

HE FEELS PUT OUT. Peter Carr Has Quite a Grievance Against the Bijou Theater, FOR WHICH HE WANTS $5,000. He Says He Was Unjustly Ejected From the Popular Playhouse.

A BILL FAIRLY FILLED WITH FUN May 5 seems to have been an unlucky day for the proprietors of the Bijou Theater, and "Mr. Carr of New York," not a name to conjure with. In the first place, a colored man named W. H. Austin used the management for $2,000 damages because he and his lady were not allowed, as he alleged, to occupy two reserved seats he had paid for.

W. J. Brennan, Esq., has prepared the papers in a suit to be entered in Common Pleas No. 2, the title of which is "Peter Carr versus H. M. Bennett and E. M. Grulick, doing business as R. M. Grulick & Co."

CLAIMS OF MR. CARR. Plaintiff complains and says that the defendants are conducting a theater and a place for presenting dramatic performances, and providing amusement for the public, called the Bijou Theater; that R. M. Grulick & Co. in the conduct of their business of presenting dramas and plays for the amusement of the public and for the further purpose of increasing the attendance of the public, advertise their business in the newspapers, and have fixed prices of admission; that as a further inducement to the public, a band of musicians is engaged who make the air around with sweet strains and enchanting and soul-stirring harmonies; that on May 5 plaintiff by and through the inducements and arrangements held out by defendants, attended the theater to see a play called "Mr. Barnes of New York," and before entering, defendants, through the employees and agents, demanded from plaintiff 75 cents for a seat, which said plaintiff paid without demur for a seat in the parquette circle; that plaintiff was conducted to the seat engaged and sat thereon during the presentation of two acts of the play, when, in accordance with the programme of the performance, the orchestra, sometimes called a "sheet-iron band," consisting of wind and other instruments, struck up the "Star-Spangled Banner," when plaintiff, carried away by the patriotic memories aroused by the inspiring tune, which is a popular and soul-stirring air, was moved to applaud by clapping his hands together as a mark of appreciation and of his desire to have the same repeated, this being a means of expressing satisfaction and appreciation adopted, recognized and practiced in every well regulated theater in this country, as well as heretofore in defendants' theater.

THINKS THEY FORGOT SOMETHING. But the defendants, says Mr. Carr, seemingly on account of the miserable music rendered, and not knowing or forgetting that men may be moved by patriotic fervor and sentiment, so matter how discordant the sound or unskillful the player, and evidently regarding any efforts at applause of their orchestra as being derisive, one of their employees and agents accented plaintiff and requested him to leave the theater on account of his conduct aforesaid, and plaintiff refused, not having violated any reasonable regulation of the government of the theater and having conducted himself with all due decorum and propriety, defendants, through their agents, etc., wantonly and wrongfully insisted on plaintiff leaving the theater notwithstanding the performance was far from being concluded, and made a spectacle by plaintiff, and a subject for ridicule and comment for the hundreds of persons collected in the theater and exhibited him wrongfully as an actor to the persons aforesaid, although not in the bills as a performer. And after defendants had wrongfully and fraudulently ejected plaintiff they refused to permit him to re-enter and see the remainder of the performance and refused, though it was frequently demanded, to return the price paid by plaintiff for admission and sight of the entire play.

THE DAMAGES DEMANDED. For all this indignity and injury to his feelings, plaintiff asks for $5,000 damages. In explanation of the term "indignity," Mr. Carr states that an attendant came to him and told him a man wanted to see him. Mr. Carr didn't want to "see a man" at that particular juncture, and says he told the attendant to go out, thus breaking a chain of pleasing and patriotic emotions that he may never be able again to generate.

FOR NERVOUS DISEASES. Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Dr. F. G. Kelly, Alderton, W. T., says: "I have prescribed it in a large number of cases of restlessness at night, and nervous disease generally, and also in cases of indigestion caused by lack of sufficient gastric juice of the stomach, with marked success, and consider it one of the best remedies known to the professional world."

THE OLD, OLD STORY. Almost daily our readers have seen chronicled in the columns of this paper a detailed account of the death of some one they knew—perhaps some lady who, in the prime of life, young, vivacious and happy, was surrounded by friends and every luxury this life can afford.

Mr. Fred Hahn, a resident of Sharpsburg, and well known throughout Allegany county and Western Pennsylvania, has for years been a victim of catarrh and dyspepsia. His stomach gave him an endless amount of trouble. He had been a victim of gas from his stomach after eating, sour taste, and often felt like vomiting his food.

Having a wife and two small children whom he dearly loved, depending on him for a living, and having spent all his money in doctoring to no avail, not being able to work, he became discouraged and disheartened, and often became so melancholy that he would feel tempted to jump into the river and thus end his suffering. One day he noticed in the paper an account of a patient who had been cured by the catarrh specialists at 323 Penn avenue of conditions that seemed similar to his own.
