back on No. 10. He met his fate a few minutes after Captain Day got "his medicine." The next man was William Smith, a staid old man who has given the best years of his life in the service of the company.

who has given the best years of his life in the service of the company. PASSED THE UNLUCKY NUMBER. For fear the unfortunates would become scared at their only being 13 in number, it was reported last night that Conductor John Bacon had joined the list and raised it to 14.

The conductors all over the lines feel that the storm has just gotten warmed up for its work, and that heads will fall right and left for the next few weeks.

One of the freight conductors, who is to be promoted to a passenger train, when asked about the matter said he did not care to make the change, as he could only hold it for three or four years, and he would not want to come back to a freight train after that.

When asked why he did not believe he could not retain the position more than four years, he feared official thunder and said he could not tell. had joined the list and raised it to 14.

A number of the conductors who were dis-A number of the conductors who were dismissed were spoken to yesterday, and they all had one opinion, that the storm was the result of Mr. Ford's policy. One of them said: "The transportation department is filled with practical men who conduct affairs on a scientific basis. The passenger department, on the other hand, is run completely on theory. The department is made up of clerks and college graduates who want to air opinions. The system of having schools for conductors does not give any practical benefits. They learn something there about the tickets, and then start out with a pencil behind each ear, a punch in one hand and bunch of tickets in the other. They are not students of human nature, and do not have any practical knowledge of handling trains.

"The men who have been discharged are all "The men who have been discharged are all old and experienced men. They were all on through trains, and the charge that they have been stealing is nonsense. On those trains there is not enough cash fares to make it worth while to attempt to steal. People on such trains will buy tickets for long trips because when they pay on the train they have to give the full 3 cents a mile, while if they buy tickets they can travel for much less. We know there have been spotters, and while there may be some black sheep among the conductors we know there are worse men acting as spotters.

"We have met a number of conductors from other divisions, and they are all waiting for the storm to burst in other localities. None of the old men expect to retain their positions.

meeting of the committee.

It is given out in certain quarters that O'Shea resigned his position as President of the committee on account of the many troubles he has been getting into. This is denied by other members of the committee, who say Dempsey was chosen to succeed him. The real object for which the committee was organized has been lost sight of for several months in the shuffle between O'Shea and the K. of L. Got Promptly to Work. Dr. J. G. McClandless held a post mortem on Di Pauli at the morgue, and found two slight knife wounds in his back. He believed he died of inflammation of the bowels, and not from any external injury. Reffsa, however, died from an abscess of the brain, caused by a scalp wound. Reffsa was cut and hit on the head with a stone. The prisoners were identified as the ones who did it by Francisce Di Pauli, and the inquest was adjourned until Friday afternoon. A. M., where the requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Wall.
