FOR THE FIRST TIME

Old Army Veterans Crowd Into St. Paul's Cathedral to Attend

MEMORIAL SERVICES LAST NIGHT.

The Church Beautifully Decorated With Flags and Bunting.

THRILLED BY A PRIEST'S ELOQUENCE

Never before in the history of St. Paul's Cathedral, of this city, has it been the scene of such an event as that of last evening, when about 800 or 900 old soldiers marched into the church with a brass band playing a dead march, to which they kept time. The building was packed to the doors, and it is safe to say that almost 4,000 people were in attendance.

The occasion was the annual memorial service of the Union Veteran Legion, and this was the first time the ceremonies were held in a Catholic church. Although there never has been anything in the rules of the church forbidding such services, it has not been customary to hold them in Catholic houses of worship. Many of the old soldiers are Catholics, and thought it would be the proper thing to hold their memorial reunion in a church of that denomination. They applied to Rt. Rev. Bishop Phelan for permission to use the Cathedral, and it was freely given them.

MARCHED TO THE CATHEDRAL. The old soldiers gathered at their hall on Sixth avenue, preparatory to going to the place of worship, and marched to tne Cathedral. The route of procession was Sixth to Smithfield, to Fifth avenue, to Grant street, to the church. As the veterans marched into the sacred edifice, the Cathedral band, stationed in the gallery, struck up the dead march from Saul. Many old soldiers were there with the sears reold soldiers were there with the scars re-ceived in battle over 25 years ago, but as they marched up the aisle they showed their steps had not lost any elasticity, as they measured time with the notes from the band. Some of them who had never been in the Cathedral before gazed around them at the beautiful house of worship; but the majority of the men were so impressed with the occasion men were so impressed with the occasion that they looked neither to the right nor to the left, but kept straight on until they got to the pews assigned them. They were their uniforms, and every one had a badge of some kind on hisperson. This brought forth many remarks of admiratiom from the peo-ple gathered in the church. The Legion is composed of men who had been commissioned officers and who saw service. Consequently every man has a memento of the great struggle of which he is proud.

Long before the veterans arrived the church was full of people. For the most part they were Protestants and had little trouble securing seats. The Catholies very magnanimously and courteously vielded up their seats to the strangers in the church, which action showed a commendable spirit. When the pews were full the people began to stand in the aisles and crowd into the When the band concluded the march the choir sang the "Miserere," with Mrs. J. J. Aland at the organ and Miss Grace Miller soloist. The latter sang with considerabl-feeling, and the wide range of her voice surprised many of the people in the church. THE CRATION DELIVERED. At the conclusion of the performance is called the silver tongued orator of the diocese, ascended the pulpit, which had diocese, ascended the pulpit, which had been beautifully decorated with American flags, and delivered the oration to the old veterans. In his address, Father Wertenbach said:

"All nations have been known, even in the time of scriptural inspiration to offer glory and praise to the heroic men of their times; men of valor, men of virtue and men of worth. We find traces of their worth in monuments find traces of their worth in monuments along the river Nile. They are more ending than the elements of time, and are standing in silent devotion of the eloquent evidences of the heroic men of their daymen who gained glory for their deeds.

"If we go to Rome we find a pantheon of the burning bones of genius. France has a gilded dome—a pantheon where reposed the great Napoleon, a visible and palpable evidence of the love of the French peo-In Ireland we find a grand pantheon, running up into the clouds, a symbol of the love and praise of the people. Go to England and you will see Westmin-ster Abbey where reposes the heroes of all walks of life.
"What have we in this country?" From the cold icy North to the flowery South, from the Atlantic to the Pacific shores, reaching from the stones of the earth to the clouds, we have a dome covering the dead. THEY HAVE NO PANTHEON.

"The dead whose escutcheon is the starry sky, and who have no pantheon to laud the praise of the living. Under the dome we come in silence and in loving sorrow and grief, to offer our tribute of reverence and tears. We enter the vales where reposenumberless dead. We view the trenches along the streams, where they lie, and we would bear them with tears. flowers that give forth fragrance that asconds to heaven. The tears are the eternal evidence of our love for the dead and expectation of the immortal."

