OFFICER CROSS VICTIM MAY DIE. In Case He Does the Ex-Pelleeman Will Be Arrested.

Joshua Nuttall, the man who was shot by Officer Cross at Glenwood, on the night of April 12, is still at the hospital. It was reported yesterday that the man was dead, but this was found to be untrue, although he is in a critical condition. Inspector Me-Aleese thought the man's condition such that it was necessary to apprehend Cross, the colored police officer, who was suspended at the time of the shooting.

If Nuttall dies, Gross will be arrested and a charge of murder made against him by the Inspector. The latter had De-tective Shore working on the case yesterday. The bullet has been extracted from the left

CAUGHT SHOOTING CRAPS.

A Party of Petty Gamblers Gobbled Up by the Police.

The space on the Monongahela wharf, under the Baltimore and Ohio Depot, has been the resort for all kinds of tough characters lately. Yesterday Detective Fitzgerald was sent to investigate. He found six men and boys playing craps and poker, and by his presence kept others from locating there. The crap shooters and poker players were arrested and taken to Central Station, where they registered for a hearing this morning.

THE BOOM IN KENTUCKY.

How Investment to Encouraged and Furthered at Ashland-Logs to be Bought Without Risk-The Coming Sale. Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette, I

Kentucky for several weeks was telling on 'Change yesterday about the boom at Ash-land and the confidence and activity prevailing there since the Ashland Improvement Company began to develop the place by buying out the John Means interest. "I bought a lot on speculation," he said, "and got terms that show how much confidence the agents there have in the future of the place. I paid one-third cash, and got my title bond without making any notes for the deferred payments. There is no personal liability for the deferred payments, and if I sell my lot for an increased price the purchaser gets my title bond and has no personal liability. There is a great deal of difference between this plan and giving promissory notes, which come back to plague you if the person to whom you make a sale should default in his payments. It gives every man with small means a good gash. They were confounded when the sack was opened and a live goose flew from the top of the bridge to the water below. The printers had no knowledge of without having his other property held liable for results. The lot is its own se-curity. It shows that the people of Ashland and the new company have lots of faith in their own town when they take the property itself as sufficient security, because it shows they believe it will advance in

The prospector was Mr. John T. Broad-nax, of Philadelphia. He said Ashland was busy with signs of activity. Streets are being graded, street car lines building, work progressing on several new manufacturing establishments, the big botel crowded with visitors, many sleeping on cots, and every-thing was lively. "All Eastern Kentucky thing was lively. "All Eastern Kentucky is booming," he said, "but Ashland takes the cake. If the letters pouring in there mean business, the big sale of lots on May 20 will bring a tremendous crowd of people to buy. I was shown letters from Dakota, Michigan, New York, Ohio and all the States surrounding. From Ashland south-west to Middlesborough, Kentucky is about to enter upon a career of wonderful development, which will be of great benefit to the country. Pennsylvania and Ohio do not want to see the iron interest transferred away off to Alabama, leaving a gulf between. The natural course of development is through the great coking coal field of Eastern Kentucky, and with Ashland guarding one end and Middlesborough the other, Kentucky has two strong points of beginning. Ashland is a very successful iron town, and will soon have a great steel plant. In all other respects it is growing wonderfully, and the Northern people at the sale on May 20 will see in Ashland something to surprise them, if they have the usual idea of Southern towns. Ashland is like a Northern town, and has the largest proportion of manufacturing population in Kentucky."

Improved Service on the B. & O. The progressiveness of the present man-agement of the B. & O. R. R. Co. is still further evidenced by the recent improvements in their passenger train service from Pittsburg. Under the schedule taking effect May 11, the day express leaving Pittsburg at 8:00 A.

M. will be run as a separate and independent train, and the entire train, including baggage cars, day coaches and Pullman parlor car, will be run through to Baltimore via Washington, making close connection at Washington with parlor car train for Phila-

On the same date the Western express, leaving Pittsburg at 7.05 A. M., becomes a solid train, equipped with Pullman Buffet parlor car, the entire train running through from Pittsburg to Cincinnati without change via Wheeling, Zanesville and Columbus.

And the Amusement it Caused at the Hand Street Bridge.

