ITS FAME UNIVERSAL.

The Big Glass Tanks at Jeannette Surprise Many Visitors.

MANUFACTURERS VISIT THE TOWN.

An Intellectual Feast Followed by a Lauch and Speeches.

VIEWS OF IMPORTERS AND JOBBERS

The fame of the window glass tank at Jeannette, which has extended to all parts of the United States, will now become universal. A visit was paid to the town yesterday by several representatives of European glass houses, and they came away dumfounded. With them was a party of Pittsburg manufacturers most of whom had a kind of an idea that Chambers & McKee had a little experimental tank from which they were securing little results, When they were in the factory their minds instantly changed, and they began to see the magnitude of the establishment. They were completely paralyzed, and came away

A special train left the Union station at 11 o'clock yesterday morning for Jeannette with a merry party of gentlemen representing the manufacturing interests of this city and the glass business of the country. The party was in charge of H. Sellers McKee and James A. Chambers. Trainmaster Culp and Conductor McGuigan took care of the train, and the former personally accom-panied the party to its destination and return. Upon arriving at Jeannette the train was backed down one of the sidings and the party landed right inside the extensive works. After landing they started on a sight-seeing expedition, and what they did not see of the glass business cannot be wit-

INSPECTING THE TANK.

The first place visited was No. 3 tank, where the glass is mixed and melted. The process of mixing was an object of interest to the party. The tank has a capacity of melted glass, and is equal to geven pots. At the rear of the tank is an opening into which is thrown the mixture for making glass. A long "filling in" shovel and two men, with another man to lower and raise the tank door, does the work of 12 men in a pot-furnace factory. By the employment of the long shovel, which is worked on a pivot by the two men, the services of a master, teasers and batch mixers are dispensed with. Instead of shoveling the mixture into the tank, the men shovel into the "filling-in" shovel. When the latter is filled, the tank door is opened and the shovel pushed into One turn of the shovel dumps the load, and after pulling out the empty shovel it is ready for another load. The mixture is hauled and dumped in front of the door by a man and a mule. The latter, by the way, is the only animal about the place. Horses and wagons to convey the product from one department to another, or from the factory to the railroad station, is unknown, on account of the admirable facilities the firm have for handling their product. INTO THE LOWER REGIONS.

The visitors spent considerable time look-ing into the tank through a piece of colored glass. All they could see was a motionless body of molten glass as placid as the waters of a still lake. The sides and ceiling of the tank were reflected on the sea of glass as if the latter had been a mirror. General Manager George E. Moore explained to the visitors that the thermometer registered about 2,800 degrees inside the tank, and the place where the party stood was about 150. After imparting this cheerful information he volunteered to lead them down into a subway under the tanks. The fat men in the party hesitated, while the others doffed their coats and descended into the lower region. The roar of the gas, the hot air as it came rushing through the tubes, and other unearthly noises, caused many of the visitors to think of Dante's Inferno, and wonder if the scene before them was anything like a hereafter. The stay was not a protracted one, and the visitors hurriedly made their exit out of the pit and into the blow house. Here were dozens of men and boys blowing long cylinders of glass, and preparing it for the flattening department. Some of the cylinders were 38x56 single strength, and from 30x50 to 56x 70 inches double strength. Leaving the "Turkish bath" department, the visitors were conducted to the flattening house and cutting room. The building is 450 feet long by 150 deep. In the cutting department the room has been so arranged that the light is in front of every cutter, an advantage few were astounded at the immense stock of glass the company has on hand. In one of the houses there were stored between 60,000 and 75,000 boxes of glass. To one side of the buildings is a long railroad siding upon which 18 freight cars can stand and be loaded at one time. After passing through all the warehouses, the crowd was taken to the new tank building. Three tanks are now in operation, another is being built and ground will soon be broken for two more. The grinding and clayhouse was the next place. In this department the heavy stone slabs to be used in repairing the tanks are made. About 4,300 blocks, each weighing about 450 pounds, are stored in the house. The mixture room, where the sand, salt cake, charcoal, etc., are mixed together, was the next place of interest and after seeing everything, the party went to inspect the flint glasshouse of McKee Brothers. Among the departments of interest seen here was a small flint tank. It resembled a puddling furnace in a rolling mill, and unlike the continuous tank, it has to be refilled every Saturday night. The product of this tank is used in the manufacture of lamp chimneys. After inspecting the blow department of this flint house, the gentlemen passed into the assorting and packing rooms. Here everyone in the party was presented with a souvenir in the shape of engraved glassware. Nearly every visitor was presented with a pair of large pressed glass fruit dishes. The product of the fint house is about 26 cars per week.

