the Imperial Council will be given next Monday in the Monongahela House. Delegates and nobles from the following "But I like to see these generous manifestations. It is a healthy sign. The people are becoming interested. It is now pro-posed to have an art exhibition in the Carnegie Library every year, and just as soon as the Allegheny Councils decide who shall control the building the Art Committee will go ahead. It has been also for the works of local artists. At the last display they were rigidly excluded, to prevent all bad feeling. It might be ar-ranged to give the Pittsburg artists one side of the room. Do you know the contract of the prevent and the prevent and the pittsburg artists one side Do you know the owners o fine paintings are very particular about the company in which their pictures are found? They will gladly loan their paintings when they are given to understand that no cheap pictures are to be placed side by side with their own. No man who has a costly work would care to have it covered with a lot of cheap ones. "The peculiarities of people in going over galleries are amusing. As soon as I look at a man examining pictures, I can tell if he knows anything about them or not. The one who doesn't will wander all over a colcal lection with his eyes and see nothing in particular, while a good judge of art will soon single out a few of the best pictures in a room, and there he will be found before them studying the good points and getting at the sentiment.

like wildfire. The almost phenomenal success this sale has scored thus far is due only to the extreme satisfaction of the people who have been wise enough to take advantage of it. Pleased, tickled and delighted with the bargains they received, they told their story of Keech's enterprise and liberality to their friends and neighbors and thus persuaded these to also refurnish their rooms and replenish their wardrobes at this great Building and Extension Sale. This week the enthusiasm will run higher than ever. Hundreds of housekeepers will avail themselves of this rare opportunity during the next six days. Their interest has now been fully awakened; their purchasing fever has been aroused. Some will buy Furniture, others will invest in Carpets, many will fill their wants in Housefurnishing Goods, while a goodly number will select something in the Cloak or Clothing line. One and all can rest assured on a big saving of money. Keech, as is an undeniable fact, always undersells his would-be competitors from 15 to 25 per cent, but his present prices are simply beyond all comparison and competition. And yet, while this sale will prove a veritable gold mine to all purchasers, it will also effect the purpose for which Keech has intended it, VIZ .: TO SELL THE GOODS BEFORE THEY CAN BE DAMAGED BY THE DUST AND DIRT, the flying brick and timber incidental to the building, enlargement and improvements now in progress. Don't you think it a far wiser course to force the sale of the goods now (even at a small loss) than to run the risk of having them ruined ?

THE PRICE A FACTOR.

"Sometimes you can get people interested in a picture by naming the price. I remember once a young married couple from the country was examining a collection of pic-tures of which I had charge. Finally the young man edged over to me, and nudging me a little, said: 'Say, mister, which one of these pictures costs the most?" I showed him one that was marked $700. 'Oh, Sal,' he cried to his wife, 'come and look at this picture,' and with their eyes sticking out they hovered over that picture as if it was something awful-$700 for a little thing like that paralyzed them. It was the price that caught, and, of course, they, went home and told their neighbors what a valuable paint ing they had seen. I suppose they are talking about it to this day. "Yes, there are some frauds in this business, as in any others. Sometimes a man will use the name of a great artist to sell his picture, but a judge of any experience will soon detect the cheat. A picture may look all right, apparently, but it lacks the individuality of the artist, the delicate shading and touch, and, above all, the sentiment.

SOMETIMES DO POOR WORK.

"If the artist could get these points exnotly he would have no desire to see the other man's name to his work. It frequently happens that recognized great artists often do poor painting. In Europe there are many copyers, men who imi-tate the pictures of others, but their works always are lacking when compared with the original. The size and shapes of objects may be perfect, but that is not all. The churm of the ment of the size in the size and not all. The charm of the muster is not there, and you can't help feeling it.

"Oh, this is a big subject and a life work. We can't expect people to get interested in art in a day. I always have claimed that a good art gallery is of more use to the people than a library. In this age of cheap print-ing books are easily obtained, but it requires work, ability and money to produce fine paintings."

CRIME ON THE INCREASE.

Warden Berlin Finds Evidence of the County's Growth on His Register.

Warden Berlin, of the county jail, is a hospitable man and never reinses to shelter any one who is properly accredited by a committing magistrate. In talking about the accommodations of his hostelry yesterday, he said:

"There are 310 cells in the jail, 40 of them being double, thus affording accommodation for 350 prisoners. We have an average of over 250 prisoners here all the time." it were not for the fact that at least 75 per it were not for the fact that at least to per cent of the persons held for trial at court, obtained bail for their appearance, it would be impossible to accommodate one-half of them, and the jail would have to be greatly enlarged. The Criminal Court is going to be kept basy. Among other offenders we have 18 memberers here now awaiting trial, and there appears to be no falling off in crime. It will soon be necessary, in order to dispose of business, to elect a bench of Inders in this county to try nothing her Judges in this county to try nothing but inal cases."

He says that as people spend the bulk of their lives on their feet, in bed, or like a half shut pocket knife, on the end of their spinal columns, that good shoes, large, warm and comfortable, comfortable chairs, and good beds are of primary importance. He also argues that as soon as a person has reached a point as soon as a person has reached a point where he can live comfortably, he should cease to waste vital force in the accumulation of more wealth than is necessary, and grow old gracefully, and in such a manner that he will not be a nuisance to his family Col. EVEN LAWYERS DISAGREE.

A Jury of Attorneys, and How They Might Decide n Case.

The disagreement of lawyers does not attract attention so as to become proverbial, as in the case of doctors, and their disagreements are not so liable to prove fatal, but from the callow youth who has just come perspiring from the ordeal of undergoing final examination preparatory to being admitted to the bar, to the Judges of Supreme Courts disagreements are almost as common as agreements. In the Silverman case there were two ex-Judges pitted against each other, Judge Neale says that if they had had a jury of lawyers in that case who could have understood the law of evidence, Silverman would have been convicted of the main charge, that the testimony effered to prove shipment direct from the Cincinnati Brewing Company's establishment would not have imposed on legal scumen. On the other hand, Judge Fetterman says he would on this very ground have pre-ferred a jury of lawyers, and cites the rulings of both judges, Acheson and Rayburn, in support of his position. PRESIDENT HARRISON INTERESTED.

A LITTLE REALISTIC. For the next half hour there was a crash and din that seemed to grow louder and louder every minute. The regiments and battery maintained the same position throughout the fight, and the deadly (?) fire they poured out filled the air with vol-umes of smoke. The ferce breath of war seemed to stir in the atmosphere, and the thrilling scene vividly recalled the scenes of actual battle to the veteran soldiers that numbered themsely. mong the speciators.
