UNVEILING OF LEE'S MONUMENT.

Immense Outpouring of the People of the Old and New South.

ANDERSON THE ORATOR OF THE DAY

RICHMOND, May 29 .- The feeling here to-day is well illustrated by the fact that some one climbed up the statue of George Washington, in the State House grounds, this morning and put Confederate flags in the hands of the figure.

Beveral protests have been entered against leaving the flags there, but the authorities refused to take them down. Several other evidences of intense feeling are visible, but only in spots. The Evening States has: "Robert E. Lee, America's Greatest Man," over its front office.

THE LEE MONUMENT.

The streets of the city had been decorated very elaborately and taste ully for the occa-sion. From all the business buildings were sion. From all the business buildings were awing streamers in which the colors of the Confederacy blended with the national emblem. The State colors of Maryland and Virginia were liberally displayed. On many buildings portraits of the leaders of the lost cause, wreathed in laurel, were prominently displayed. On some of the buildings were hung battle flags, tattered and worn and as the veterary receed here. and worn, and as the veterans passed be-neath them on their way to the place of as-semblage, they broke forth into hearty THE GREAT PARADE.

Noon was the hour fixed for the procession to move. Long before that time most of the militia companies and civil societies had formed in the places allotted to them, and the chief marshal's aids were galloping backward and forward, bringing to head-quarters news of the formation. It was nearly 12:30 o'clock when word was brought ready to move. Turning to his marshals, he gave the command to move, and the head of the procession moved down Broad street. As the veteran cavalry passed, the volunteer troops-infantry, artillery and cavalry -fell into line behind them, followed by the Farmers' Alliance. The State troops were arranged in the order of secession of the Southern States, South Carolina being in the lead, and Virginia bringing up the rear. Each of the State contingents carried a distinctive benner. These banners were furnished by the local committee, and they furnished the identification of each State delegation. Of far more interest to the throng that filled the streets and looked down upon the procession from windows and house tops, were the tattered and smoke begrimed war flags, carried by the veterans Waving bandkerchiefs and cheers from thousands of throats greeted them as they

At the head of the procession rode ex-Governor Lee, mounted on a spirited iron-gray horse. In the first carriage were Governor McKinney, Colonel Archer Anderson, the orator of the day; General Jubal A. Early and General Joseph E. Johnston. In other carriages were Captain R. E. Lee, General W. H. F. Lee, Custis Lee, Miss Mildred Lee, Miss Mary Lee, Governor Fleming, of West Virginia; Senator Reagan, of Texas, ex-Postmaster General of the Confederacy, and General H. H. Walker, of Morristown, N. J.

THE OLD FAMILIAR TUNE.

As the leading carriage passed down Broad street, it was greeted with wild demonstrations by the enormous crowd. Fair hands flung roses from the windows, banners were torn from the fronts of buildings and tossed high into the air, and as the band struck up the familiar air of "Dixie," tears coursed down turrowed cheeks. The passage of the processional column through the principal streets of the city was a continued ovation, and its progress was much impeded by the crowd that filled the steet, and when it arrived at the monument an enormous erowd was in waiting there. A large stand in front of the monument had been reserved for the distinguished guests, the orator of the day and ladies. It was well filled when the procession arrived, and ex-Governor Lee dismounted and offered his arm to General Johnston to escort him to the seat reserved

When the organization was complete and something like quiet could be had, Gov-ernor McKinney, as President of the Lee Monument Association, arose and called the assemblage to order. After a brief inwocation by Rev. Charles Minnigerode, of the Episcopal Church, Governor McKinney introduced General Early as chairman of the meeting. He was greeted with pro-longed applause and cheering. Taking the gavel from Governor McKinney's hand, General Early announced in a few well-chosen words the orator of the occasion, Colonel Archer Anderson, who, in the course of his address, spoke as follows:

A TRIBUTE TO LEE.

Fellow Citizens: A people carves its own Image in the monuments of its great men. Not Virginians only, not those who dwell in the fair land stretching from the Potomac to the Rio Grande, but all who bear the American name, may proudly consent that posterity shall judge them by the structure which we are here name, may proudly consent that posterity shall judge them by the structure which we are here to dedicate and crown with a heroic figure. For, as the Latin poet said, that whenever the Roman name and sway extended there should be the sepulcher of Pompey, so to-day in every part of America the character and fame of Robert Edward Lee are treasured as "a possession for all time."