GOT TIRED LOOKING.

There was so much to see that the party netually got tired looking through the different departments and a halt was called. It was decided to refresh the inner man, and the visitors again climbed on board the cars. By a ride of 27 miles and a two hours the party the factories the appetites of tramp through the factories the appetites of the party were sharpened, and it did not take many invitations to get the crowd around the festive board. Mine Host Schlosser, who can put up a lunch fit for the gods, and make a man wish to live to eat, had taken possession of two cars. In one of them he had a long table loaded down with everything dainty in the way of edibles, and the latter soon began to disappear. When the cigars were passed around the speech making began. Mr. Chambers acted as host, and the first speaker on the list was James H. Rice, of Chicago. Mr. Rice has been engaged in the glass business for 35 years, and is the veteran among the jobbers. He spoke on behalt of the latter and said: the party were sharpened, and it did not

and said:

I see about me a great many enterprising men. I would like to speak of them all, but what remarks I will make I will direct to Mr. Chambers, who has entertained us so handsomely. I have noticed that little has been said of the great men of this country until after they are dead and gone. This arises through jealousy and other causes. As I will pass away before he does, I would like to Speak while he is living. He is certainly tentiled to great credit and the thanks of the manufacturers and jobbers. He has come up into the mountains of his native State, where he smelled the odor of matural gas and said, "Here will I eroct my monument". He laid the corner-stone of this in those works.

NO PLACE FOR RELICS. He carved out no receptacle to place relica-for future generations to mearth, but he said. "I plant this corner-stone to remain forever as a morument to progress." He goes on unaided, except by his own broad shoulders and by head except by his own broad shoulders and by head hiled with a well organized brain. He meets with no encouragement from those at home and abroad. Wise man came from the East. They viewed the work and pronounced it a failure. Some of the people engaged in his own industry gave him no encouragement. They threw every impediment in his way and pronounced the enterprise a failure, but at the same time they said: "If this proves a success it will bring ruin to us all."

Gentlemen, what has been the result? You see this works built to the point of success. No ruin has been wrought, but he takes the manufacturer by the hand, and leading him gently, says: 'Go thou and do likewise.' He does not stop here, but comes to the wicked jobber, of whom I am the prince, not with drawn sword, but with humility; bows down on his knees and beseeches us to join hands with him for the benefit of the business. These actions and these acts will live forever in my memory. The footsteps he made on his way to Jeannette will grow brighter and brighter as long as he lives."

Great applause greeted Mr. William Great applause greeted Mr. William Loeffler, secretary of the association, as he rose to his feet to respond in behalf of the manufacturers. The gentlemen made an eloquent address, and among other things, said:

In behalf and in the name of the manufacturers present, I congratulate Chambers & McKee on the wonderful success they have achieved in their business enterprise. I know I express the sentiment of the window glass manufacturers of the country, in wishing Mr. Chambers good health and long life, and his firm success and prosperity. There is no manufacturer in the country who in a higher degree deserves and has the esteem, respect, friendship and confidence of the manufacturers more than Mr. James A. Chambers.

Captain J. B. Ford responded on behalf of the plate glass manufacturers. He with an entirely different idea than they of the plate glass manufacturers. He

My visit to Jeannette to-day has fully cor-roborated what I told many of the leading manufacturers of Pittsburg eight years ago. The only way to manufacture window glass successfully is to make it cheaper than it can be imported for, and produce an article fully equal to that made in Europe.