The speaker then eloquently dwelt on the great deeds, glory and sacrifices fared, the long marches, etc., and talked very rapidly. The words rolled out of his mouth one after another without any effort on the part of the reverend father as he continued: "Everywhere on water and land we find them. We hear of their endured sufferings in hospitals and other places." "Why do we commemorate this occasion and meet here to-night? To offer a tribute, to reverence and praise the dead, and renew the vow for the love of our country at their graves. We recognize that the love of our country is the strongest passion implanted in the breast of man and this government is worthy of our love. We swear to be loyal to our land. We fully recognize the privations you went under, and you old veterans and heroes understand this memorial. Those who did not suffer for the common cause can show their character by keeping intact this grand, glorious system or government. Teach your children to be patriotic in their actions, by being honest for the sake of justice. Teach them to organize and be ready by the ballot to dispute dishonesty with honesty and put down demagogy.

A SCENE THAT WAS NOT BILLED Takes Place When the Curtain of Milt Boyer's Theater Drops

A SOUTHSIDE GHOST

pearance Was Awaited.

ON THE LAST ACT OF ITS LAST PLAY

When the curtain at the Southside theater in Odd Fellows' Hall went down on the last act of "The Counterfeiters," Saturday night, there wasn't one in the straggling audience of half a dozen score of people who dreamed of the little side show that was being enacted behind the scenes while they marched out to the music of a paralyzed orchestra consisting of a cracked plano and a squeaking fiddle, "I demand the immediate payment of salary." "Wait till Monday." "Can't you pay me now?" "No."

"But I must have the money."

"Can't help it."
This is the short but suggestive dialogue, fraught with so much meaning, that took place on the stage. The cast of characters in this drama of real life, that was not put down on the bills, consisted of Manager L. M. Boyer and the several actors and actresses comprising his company.

It was a thrilling situation. A storm of wrath and indignation was brewing in the still air of the theater. The painted trees on the stacked-up scenery seemed to fairly rustle in the fierce breath of the coming on the stacked. outburst. A DEMAND FOR THE CASH.

"For the love of heaven and all that you hold dear, fork over some cash."
"Have to refuse, my dear friend; but give me your permanent address and I'll be sure to send you every cent that's due. Remem ber, I always pay 100 cents on the dollar,' and with a grandiloquent flourish, intended to convey a dramatic effect, Mr. Boyer glided up the stage and made his exit—R. U. E.

The company fixed its cold, gleaming eye on the vanishing gentleman, but none noticed the dark, triumphant ace that gleated at the disappointed troupe from a shadowy background. "Revenged at last!" hissed the mysterious figure, which was none other than W. B. Porter, character actor. "I meant to beat you, my blooming ducks, and now I've fixed Before the plot of this thrilling narrative thickens there are a few facts in connection with the case that should be unfolded. L. M. Boyer was formerly proprietor and manager of three dramatic companies traveling on the road in "Her Greed For Gold." He is now agent for the Preferred Mutual Accident Association, and is connected with theatrical enterprises. Last month be opened up the Southside theater. The Odd Fellows' Hall was fitted up on an attractive plan, and the doors thrown open to dis-tinctly popular prices, 10, 20 and 30 cents, The new amusement resort started out with a grand flourish of trumpets. After a few weeks had rolled by, and no crowded houses to gladden the eyes of ye speculative manager, it dawned upon the vision of Mr.

B. that something was wrong. MYSTIFIED THE MANAGER. Whether the trouble lay in the actors, th show, or some outside agency, he did not know. He was mystified, and could not account for the strange turn of affairs, but one thing was plain and that was that he was losing money.

