THE STORY OF CAIN.

Dr. Geo. T. Purves Tells the Tale in a New and Original Manner.

CRIME TRACED TO ADAM'S FALL.

A Valuable Source of Theology Touched on by Rev. E. P. Cowan.

OTHER PULPIT TOPICS OF YESTERDAY

The story of Cain is imparted a new interest when delineated with such fidelity to the master passions of the human mind as Dr. Purves portrayed in his sermon of last evening at the First Presbyterian Church. A large congregation was in attendance. The text was from the fourth chapter of Genesis, the thirteenth verse: "And Cain said unto the Lord: 'My punishment is greater than I can bear.'"

Dr. Purves painted the descent of the stream of sin upon the new-born world and its newly created inhabitants as the logical sequence of the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden. Not only so, but the demonstration of the awful human passions of jealousy and anger was all the more significant because the murderous consummation took place in the offspring of the first human couple. The inevitable conclusion is that that great crime was the legitimate fruit of the sin of Adam and Eve. Dr. Purves maintained that the passions which found a vent in the killing of Abel had been in a measure restrained by the awful moral drawn so early in the history of the world.

A vivid picture was drawn of the opposite types of character presented by the brothers. Cain was depicted as moody, rebellious, revengeful. He considered the expulsion of his parents from Paradise as an act of gross injustice and evidently meditated schemes of reprisal. Abel was of an imaginative dispostion and gentle in his ways and manners. Cain was lazy and slothful and willingly adopted the life he led as a husbandman, depending upon nature to do his work. Abel was glad to find constant responsibilities in the care of his sheep. The opposite nature of the brothers was also shown in their sacrifices to the Most High. To this day the division of the bad and good in human nature was upon the same lines.

Continuing, Dr. Purves graphically related the story of the crime that stained the first pages of history. Taking up Cain's agonized complaint that the punishment imposed for his crime was beyond his endurance, a strong moral was leveled at the heads of those who do wrong and then seek to evade the consequences of their sins. Cain's modern prototypes were described as being numerous, but their punishment for all degrees of crime certain to be meted out.

PUNISHMENT IN THE FUTURE.

Rev. W. S. Williams Discusses It From a Universalist Standpoint.

Rev. W. S. Williams, of the Christ Universalist Church, preached last evening on "Future and Endless Punishment," taking as his text, Proverbs xi, 21: "Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished; but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered." The Christian church, said the speaker, was now divided into two main branches. One branch believed in an endless state of torment, an endless separation from God. This was the conservative branch—the branch that refused to march with the spirit of the times. There was another branch, however, and this was the liberal one, to which Universalists belonged. Liberal Christians scoffed at the existence of hades; at least of an eternal one. As to the idea that Universalists did not believe in future punishment, that was altogether false.

What was punishment, anyhow? God and man both exercised the power of punishment. Why did man punish? To deter from crime, or to give a lesson to his fellow man. Incidentally, we should note that no man had the right to capitally punish his fellow "as an example to the world." When we gave pain for pain, we committed a crime. Wrong added to wrong did not make right, in spite of the United States Government. We had no right to act in revenge. Revenge was a crime. The Government had begun to realize that capital punishment did not deter man from crime. Their executions came off in secret. Thus no example was given to the world, and no good was done; nor the man executed could not benefit much by his own death. Why were we supposed to execute punishment? For an end! A punishment without an object was a crime—a flagrant wrong. All pain inflicted by us should have a purpose. Now, ought that purpose to be an injurious one? Ought the end in view to be an evil one? Assuredly, no! The end should be beneficial, else the punishment were not just.

Now, admitting that God punishes in the future, must we not also admit that he punishes for a purposes? Else he was not a reasonable being. And must we not also own that God punishes for a good purpose? Else he was a being of evil nature. Yes, undoubtedly, if we were Christians we should admit that future punishment was inflicted for good, and that its end must be a good end. Now, as to the alleged endless punishment, could that which is endless have an end beyond the thing done? Could an endless thing have an end? If it always continued, it could have no result. Punishment without a purpose was wanton pain, and wanton pain inflicted upon any creature was a flagrant wrong.

SPIRITUAL ARCHITECTURE.

The Address by Rev. C. E. Locke at Smithfield M. E. Church.

"A Point in Spiritual Architecture" was the subject of Rev. C. E. Locke's discourse in the Smithfield M. E. Church last night. The church was filled to its utmost capacity, and the reverend gentleman's address was received with marked attention. He showed that the building of the spirit must be founded on the Rock of Christ. All other foundations were unreliable as the sand spoken of in the parable. When the great Daniel Webster was dying he made no Bunker Hill monument oration. One of the most eloquent statesman the country ever produced, he asked that the Twenty-third Psalm be read to him and he died listening to the comforting word "The Lord is my shepherd and I shall not want."

With the coming of Christ the new temple was erected, and He said the old one would never be rebuilt. He who believes in nothing is founded upon nothing, and he whose foundation is upon temporalities is insecure. Base your spiritual building upon the solid rock, the word of God. Come back you who have removed from that foundation and stand upon the sands which the floods of temptation may sweep you to destruction; come back to the hillside where you are sheltered. Come to the solid and secure foundation of Christ Himself.

