IWRITTEN FOR THE DISPATCE. I was in a New York newspaper office vesterday, and as I looked at the poor toiling editors, sitting up there in that tenthstory room wearing out their brains in efforts to mold public opinion, I thought what uneventful lives are theirs, and what little fun they have compared to what I used to gage on a weekly newspaper. When I started in my erratic editorial career, I didn't know a proof sheet from a career, I didn't know a proof sheet from a boovolopus nor a Gordon press from a horned jimplicute. But I had great faith in my ability to do almost anything from riding a bucking brenche to writing an essay on "The Origin of Man." I was, indeed, quite popular with myself. I had also some success in persuading other people to trust in me, as you may well suppose when I tell you that after I had run the to trust in me, as you may well suppose when I tell you that after I had run the paper for three years the man who had the lien on the concern said that I was one of the most promising youthlets he had ever met, and that if I lived long enough he thought I would be able eventually to live —At Reliance has been missing nearly a Reliance has been missing nearly and four play is feared. thought I would be able eventually to lift the mortgage about a foot. I met success, but, as usual, success was going the other way. What I wanted was success that was

WHERE THE DIFFERENCE LIES. To resume, what I wanted to tell you was about the difference between the life of the New York journalist and that of the frontier newspaper man. The New York journalist sleeps in Harlem or New Jersey, and lunches at the Astor House or some such restaurant, where he climbs upon a high stool, eats clams and floods his inner works with slate colored coffee. It he buys stimulants or eigars, he is usually asked to pay for them himself. [This is an outrage un-known to the newspaper man in the West.] There is no "old subscriber" to come into his office, with the perfume of new-mown hay "hanging around him still," and pour a bushel of prize apples at the foot of the editorial tripod; no candidate for constable or pound master to rush into his sanctum and pleasantly interrupt his toil by planting a demijohn on his blotting pad. Neither is there anyone who feels it his duty to come in, accompanied by a gun, and vary the monotony of his daily labors.

When I started my paper out in Texas I had associated with me a partner who, to this day, says that on the following weeks after the first five issues of the paper I had to make an average of six abject apologies a week. The first week I received the fol-

You know me and my canabilities. Do you think I would be justified in running for the Texas Legislature? Enclose stamp for answer. Yours, John P. Simmons.

No one spoke.

THE USUAL GRIND WENT ON. I worked away at an article on "The Religious Condition of Europe," although I knew that my time bad come. My partner FREE—TO-MO kept on melting the pied type from the hell-box in a crucible from which every Wednesday we made our weekly supply of bullets, and Primus Tucker was absorbed at his desk in making out the revised statement of

"Are you all dumb?" said the man at the Full life-size crayon only $3. The rival editor, with whom Primus Tucker afterward went into partnership, published the statement that, at this point, I crawled behind a barrel of printers ink. As we only used two pounds of ink a year I never considered it necessary to vindicate joy.

myself on this point. "Didu't you get my letter sayin' I was comin'?" said the Nemesis, as he advanced one step into the room.

Everything was so quiet you could have head a thunder clap. Just then my partner, who had been sidling toward a window, dropped out of that orifice into the alley, and skipped down the street bag and bag-gage, book, line and sinker, foot horse and artillery, and ran a thousand yards to the back o the Baptist church faster than a man could fall from a balloon. But nobody spoke.

HORSE OF ANOTHER COLOR. "See here! Goldern the thing, I writ you that I was comin' down from Pecos county to arrange to be your sgent there, and to take subscriptions includin' premiums, and I want to know didn't you git no letter from me or are you jist a lot of d-d fools?"

Primus Tucker and I spoke. We said: "Colonel, pardon us, we were busy, we thought you were somebody else. Come out with us and take something while we arrange our business."

I sot; sometimes the really injured party called. When I wrote of our most prominent desperado as having recently had "a parenthesis of sobriety," he called early. He called early and he staved long. When he left the forms were pied, there were sev-eral bullet holes in the pine dry goods box that I used as an escritoire, the lye, ink and paste were scattered around in a way that week. would have destroyed our ingrain carpet, but fortunately we didn't have one. Yes, when he lest there was nothing but chaos and bullet marks to show where he had been. The office was empty and I was sitting behind a rock three miles up the gulch. But those were pleasant times and there was always something to vary the monotony.

If it wasn't a shot in the leg for calling my ternal decoration. cotemporary "the subsidized organ of a political clique," it was "Old Subscriber," "Vindex" or "Taxpayer," coming to subsidize us to announce him for County Judge, by presenting us with a leg of veal.

HAD ITS LITTLE DRAWBACKS. Yes, indeed, there is no comparison be-tween the fun the Western editor has and what the monotony is that the treadmill was back there now hunting jack rabbits getting into difficulties with the Legislature and trying to get Mose Schaumberg to give me an overcoat and take payment in an adrertisement. Of course, there were some unpleasant quandaries one got into occa-sionally. For instance, when a desperado came in and cleaned out the office, I often was in quite a dilemma as to whether I should denounce his act in the next paper, and, as a result, retire to an early grave, or But anyhow, those were good old days and I would have been there yet if it hadn't been that in my enthusiasm I once referred to our Sheriff as a man with a nose "like a scarlet runner." I said more than that. It was quite an article, and he came in next day, full of revenge, whisky and potted ham, and, with his bowie, he cut out the article—three quarters of a column of long primer type—and told me to eat it.

And I ate it. That's the reason I came East. I never could bear to stay in a community where I had to eat my own words.

But didn't we have fun, anyhow, in that hilarious Western past?

J. Armoy Knox.
