WINONA, MISS., June 21 .- The whole State is aroused over the question of suffrage, to be discussed by the approaching institutional convention, and it is evidently the determination of the whites to eliminate the negro as a citizen. People of the North have no conception of the feeling on this question in this State and the bitter strife it has aroused. The majority of the negroes have not made much objection to their proposed disfranchisement, on the ground that it is useless and wiser not to do so. But the leading colored men are now

One-Half the World Doesn't Know How the Other Half Live.

Pedestrians walking up and down the busy thoroughfares of our large city can form no conception of the busy hands and active brains that are at work in the large, roomy structures that have sprung up on all sides. The fact is, the production of iron and glass, coal and gas are so closely identified with Pittsburg as to make these words almost synonyms of our city. Thus we frequently hear Pittsburg spoken of as "Iron City," "Smoky City" or "Gas City." No wonder, then, that strangers expect to find the town made up of huge furnaces, tall smoke stacks, immense derricks, and the air full of the noise of heavy, rumbling machinery. While all this can be seen and heard in the outlying districts, and on some of the many side streets, there are thousands of busy heads and hands in the handsome and imposing structures along the main streets. Go with us a moment to the heart and center of Pittsburg, the intersection of Fifth Avenue and Smithfield Street, where Kaufmanns' Gigantic Establishment looms up-a veritable palace of enterprise and industry. Invite your stranger friend to enter, and we'll point out to you and him why Pittsburg and Allegheny have swelled their population from 156,000 and 76,000, respectively, to 240,000 and 125,000; why thousands of new homes have been erected and who occupy them. All this and more will be of interest to your stranger friend, who has been lead to believe our city was a pile of red brick, white shutters and dried up-fossils.

The several hundred persons busily flitting to and fro behind merchandise, stacked counters and tables are experienced salesmen and salesladies, while up in the workshops a small army of cutters and tailors are nimbly and skillfully plying their vocation. In this great establishment any Man, Woman or Child can be fitted out from head to foot, according to their particular means, requirements and tastes.

Verily, the doctrine that the attractions of Pittsburg are confined to her mills and mines, factories and foundries, oil and gas wells, may do "to tell the marines." A ramble through Kaufmanns' Model and Mammoth Outfitting Establishment will knock that argument high-er than "Gilderoy's Kite."
