Extraordinary Display of the Mysterious Power Possessed by

A YOUNG MAN FROM NEWARK, O.

Blindfolded, He Reads, Writes and Copies Pictures From a Book.

WASHINGTON I. BISHOP ECLIPSED

NEW YORK, May 18,-All the way from Newark, O., comes an aspirant for honors in the field lately occupied by Washington swiftly alighted on the word. And again in-Irving Bishop, the mind reader, in the person of Mr. Chauncey Palmer, and if the sight and hearing is to be believed, Mr. Palmer's claim for distiction must be credited. One day last week, says a local newspaper man, I received a note saying that a mind reader from the West would give an exhibition at a friend's house, and an acceptance of the invitation was urged on the ground that he would do some very interesting things. My friend's claims for the mind reader were sparse of the truth, for Mr. Palmer's performance or "tests," as he called them, that evening were little short of won-

Anticipating collusion between some of those to be present, I asked an artist friend to accompany me, and on the way to the house where we were bidden we agreed upon a plan of detecting and defeating any cooperation between the mind reader and a colleague. Just here it is pertinent to say that there is a well defined doubt in the minds of most people as to what mind reading really is.

WIDELY DIFFERENT VIWS. The disciples of theosophism say "that the mind can be read by one person whose physical condition is such that he can put himself in barmony with the 'astral body' of the person whose ideas are to be shown." Others insist that mind readers are really "hypnotic subjects" and that it is only another form of hypnotism.

Doctors and scientists claim that the socalled mind readers are really more fit sub-jects for a hospital and medical treatment than for public exhibition; that they are, in other words, "cataleptics." In proof of this they urge that Mr. Bishop, the most forward of those who made it a profession, died at an early age a physical wreck in a cataleptic trance, and was for years subject to morphine and other stimulants.

Mr. Palmer, the latest of those to give these exhibitions, is another proof of what the doctors say about the cataleptic or highly nervous state. The physicians also state that those who have been successful in this peculiar line are men of weak individuality, but noted personal characteristics. Palmer fills the bill exactly.

He is in appearance a man about 35 years old, with flashing black eyes and dark hair streaked with gray at the temples and sides of the head, hands thin almost to attenuation and a very sensitive, nervous month. He impressed me at once as being a man out of the ordinary, and on closer acquaintance I noticed that his individuality was not of a high order.

WHAT THE TESTS WERE.

The exhibition was given in a private residence, on West Thirty-fourth street, and although there were but a dozen present all were in a way professional people. A doctor, a lawyer, a sea captain, journalists, an artist, a theological student, an actress and a noted barytone and soprano of an equally noted church choir. After we were all seated in the parlor Mr. Palmer, before starting on the evening's exhibition, handed round a little card with a list of the "tests" which he claimed be could perform, written English—writing on mirror a word or sentence thought of, the only connection between Mr. Palmer and subject being a silk string or wire. Ninth—Finding a pin or needle secreted in any part of the city. Tenth—Finding on piano a note or chord theoretic.

Elevouth—Writing 'on mirror any word or sentence in any language, written on paper and sealed in envelope, the only connection between subject and Mr. Palmer being a wire or connection.

Thirteenth—The finding of three articles selected by three different persons, then tied in handkerchiefs and secreted. These bidden articles will be returned to their proper places to the fraction of an inch. Note—All these tests are performed while Mr. Palmer is thoroughly blindfolded.

A REMARKABLE FEAT.

"I will commence the evening's performance by a few of the more simple tests, such as finding three secreted articles. First kindly appoint a committee."

The doctor, the artist and I volunteered and were appointed, and the artist took Mr Palmer into a back room and carefully blindfolded him. While he was absent from the room three of the party took respectively a knife, a coin from the interior of the cabinet and a bonbonniere from a table tied them in a handkerchief and secreted the handkerchief on the top of a bedstead on the third floor. The mind reader then took the hand of the gentleman who secreted the articles and menced a search for the missing handkerchief. Around the room, down on his kneed looking under sofas, chairs and the piano he dragged the committeeman, and finally, like a sprinter, ran for the door and darted up the stairs straight to the room on the third floor and then to the bed where, after a minute's hesitation, he placed the hand he was holding on the linen.

The conclusion of the test was more remarkable than the first part. Taking separtely each article Palmer replaced them in their identical positions to the fractions of an inch, running down the stairs and avoiding the furniture in the rooms quite as well as if his eyes were not darkened.

MOVING ABOUT BLINDFOLDED. The next test was somewhat on the same order, one of the ladies present leaving the room and on her return stating she had secreted an article and asked Mr. Palmer to find it in the same way. A brief effort resulted in finding a pin, which had been stuck in the tip of a gas burner in the back room. Then tableaus a la Bishop were reproduced in endless variety, and the simple tricks of the programme, such as finding chords on the piano thought of, the finding of scars and birthmarks on the body and the instant going to a point desired desired short while. It will be remembered that Bishop, just before he expired at the Lamb's Club dinner, tried the difficult feat of tracing a word while blindfolded that some one present had thought of, and he did it by holding the subject's hands in his. Mr. Bishop accomplished what he tried to do, but the effort sent him into a cataleptic fit from which he never recovered.