And if this is true of that great name, what shall be said of the circumstances which surround us on this day of solemn commemoration? That at the end of the first quarter of a century after the close of a supendous Civil War, in which more than 1,600,000 struggled for the mastery during four years of fierce and bloody conflict, we should see the Southern States in complete possession of their local self-covernment, the Federal Constitution nuchanged, save as respects the great issues submitted to the arbitrament of war, and the defeated party — while in full and patriotic sympathy with all the present grandeur and imperial promises of a re-united country—still not held to renounce any glorious memory, but free to heap honors upon their trusted leaders, living or dead. All this reveals a character in which the American people may well be content to be handed down to history. All this, and more, will be the testimony of the solin fabric we here complete. It will recall the generous initiative and the unflagging zeal of those noble women of the South to whom in large measure we owe this auspicoous day. It will bear its lasting witness as the voluntary offering of the people—and, standing as the perpetual memories of our great leaner, it will stand not less as an enduring record of what his fellow citzens deemed most worthy to be honored.

Let this monument, then, teach to generations yet unborn these lessons of his life. Let it stand, not a record of civil strife, but as a perpetual protest against whatever is low and sordid in our private and public objects. Let it stand as a memorial of personal honor that never brooked a stain; or knightly valor without thought of self; of far-reaching military genius, unsolled by ambition, of heroic constancy, from which no cloud of misfortune could ever hide the path of duty. Let it stand for reproof and censure, if our people shall ever sink below the standards of their fathers. Let it stand for patriotic hope and cheer if a day of national gloom and disaster shall ever dawn upon our country. Let it stand as the embodiment of a brave and virtuous people's ideal leader. Let it stand as a great public act of thanksgiving and praise for that, it pleased Almighty God to bestow upon these Southern States a man so formed to reflect his attributes of power, of majesty and of goodness.

THE STATUE UNVEILED. Every point in Colonel Anderson's address was greeted with warm applause, and several times he was obliged to suapend his remarks, while the crowd cheered again and again. At the conclusion of his address, a wave of applause swept over the crowd and rippled out again and again, until hands rippled out again and again, until hands were tired and throats were hoarse.

When comparative silence had been restored, General Joseph E. Johnston arose from his seat behind the orators' stand and, leaving the platform, walked toward the monument. On either side walked a veteran ex-Confederate from the Soldiers' Home—Joseph Marion White and J. J. O'Neil. His progress was greeted with continuous cheering. Reaching the foot of the monument, General Johnston took in his hand the end of the long rope which held the great white veil about the statue. A gentle pressure, and the veil parted, and falling on either side disclosed the beautiful outlines of the statue. As they came into view a shout went up from the asseminto view a shout went up from the assem-blage, in volume so great that it almost drowned the boom of the cannon.

In a moment the whole assemblage had broken from the ranks and was flocking about the base of the statue, cheering and tossing hats, canes, etc., into the air. The crowd on the platform responded with cheers and waving of handkerchiefs and flags. It was a long time before the crowd quieted down and Governor McKinney and other distinguished people on the platform had an opportunity to regain their seats in the carriages which were to bear them back to

AS HE WAS AT GETTYSBURG. The sculptor, M. Mercie, of Paris, who has immortalized Lee in bronze, is a Frenchman, who in early life gave evidence of great ability. He was scarce 20 years of age when he was decorated at Rome. His famous works adorn the streets of Paris and the halls of the Luxembourg Palace. He the halls of the Luxembourg Palace. He has given to the world the picture of Lee as he appeared upon the battlefield of Gettysburg. His face is calm and majestic, but full of power. The horse which he bestrides has all four feet on the ground, yet he appears as in the act of walking. A forefoot is planted in advance while the hind foot on the same side seems about to follow.

The head is slightly bent to the side, while the tall falls gracefully clear of the flanks. General Lee's dress is characteristically plain. He is girt with a sash which presumably hides a belt from which hangs the sword of a commander of cavalry. He is without epaulettes, but upon the fore-He is without epaulettes, but upon the for arm of the coat sleeve is an ornament i broad braid. Makes the Weak

Strong.

The way in which Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up people in run down or weakened state of health, conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitions strength from which there must follow a reac tion of greater weakness than before, but in the ost natural wayHood's Sarsaparilla overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily,

SATURDAY MORNING

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

We will sell about 40 pieces (2,000 yards) Freres Koechlin's All-wool French Challis, 50c quality, at 25c a yard; mostly dark colorings, being a lot we bought at just half the importation price. See these promptly, as a few hours should sell a large portion of a bargain like this.

Attending the great sale of the Pennsylvania Cloak Co.'s entire stock was greater than we imagined. We still have a few choice plums left, and although the sale, as a "special sale," has closed, we will offer the balance during this week at "one-third the price of the original cost to manufacture." Just stop to think for one moment of an intant's cloak that costs say $3 00 to manufacture, and sold by the retail stores for $4 50 (for the manufacturer must have his profit as well as the retailer), will cost you only 75 cents. It is their loss, not ours, and you are the gainer.
