Since the convention in 1888, there has been a continual organization of new local assemblies, and a general reorganization of old ones, which, at some time or other, had left the ranks. In speaking of the affairs of the order and of the work accomplished, General Secretary John W. Hayes said this evening:

"I favor the nomination of Senator McAlister to the vacant seat of the Sixth ward to-night. He has a fine record, and I think that the nomination should be tendered him. While I have opposed him in the past when he was a candidate for public office, I am now in favor of his nomination because of my belief that he would properly represent the district."

BREWERS MUST PAY.

The Court Decides That the Legislator Can Classify Manufacturing Companies—The Taxation Act of 1885 is Therefore Still in Force.

PHILADELPHIA, April 18.—Several places in the State, representing a capital of nearly $5,000,000, filed appeals from the settlements against them for tax on capital stock on the ground that they were entitled to exemption from the same as other manufacturing corporations, under the Constitution. Among the complaining companies was the Germania Brewing Company, which had been organized in 1885 as a manufacturing company, and was exempted from taxation, and that therefore the proviso in the act of 1885, which provided that companies which manufactured liquor or gas, was void for want of uniformity. "But," says the Court, "the conclusion does not follow. The constitution declares that taxes shall be levied on a given class, and therefore, if the class embraces all manufacturing companies, the conclusion would rather be that the exemption would nullify the tax. The exemption and this would leave the defendant with all other manufacturing companies, just where it was put by the act of 1879."