After a brief rest, Mr. Palmer announced that he would try to do the word-writing trick in the improved form, and asked one of the ladies to select a word for him.

READING WHEN BLINDFOLDED. A page of a daily paper was spread on a table and very nearly in the center of the page the word "classes" was chosen. Taking her sand in his and placing a hat pin be-tween her fingers he gently moved the point of the pin about the page for a moment and then suddenly jabbed the point deep into the paper.

"That is the word," he said, and it was. "Please give me a pencil and blank paper," was his next request. They were furnished, and then a request for Mrs. K. to put her hand on his head was complied with. Taking the pencit, Mr. Palmer slowly traced the word.

I was not quite satisfied, but that perhaps Palmer might have seen in some way the word, or that womanlike Mrs. K. had breathed it inaudibly to the rest and his quick ear had caught it. Although it looked as if he had fully done as he appeared to do, I asked him to try it with me. Taking care this time that none but the peared to do, I asked him to try it with me.

Taking care this time that none but the artist with me knew what it was. I purposely selected the small word "But" in a letter, because the mental strain on the mind reader was intense, and the larger the word the greater the effort. When Palmer took my hand I used all my will power to let my hand lie passive in his, so that the muscles would not guide him at all. As before he poised the hands over the page like a bird for a few minutes, and then

MYSTERIOUS WRITING. At Mr. Palmer's request I wrote a sentence on a piece of paper and put it away in my pocket, and then taking the silk string in his hand he reproduced the sentence I had written. To make this more difficult I chose the Latin phrase facilis est descensus averni. The test was not accomplished easily. Palmer made three or four attempts before he succeeded in writing the sentence, and was forced to rest between each effort. In this case no one had seen the written sentence on the paper until its reproduction on the mirror, when it was taken out and compared "Do you understand Latin, Mr. Palmer?"

I asked. "I never studied that or any other language but the English," he re-plied. Comment is hardly necessary on this feat, and it would seem that the acme of mind reading science had been reached. But it had not, for the subsequent efforts on Palmer's part cast his previous attempts far

"Mr. Palmer," said the artist present, "I am interested in pictures, and if you can please find and write a word or sentence that has been thought of, can you not find and draw a portion of a picture in the same

That was a poser for the mind reader, but after a moment's thought he said: tried anything like that or heard of anyone else who had, and I cannot say that I will succeed, but I will do the best I can."

A FEAT IN DRAWING. The small assemblage had by this time been impressed with the fact that there was hardly anything in the way of reproducing what was in the minds of other persons and no test was too difficult for Mr. Palmer, and they one and all believed he would succeed. Opposite page 198 of the novel "Pierre and Jean," by Guy de Maupassant, is a picture of a girl in yachting costume. The girl's hat and head were the subjects chosen. In the same manner as the words were found Palmer put the pin point on the head of the girl. The artist was now directed to place his hand on Mr. Palmer's head. Taking the paper and pencil in a hesitat-ing manner he (Palmer) slowly drew the top of a girl's sailor hat, then the sides, and then the rim. At that point the artist, who had selected the portion of the picture to be drawn, reached out his disengaged hand for the book to look at it. Palmer instantly stopped short, and could not go on.

It seemed for a time that his "mind reading" had found its limit. The artist explained, "I wanted the book because I could not remember how the hair was ar-ranged." That was a partial explanation of Palmer's failure, and after a short rest he tried it again. This time I selected the picure to be drawn and was the medium. The subject was a man's face, with beard and yachting cap, from the same book. I took extreme care to remember just how the cap and head looked. In this the operator was very successful. The drawing, although crude, proved that Palmer was drawing as well as he could just what I had in my mind. The beard, the last portion to be put in, was scratched there with nervous energy. A REMARKABLE INCIDENT.

A remarkable thing might be here noted First-Driving a team of horses through the | times Palmer would take his pencil from Second—Reproducing tableaux of three or mere persons.

Third—Finding on calendar the day and month on which any person was born. Third—Finding on calendar the day and month on which any person was born.

Sixth—The famous mock murder test of lines while blindfolded, let them lines while blindfolded, let them Bishop.

Seventh—Reproducing siminitaneously gestures made by any person several feet away, Mr. Palmer's back being in front of the person.