A VOICE FROM THE WEST William Glenny, of the Glenny Glass

William Glenny, of the Glenny Glass Company, Cincinnati, also spoke in behalf of the jobbers. He said:

I indorse everything said in regard to Messrs. Chambers & McKee. Knowing the gentlemen many years, I feel as if I could hardly say enough in their favor. They have accomplished a great work in their present location within the past two years. It is beyond anything I have heard or read of. I believe they are making as good glass, if not better, than many of the large concerns using the old pot system. The glass we looked at to-day was certainly satisfactory to me, if I am a judge, and I have an experience of over 35 years.

As the train was rolling homeward a num-

As the train was rolling homeward a num-ber of interviews was secured from prominent visitors about American tank glass.
W. W. Heroy, of Heroy & Marrener, importers and jobbers, New York, said: "I visited many of the tanks in Europe, and free to confess that I have never seen any better constructed works or more complete in its details than those at Jeannette The quality of glass is excellent, and I do not see any reason why it should not be made as cheaply here as anywhere in the world, and as good as any factory need pro-

D. H. Roberts, of New York, who was the first man in the East to handle gas made glass, said: "I have sold since the tank started over 75,000 boxes of Chambers & McKee's glass. The product has gone all over the East. It has taken the place of French glass and I have yet to hear my first complaint as to its being poorer in quality than imported glass. Many of my customers give a preference to the American product over foreign glass at the same price."

THE EQUAL OF ANY. Mr. George F. Neale, General Manager of the Crystal City Plate Glass Works, who was the first man in this crountry to make plate glass successfully, said: "I have vis-ited all the tank factories in Belgium, Saxony and other places, but have never seen a plant anywhere to compare with the one at Jeannette. The works to my mind are the most complete, elaborate and successare the most complete, elaborate and successful of any in existence. It is conceded by the representatives of the largest European factories that the quality of the American tank glass is certainly equal to that of any patent jurnaces. It is simply impossible for pot glass to compete with Jeannette or any other tank concern."

Mr. MacCauley, of the firm of Chance Brothers & Co., of Birmingham, England, the oldest glass company in the world-the families having been in business for the past 300 years—and who was one of the foreign visitors, said: "Jeannette has cause to be proud of the wonderful advance made. The firm is ahead of any in the country to-

American Genius. The wonderful perfection attained in automatic musical instruments is one of the wonders of the age, and no one who has not seen America's most perfect instrument of this kind, the Æolian, can appreciate what remarkable results have been achieved. This instrument has been heard and praised by the leading musicians of the world, and can be said to produce the near-est approach to an orchestral effect of any instrument made.

The truth is, the Æolian is not, strictly speaking, automatic, as the changes of time and expression are given by the performer, but the manipulation is so simple that, with a few weeks' practice, anyone can operate it correctly. On exhibition at Mellor & Hoene's, 77 Fifth avenue.

N ORDINANCE-RELOCATING THE

AN ORDINANCE—RELOCATING THE
A west line of South Thirtieth street, from Carson street to the Monongahela river, and changing the width of said street.

Whereas, South Thirtieth street as laid out in the plan of the Borough of Ormsby is of a uniform width of 60 feet from Carson street to the Mononganela river, and at right angles with Carson street, and now by actual survey it is found that the buildings on said west line have been placed on the line as laid out in the Thomas McClurg plan, which deflects to the right sufficient to reduce the width of fit street at the Monongahela river to 58.47 feet, and to open the street on the lines as laid out in the plan of the Borough of Ormsby would entail great damage, therefore Section I—Be it ordained and enacted by the city of Pittaburg, in Select and Common Councils assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same. That the west building line of South Thirtieth street, from Carson street to the Monongahela river, shall be and the same is hereby relocated and the width fixed as follows: The west building line of Carson street at a distance of 100 feet east of the east line of Costume alley (formerly Center alley); thence deflecting to the left 59 degrees 30 minutes and in a northwardly direction a distance of 748.20 feet, more or less, to the Monongahela river and the east building line of said South Thirtieth street shall be located as laid out in the plan of the Borough of Umrsby, recorded in the Recorder's office of Allegham councy, in plan book, vol. 4 pages 294 and 205, which said east building line is distant 60 feet along the north line of Carson street and the said west building line is distant 60 feet along the north line of Carson street and the said South Thirtieth firset shall be of variable width, as shown upon a plan hereto attached and hereby made part of this ordinance.
