Mr. Oliver expects that the official return of Allegheny City's population will be made inside of a month. This will be the actual count, not an estimate, and will come from the Census Bureau at Washington. He expects also that the population of the big cities in the country will be made known in that time. As Alleghenv City has turned the 100,000 point she will become a second-class city, and will be in the same class as Pittsburg.

Mr. Oliver, who is, as most people know, a member of the Allegheny County bar, sticks to the professional code and refuses to answer legal questions without being assured of his fee, and, therefore, would not state if Allegheay City could accept the provisions of the charter for second-class ies upon the figures given out by the Census Burean, or if it would be necessary to wait until the formal report was made. Oliver does not think it possible to organize the entire county into one city, but he thinks Alleghenv City and Pittsburg should be annexed, and would not care whether the name of the new metropolis was Allegheny or Pittsburg. He says the annexation should have taken place in 1867.

SOME PEOPLE MISSED.

A communication was received from a gentleman residing on South Mellon street, East End, stating that every person living on that street claim that the census enumer-ator has not called at their houses. An investigation among the people on that street showed that no house on that street had been visited by the enumerator. Among the families missed were those of J. S. Pollock, J. P. Packer, Lewis Hartman, George A Merrit, J. S. Dugan, James Lamon all 28 persons were met with that had not been counted. These were at different parts of the street, and it is evident, from what the people say, that none of the houses on that street have been visited.

Oliver Wickline, a well-to-do contractor of No. 19 Wickline avenue, Alleghenv, has refused to answer the census enumerat questions, and a warrant has been issued for arrest. He thought the Governmen wanted to know too much about his affairs. The population of McKeesport is nearly 21,000. Coraopolis, with a population of over 1,000, shows only one death in a year, and no maimed or disabled persons.

IT'S THEIR OWN BUSINESS.

TRON MANUFACTURERS OBJECT TO MR. PORTER'S OUESTIONS.

They Regard Many of the Operies as Preposterous, and may That Answers Would Serve No Useful Purpose-Much of the Information Required Already Published.

The manufacturers of iron and steel in Pittsburg have about concluded that they will be continually deluged with inquiries from the Census Department concerning their industries. The regular local census enumerator and the specialist have already visited them and made life a burden by asking questions, and now Superintendent Porter has prepared another consignment of inquiries which he proposes to have them DUNWER.

The interrogatories are 12 in number and embrace almost every conceivable detail of the manufacturing industries of the United States. This special branch of inquiry is under the charge of Dr. W. M. Sweet, of Philadelphia, a noted specialist in this particular department.

It is the general opinion of the gentlemen engaged in the iron and steel business in city that the information sought to be obtained can serve no useful purpose to the general public and very little to manufacturers. Those who have seen the question think they are too inquisitorial in tone, and smack too much of an inquiry into a man's personal business.

WILL BE OF NO BENEFIT. Mr. Macintosh, of the firm of Macintosh & Hemphill, said:

I cannot see how these questions will benefit either the people at large or the Government in any way. They seem to me to be absurd in the extreme, and I am of the opinion that they will be generally disregarded by iron and steel manufacturers. They are of a statistical area. It furnishes less than 1,000 lights Frank B. Smith, of Smith Bros., the present. steel manufacturers, spoke as follows: AN EXTENSIVE SYSTEM.

The fourth, tifth, seventh and eighth querie are decidedly objectionable. They seek in formation which I do not regard as publ formation which I do not regard as public property. Of course, assurance is given that nothing will be disclosed regarding individual firms, but that does not preclude the possibil-ity of some outsider obtaining access to the records. For that reason it is risky for manulose all the details asked for by Mr. Porter." Said A. M. Byers, iron manufacturer:

I do not think there is any law that will com pel one to answer some of the new questions For my part I do not propose to give any in formation which belongs to us.

The eves of the community are now turned toward Allegheny. On the 17th of July Pittsburg's sister city proposes to celebrate its fiftieth birthday. This fact is awakening keen interest in industrial circles. Citizens are manifesting pride in the progin the use of the same machinery, but on the ress of their municipality since the days of '40. City Councils have shown their appreother hand in case of competition the Philadelphia Gas Company could, in turn, make any new electric lighting project weary by the low prices at which it could, if it chose, ciation of the enterprise by appropriating the sum of $5,000 for the use of the Semi-Centennial Committee. The electrical and natural gas display and the illumination of towers and parks will be novel and beautiful, and on a scale of mugnificence never before attempted in this portion of the country. The daylight procession will be a leading attraction, presenting in martial array, uniformed staffs, bands of music, military organizations, civic and singing societies, turners and athletes, guests, county and city officials, mayors and x-mayors, city fathers and guardians. Displays by the fire, water, police and other city departments will all be found in line, besides the industrial division. Meetings are held every week in City Hall to make preparations for the event, and the outlook is favorable to a successful celebration.

QUITE A FIGHTING YOUTH. He Holds His Own Against a Man Who Interfered With Him.

A boy named John Kelly, who is employed at the foundry of McConway, Torley & Co., on Forty-eighth street, while on his way from work, yesterday afternoon, saw a man abusing a lad. Kelly told the man he ought to take one of his size, and the man left his small opponent and attacked Kelly. Kelly proved a good man for a boy, and knocked the man down twice. The man then picked up a cobblestone and struck Kelly on the chin with it, cutting a very severe gash. The man, whose name could not be learned, made his escape.