All sorts of expedients were tried to boom business. Last week Manager Boyer sold tickets to school children at the reduced rate of five cents, but still the auditorium was not half filled. Wednesday, driven to desperation, he offered all the policemen and firemen free tickets, but only a little 1 of boys occupied the se

Matters were assuming a decidedly interesting shape. The luckless manager was almos' ready to give up in despair, when suddenly the mystery was solved. He had in his troupe a characte actor named W R. Porter. Mr. Porter and the rest of the com-pany were not on speaking terms, and an Arctic chilliness froze up hard feelings be-tween them. Finally the majority rebelled, demanded the expulsion of Porter, and the manager bowed to the wishes of his com-

Now comes the dramatic side of the story. Porter swore reveng, and going before the K. of P. and the Association of Amalgamated Glass Workers, is alleged to have enlisted their sympathy by circulating damaging reports as to the character of Boyer's show and the treatment accorded him. Thus the workingmen were induced to stay awas from the Southside theater. Consequently a great many dollars did not flow into the coffers of the management that otherwise would have filled their purses had they not brooked Porter's wrath of vengeance. The result of this theatrical boycott was to plunge Boyer hopelessly into debt, and last Wednesday night the company demand-ed their back pay, but in dramatic parlance, the "ghost did not walk." The mausge stood the actors off till Saturday night, and then occurred what is related at the beginning of this article.

SOME OF THE CLAIMS. Lester Franklin and wi'e, of Brooklyn, N. Y., have an account of $40 against Boyer; Walter C. Bailey and wife, of Pittsburg, $40; Viva Brentwood, also of this city, $18; H. G. St. Clair, New York, $26 75; William St. James and Al Clayton have secured most of that is due them, and have only small amounts coming to them.

With this balance of trade against him, Manager Boyer yesterday morning shook the dust of Pittsburg from his feet, and, in company with his wi e, took the first train for Steubenville, O. Word of his departure reached the company, and immediately last evening the whole troupe, minus two, convened at 2323 Sydney street, Southside, to consider what action they should take to recover their money. A dispatch was received from Boyer stating that they should come on to Steubenville and he would fix things all right, "We're on his trail now," said the heavy villain of the stranded troupe, "and will track him to doom!" The meeting was secret, but it is under-stood that the members of the company have decided on a scheme to recover their overdue salaries, and will spring it on the insuspecting manager at once. They intend to leave the city this morning at 7:30, and will go straight through to Steubenville.

Mr. H. C. St. Claire has taken charge of the troupe, and is confident that a settlement with the manager will be secured.

ON THE ANXIOUS BENCH. These are not the only claims held against the Southside theater proprietor. The Odd Fellows' Association reports a balance of $62 for rent. His boarding house keeper, Charles Rhulandt, on South Eighteenth street, says there are $6 coming to him; John Freund, corner Seventeenth and Curson streets, sold him a carpet which has not yet have read for. Mrs. Budel corner of been paid for; Mrs. Budel, corner of Eighteenth and Carson, $7 board bill, and Mrs. Shafer, Carson, near Twelith, ditto.
"I was the only man who was not lett in the lurch," said Thomas Duff. "I managed the box office for Boyer, and made arrangements to settle up at the close of every per-formance, so that my money was sure. Mr. Boyer wore an Odd Fellows' pin and said he belonged to the order. He approached me once to borrow $140 on the strength of being an Odd Fellow, but I did not see it, and so am on the saie side. He tackled several members of the organization, but no one advanced any cash.

"Boyer started the theater scheme with fair prospects, but when a Southside paper came out with a scathing criticism on the character of his shows, he went under; but if that hadn't occurred there is every reason to believe that he might have prospered toward the fall of the year." SUNDAY AT THE CENTRAL

Mary Ailen and Blanche Davis were arrested at the corner of Soho and Brady streets at a late hour Saturday night, talksing to a number of young men. The officer said the girls were only 16 years of age, were very bad and used foul language. The magistrate gave the girls a reprimand and a warning and then discharged them. Charles Norton, George Massey, James Nesbitt, James Robinson and William Me-Millin were arrested by Officer Lester for corner loafing, and the magistrate fined them $4 and costs.