The old Hand street bridge, in recent years called the Ninth treet bridge, is rapidly disappearing, one timber after another giving place to iron beams and rods. It is the oldest bridge across either of the rivers here, and is therefore the patriarch deserving respect. Two other bridges were built before it was, but they have been long torn down and replaced by suspension structures.

by fire, the bridge went up in flames and smoke, and was succeded by Mr. Roebling's suspension bridge. The wooden bridge over the Allegheny lasted 40 years, when the present Sixth street bridge took its place.

STORY OF A BIG HOAX. The Hand street bridge was the scene of a

The affair occurred on Monday, August 31, 1846. It originated from an article written by J. Herron Foster, then the editor f the DISPATCH, describing a flying machine invented and nearly completed by a Mr. Trouberg, of Birmingham, which was to be exhibited in public in a very short time. The machine and its inventor, if they ever existed, disappeared, and Mr. Foster and the fiving machine became the objects night following the dinner three of THE DISPATCH compositors, Oscar McClelland, Dave McCreary and Hen Balsley printed and posted about the city handbills announcing that Mr. Trouberg, having completed his flying machine, would give a public display of its powers from the top of the Hand street bridge on the following A prospector who has been in Eastern THOUSANDS WERE SOLD. On that day the three printers went to the river to see the crowd and enjoy the result of their sell. The impression that none but the inventor and his intimate friends would be permitted on the promenade left that de-sirable position comparatively free. Every available point on both banks of the river was occupied, and the surface of the stream swarmed with rowboats. The crowd was estimated at nearly 10,000.

While the three printers were enjoying the affair hugely laughing at the auxiety of this appropriate climax, but they joined in the yells of the multitude as the goose went flapping into the water. Ralph Jackson, a well-known citizen, and John Plankerton, a steamboat pilot, feeling certain that the thing was a hoax, had bought the goose on their way to the bridge. When it reached the water it was chased by a number of boats. Little Alec Murray, a steamboat steward, captured the bewildered bird. On the next trip of the Clipper No. 2 he gave the goose to J. H. Green, the reformed gam-

LOW TAXES

A gratifying feature of the place. The opening of the Reynoldton and Dravosburg bridge has caused a regular boom in Dravosburg. Workingmen who desire to own their own home generally look to the advantages and disadvantages of a place before investing. The easiest manner in which a workingman can secure a home is to secure a lot in a desirable plan, and he can build a house thereon and pay for it as easy as paying rent.

THE NEW RISHER PLAN OF LOTS AT DRAVOSEURG IS JUST THE PLACE FOR SUCH AN INVESTMENT, BEUAUSE THE TAXES ARE SMALL, BEING ONLY 10 MILLS. It is almost a portion of the city itself, being only 14 minutes' walk from the center of Mc-Keesport, which the new Dravesburg bridge, opened this week, and an electric street car line, to be built this summer, brings into easy access. Brown, of the Department of Public Safety, will have presented a paper outlining the duties of Fire Director and Court Officer. These are the two new positions the Chief asks Councils to create. When the ordinance was first presented, an objection was raised upon the ground that men were already being paid for attending to these duties. The Chief is prepared to show them that this is not true. The duties of the Court Officer have already been presented forth in the following rules: Rule 1-A director of fires shall be assigned to the Bureau of Fire, who shall

AN OLD-TIME

THE BITERS ALSO AMONG THE BIT

The first bridge at Pittsburg was a covered wooden one at the foot of Smithfield street, built in 1818. Two years later a bridge very much like it was thrown across the Allegheny river from St. Clair street, now Sixth, to Federal street. When the Smithfield street bridge was 13 years old, its two spans toward the Pittsburg bank Tell down one night and dropped a coal wagon, the driver and four horses into the river. In 1845, when the First ward was purified

The Hand street bridge was begun in 1837 and completed in 1839, so that it is at least 51 years old, though it may claim to be 53, celebrated flying machine hoax, of which many people still talk, but of which very few now know the facts. When built there was a promenade on top of the bridge, from which there was an excellent view up and down stream. The story of the "flying goose" hoax was told to THE DISPATCH yesterday by Mr. L. D. McCandless.

of jokes by his friends and ridicule by his cotemporaries. At a printers' dinner, in the Old Bank Exchange, he was toasted and roasted over the promised exhibition. This put an idea into the heads of some of Mr. Foster's printers, and on the Saturday

He took it with him to his home in Kentucky, where it may yet be alive. Green took good care of it, and several years afterward said he still had the goose at his home in Bowling Green.
