Wonderful Progress in the Manufacture of Glass in the United States During a Decade,

PARTICULARLY IN PENNSYLVANIA

An Evident Reason for the Sudden Springing Up of New Towns in a Mushroom-Like Way.

PLATE GLASS GROWING THE FASTEST,

The Increase in That Branch Being 800 Per Cent in the Last Ten Tears.

Much has recently been written of the wonderful growth of various cities, and of the vast development of various local industries, but the following comparative tabular statement relative to the glass industry, carefully compiled from the best accessible sources of information, affords much reason for national pride, and definitely marks the measure of material progress and industrial development. The figures for 1880 are taken from Joseph D. Week's report on the manufacture of glass, tenth census, volume 2. The compilation below was made by Mr. F. M. Gessner, of the National Glass Budget, in the forthcoming issue of which journal it will appear:

The number of pots operating during 1890 are necessarily estimated, are figured from the number of furnaces, allowing 12 pots to each furnace. The estimate would appear to be much too low, inasmuch as it shows an increase of less than 100 per cent; whereas, the number of furnaces, most of which have been increased from 10 to 15 and 16 pots per furnace during the past ten years, show an increase of over 78 per cent. OTHER THINGS TO CONSIDER.

The number of furnaces reported for 1890 does not include several in course of construction at North Jeannette, one at Butler and one at Punxsutawney. Besides, the inand one at Punzsutawney. Besides, the in-creased number of continuous and intermittent tanks in operation, together with the quicker melting power of natural gas and improved furnaces, must all be taken into consideration in any estimate of the comparative productivity of American furnaces, now and ten years ago. The same number of furnaces, with enlarged and faster melting pots, would produce at least one-fifth more glass than was possible in 1880. Hence it is safe to conclude that the highest, rather than the lowest, figures given are near-est the truth.

RAPID STRIDES OF THE INDUSTRY. The following table shows at a glance the rapid strides of the industry: Window Glass.

operation; besides, the large tanks now in course of construction by the Chambers-McKne Company at Jeannette, which will be equal to 56 pots, and the 40-pot tanks of the Hartford 66 pots, and the 40-pot tanks of the Hartford City, Ind., Glass works, both of which will no doubt be in operation before the close of the present year, will show an increase of nearly 100 per cent during the past ten years.

While lowe dropped from the list of manufacturing States, Kansas, though not recently operating, built one furnace: Wyoming Territiory added one, and little Delaware two furnaces, Indiana and Oblo more than quadrupled their production. New Jersey almost doubled her capacity, Massachusetts dropped from four to one furnace, and Pennsylvania adds ten furnaces, and leads the list with 44 furnaces, the largest number of all the States. Ohio shows the largest increase of all, naving sprung from 6 to 27 furnaces.

The green glass industry also shows a remarkable increase, having added 35 pots since 1880. Massachusetts and Mississippi, with one furnace each, have retired from the business, but Georgia, Alabama, Colorado, Missouri and Utah have entered the list. Green Glass,

The above table needs explanation, 1 be noted that the column of 1880 shows be noted that the column of 1880 shows two furnaces for Massachusetts and one for Kentucky, but it must be remembered that only rough plates and skylight glass was being manufactured in the former State, while the one tailing establishment at Louisville, Kg., turned out only 20,681 square feet of rough plate, its only product during the census year, and it entirely suspended operations shortly afterward. Massachusetts to-day manufactures very fine antique and Cathedral glass, while Ohio, New York, Indiana, Illinois and Pennsylvania have engaged and are successfully manufacturing fine art titles, architectural and Cathedral glass, plain, celored, ground and etched, and especially does the Miss saippi Glass Company, of St. Louis, Mo., manufacture colored Cathedral and highly ornamented architectural glass which has won from foreign specialists just commendation and unstinted praise.

which has wee from foreign specialists just commendation and unstrinted praise.

This entire line of manufacture is the growth of the past ten years, and though the industry is yet in its infancy, it is well established and will undoubtedly be permanently successful. MOST STARTLING OF ALL. The most startling development that the en-tire census will show, has undoubtedly taken place in the plate glass industry, as will be seen Top line being dimlayed counts as two.

coach builders of the Quaker City are making estimates on hids for 16 coaches to be built for the Pittsburg Traction Company. They will be patterned something after the tally-ho coaches now running on Broad street, Philadelphia, and in New York, and will cost in the neighborhood of $1,000 each. The 'busses will be double deckers, and seats will be arranged on top for 'outside' passengers. It is proposed to have the 'busses run on North Highland and Penn avenues east of Shady lane. The idea is to shut out the Duquesne Traction Company, and hold the patronage they now enjoy over these thoroughfares. It is also proposed to have three horses attached to each 'bus, as two would be insufficient.

If the company puts on the 'busses, it will have to purchase about 150 horses and build stables and sheds. The total cost of the proposed scheme would be in the neighborhood of $100,000. Whether it will be carried out or not is a question. It is thought people will not get on the 'busses to ride to the cable cars when they can step onto an electric car and ride into town without change of cars.