Eighth—Writing on mirror a word or sentence to put it back again in the same spot. The third drawing test was the most successful. In this case a number of figures were drawn on a piece of paper, and one of them was a face made with angular lines. It was that face which was selected to be drawn. The selection of the subject and the drawing were accomplished by Palmer with great difficulty, but when it was finished it was the most complete of all so far. Twelfth—Finding a word selected from a book and writing same on paper, the subject's hand laid on Mr. Palmer's head being the only a picture of a boat, drawn by the artist, was substituted, but before sealing it in the envelope it was shown to the soprano, and she

But it was only after repeated attempts that the drawing was commenced and Palmer was then breathing heavily and his hand shaking violently. He persevered until he had put in the mainsail and had started to make the jib, when he dropped the pencil and sank in a chair exclaiming, "I am exhausted; I can Collect Interest for 10 Years. Alfred Beidge, of the county of Devon England, has filed a petition in the United States Circuit Court, asking that the Pennsylvania Railway Company, as guaranter of the Allegheny Valley Railway Company, reissue two $1,000 bonds, lost by the petitioner in April, 1880. The bonds wanted are known as Low Grade, the issue of which was $10,000,000, bearing 7 per cent interest and payable in 1910. It seems that all that is necessary for the plaintiff to do is to secure the compan nal bonds, which are supposed to have been

In the Spring

Nearly everybody needs a good medicine. The impurities which have accumulated in the blood during the cold months must be ex-pelled, or when the mild days come, and the effect of bracing air is lost, the body is liable to be overcome by debility or some serious dis-ease. The remarkable success achieved by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the many words of praise it has received, make it worthy your confidence. It is the "neal Spring Medicine."

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time, so that I could hardly attend to my business. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BEGOLE, Ed-itor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

LADIE'S, MISSES' AND CHILDREN'S SPRING

WRAPS AND JACKETS

We call attention to a few of the leading Spring and Summer Over-Garments for the fairer sex, drawn from Parisian, Berliner and our best American Fabricants. These exhibit prevailing ideas, which are amplified in our stock by a hundred variations. No such array of attractive Jackets, Wraps, Jerseys and Blouses has ever been shown in Pittsburg as will be found in our Mammoth Show Rooms. One most desirable and very taking style of LADIES' JACKETS comes in fine Diagonals, Widewales, Corkscrews, Chevrons and Stockinette, with silk or cloth revers. This line embraces Jackets from $6 to $20, according to quality.

A telling feature is a tight fitting DIRECTOIRE JACKET in same materials as above, with silk or cloth revers, and marked in three grades-$6, $7 and $8 75. These include two very popular styles, but we have an immense stock of Jackets in a variety of forms, which are graded to meet the purses of all, commencing in Black at $2 and running up as high as $20, which includes all the fashionable colors, some in two colors, with silver, gold and Persian trimming effects.

LADIES' SHOULDER CAPES

One handsome style has a ground-work of corded silk, with beads or embroidery, and heavy twist fringe, ranging from $6 50 to $20. Another Cape is composed mainly of Lace and Silk Ribbon. It is very light in weight, exceedingly dressy, and is selling freely from $7 to $10. We have also a nice genteel line of Lace Capes from $3 to $7. CLOTH CAPES, with embroidered voke and accordion pleating from $3 50 to $6. There is an extensive line of Capes of every variety in Broadcloth and fine Henriettas, both black and colors, $1 90 to $10. These are ruffled, bound, embroidered, velvet yoked. The latest Parisian cut has the high shoulders and embroidered at waist.

For Young Ladies there is a very pretty TIGHT FITTING WRAP with high shoulders, the trimming coming to waist and back with medium long points in front. These come in black, allwool materials; also in silk, very handsomely braided and embroidered, and are in grades from $10 to $30. Everything stylish in Capes can be had in Misses' sizes.

SHORT BEADED WRAPS

These are still quite popular, and we are selling lots of them. We have just bought several hundred at a great loss to the importers, and are selling them at $1 50, $2, $2 50 up to $10. STREET WRAPS-A very stylish idea is presented with a body of silk with shoulders of silk braided net, finished with Passamentrie. The same shape is found in Black Lace; prices from $10 to $35. Another in Drap d'Ete-fine Diagonals, Corkscrews and Widewales, satin-lined throughout and beautifully braided in Van Dyke point style; from $10 to $40. A still handsomer style of SILK WRAPS are elaborately trimmed with fine Black Lace and richest Passamenterie. They are also in fine light-weight woolens, imported fabrics; prices $20 to $60. One Handsome Short Wrap, composed of Black Silk, with crochet silk shoulders, long points heavily trimmed with lace and fringe, ranges from $15 to $35. Another Silk Wrap, which is also reproduced in fine woolens, is exceedingly neat and dressy; it has revers front, long points and is most effective in style; runs from $10 to $25. A fine dressy Street Wrap, either black silk or cloth, embroidered revers and points, embroidered round skirt and finished with heavy fringe; prices range from $15 to $50. Don't fail to come to our WRAP DEPARTMENT. You can get what you want at any price you desire; we court your examination of our qualities and prices. They can't be discounted