WORLDLINESS IN RELIGION.

Dr. E. P. Cowan Argues That It Is a Valuable Source of Theology.

Rev. E. P. Cowan, D. D., pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, preached last night on "The nobility and need of true worldliness, and the folly of any other kind." He said that all Christians owe a duty to the world and in a sense should be worldly. All men have much to do with the world. All men can do well to study the works of nature—the mysterious workings of the world. "This is one of our sources of theology," said Dr. Cowan.

The Christian should study the world and its history, so as to be able to know and understand the verdict which history has placed upon this or that system of falsehood in regard to Christianity. The Christian should be acquainted with the people of the world and how they live. It is the business of one-half the people to know how the other half lives. The Christian should be the world's friend, and the best friends the world has are consecrated to God. The Presbyterian Church last year spent $12,000,000 for the benefit of the world.

THE EXILES AT BABYLON.

First of the Series of Sermons on the Captivity of Israel's Children.

Rev. John H. Prugh preached the first of a series of sermons on "The Captivity" last night at the Grace Reformed Church. His special subject was "The Exiles." He described Babylon as it was at the time when the children of Israel were carried there as captives. There is nothing there now in the way of monuments to mark the spot; there are no outward signs of its past greatness. The temple of Baal surpassed all others ever erected for the worship of any God. It was the seat of influence for the Hebrew race.

Mr. Prugh then took up the children of Israel and dwelt upon their captivity and incarceration. He pictured their sufferings. They were subjected to to the oppressions of the people of Babylon; they were scourged, whipped, and even put to death. Their sufferings as a church and as a people were such that there was a constant wail. But their deliverer came, as will also a deliverance come to those who in this present day undergo sufferings for God's sake.

GOD IS LOVE.

Pastor-Elect Appleworth's Ideas of the Attributes of the Almighty.

At the Fourth Avenue Baptist Church last evening Rev. H. C. Appleworth, the pastor-elect, preached an eloquent sermon. The text was John iii: 16. God's attributes had been a subject for controversy through all time. The Greeks, the Romans, the more barbarous pagans, and the Hebrews all had different ideas of the supreme being. It was reserved for the Christians to truly define what God was.

In the words of the man who had lain upon the heart of Jesus, in the words of John the Evangelist, God was love. All powerful, all knowing, all his terrible faculties were steeped in love for us.

MADE A POLICEMAN MAD.

Magistrate Hyndman Discharges a Prisoner That Officer Cross Wanted Held—A Rather Remarkable Scene Follows—Some of the Comments on the Case.

At the police station matinee yesterday there was one scene not contemplated in the original programme, which occurred through a change being made in the stage manager, J. B. Hyndman presiding instead of John Gripp. The newly-appointed Police Magistrate Leslie was present as a spectator. The case in point was the arrest of four known hard characters named Frank Coyle, Thomas Moran, Ed Steele and Joseph Armstrong, who were acting suspiciously around Grant street yesterday morning. They were cornered after a chase in Clark's court by Officer Cross and held as being implicated in the recent Hill robberies. The first of the quartet to face the music yesterday morning was Frank Coyle, who was promptly discharged by Magistrate Hyndman. The charge preferred by Officer Cross was vagrancy, so as to hold the men until witnesses could be procured to show their complicity in the robberies. The officer testified to Coyle's habits of loafing around the streets, never working, but annoying respectable citizens, but the officer grew angry at the discharge of the prisoner, and remarked that he had three other thieves locked up, but that if they were all going to be liberated he would wait for Magistrate Gripp's return before presenting the cases.

Magistrate Hyndman reproved the officer for his manner of addressing him, and giving Officer Cross notice that he would be reported to Chief Brown left the station house.

It has been arranged now that Assistant Superintendent O'Mara will appear against the prisoners this morning. They are all well known to the police officials of the First district.

Inspector McAleese would say nothing of the merits of the case in point, as the complaint, if made, would be in the hands of Chief Brown. He thought the officer's opininion of known bad characters should have weight in the courts, as the police are directed to keep track of such people, and to discourage the officers by discharging prisoners without making a thorough investigation would have a tendency to demoralize the force.

An East End officer said, in speaking of the case, that the men of the Second district were preparing a petition to Mayor Gourley not to reappoint Magistrate Hyndman, as he was in the habit of discharging prisoners who had to be recaptured in order to prove their guilt and rid the community of a surplus criminal population.

There were 35 cases disposed of altogether in the police court yesterday morning, ten of which were sent to the workhouse.

Fashionable Clothes

Should be as honest and sterling in fabric as they are stylish in appearance. Such are the characteristics of the boys' and children's suits designed and made by Messrs. Brokaw Bros., of New York. This spring's makes are unusually attractive in appearance, and the little fellows will never look better than when dressed in one of this firm's short pant suits. Nothing else gives a fine boy a more pleasing appearance; and certainly no other make of clothes can outwear these.
