

MAY COME TOGETHER.

Mr. Carnegie Arrives to Settle the Public Library Tangle.

LITTLE TROUBLE IS ANTICIPATED.

An Informal Conference Held With the Citizens' Contingent.

ILL TO TALK IT OVER TO-MORROW

Mr. Carnegie is in the city, and will stay here a few days to straighten out the library tangle. He slipped into town very quietly, and his presence was not generally known until he had been here several hours.

In accordance with the terms of the invitation, there was nothing formal in the discussion. It was merely a free-and-easy exchange of ideas regarding the location and government of the library. Mr. Carnegie strongly favors the Bedford avenue site for the main building, and in this he was sustained by a majority of the gentlemen present.

Mr. Carnegie will meet the Library Committee of Councils this afternoon for a conference, and on Wednesday the whole commission will meet to take formal action on the ordinance which will be presented to Councils.

Mr. Carnegie will stay in town the rest of this week, and feels confident that the library project will be smoothly under way before he leaves.

Railroads Requested to Rush Through a Little of the Latter.

A WET-WEATHER PROPHECY.

The Predicted Two Years' Moisture in September, 1888—He Has Now $6 Per Cent and is Secretly Confident of the Whole.

Since September, 1888, there has been no drier of the most prods of this century and those who have been hoping against hope and praying for fair weather have abandoned themselves to dumb despair and rheumatism.

The worst part of the outlook is the discovery of an 85-year-old prophet who seems able to prophesy. His name is Tyson, and he lives near Philadelphia. It is stated that last fall, years ago he predicted two years' wet weather, and he still holds to the opinion expressed then.

Judge Fetterman observes that we have had one of the most prods of this century, and that there is a possibility of a change of ideas regarding the location and government of the library.

HE ADMIRES HIS OWN.
