SOME OF THE PROMINENT LEADERS,

And the Saunts in Which the Faithful Do Most Freely Congregate.

NEW YORK, July 6 .- The American Soeialist-not the Anarchist-has come to stay. In New York he has already become formidable power. He incurred the displeasure of the politicians of all parties ten years ago, when he refused to take sides and formed a little political organization of his own. He has been repeatedly clubbed by the police, arrested and sent to jail, denounced by the authorities and driven from post to pillar by labor unions, and yet he is stronger, more active and influential to-day

It is hardly necessary to state that he has an army of enthusiasts and sympathizers behind. The success of Bellamy's book, "Looking Backward," shows at least hal! a million people are interested in social reform and have a subdued fondness for the first ideas laid down by Lassalle and Godin, Beyond this there is a voluminous literature in English, French, and especially German, which is socialistic in character and teaching, and which has an ever-widening circulation among the reading classes.

PRACTICAL SYMPATHY. An illustration of this sympathy is found in the large amount of money nominally subscribed, but really contributed, to every socialistic enterprise started in the metropolis in the past eight years. The commercial settlement at Topolobampo Bay, Mexico, which, as was anticipated, turned out a pitiable failure, involved the sinking of not less than $25,000 borrowed capital. Much, if not most of this amount, has come from well-to-do people, who would regard it as an insult to be called a Socialist, or even to be accused of socialistic leanings.

To see the New York Socialist at his best, you should visit him at his club on Fourth street, near Lafayette place. The neighborhood is a crowded one and lies just west of the densely populated Eastside. The house is an old-fashioned building, which was erected when people liked spacious rooms and high ceilings, and long before the mod-ern flat came into vogue. An extension on the rear of the lot increases its capacity and enables it to accommodate a small army of

The interior of the house is exquisitely the interior of the house is exquisitely clean and neat, and the furniture and decorations are cheap, solid and serviceable. On the main floor is a meeting room, which will sent about 300 people. The rest of the establishment remains as it was when used for dwelling purposes. Every room is rented out. One is used by a tailor's union, another by a wood carvers' club and a third by a council of a bakers' trade organization. More than four organizations have offices in the place and as each has from 50 to 800 members the representative character of the tenants is easily seen.

DAY AND NIGHT. In the daytime the club is quiet, but the nouse is busy as a bee hive. The management of strikes, boycotts and lockouts, the collection of fees and assessments, the paying out of benefit funds, the securing of employment for the unemployed, the compromist of personal and commercial quarrels and disculties, the reception of visitors and friends from out of town and foreign unions, and the management of social events are but a small portion of the business done between 8 and 4 o'clock each day.

At night things are reversed. The offices are deserted by their tenants, except where overwork compels the burning of the nocturnal oil and business dwindles to nothing, while the club springs into activity and life. The members drop in, sometimes alone, but more often with their sweethearts, wives, sisters and children, and spend the evening in the mild manner for which the German is famous the world

Beside the club there are scores of beer gardens, where the Socialists center every evening, and where they do an immens amount of work in converting men and women to their school of faith. The most ous is Justus Schwab's, in First street. It is a narrow basement in a tall tenement house. It is filled up in the ordinary Teutonic style with a wilderness of chairs and tables. All sorts of beverages are dispensed from a small bar, and on the table are a dozen newspapers and periodicals. A feature of the place is a large bulletin board on the wall in front of the bar. On it are written in chalk the latest Socialistic poems. On this board appeared Swinburne's famous lines as soon as they were printed. The favorite bard, however, is William Morris, who of late seems to have become unusually prolific of political doggerel. A PICTURESQUE CHARACTER.

Schwab himself is a very picturesque character. He is a tall, athletic and handsome blonde, who looks like one of the old Norse Vikings. To a large culture he adds a keen wit and humor as well as a strong personal magnetism. He is remarkably domestic in his habits and wherever found is well-nigh certain to be accompanied by his wife and some of his children. The for-handsomely.

Before what his friends call his martyrdom he had a small business and an equally small bank account. To-day his business is very large and his invested wealth cannot be less than $40,000. Much of this has come from the pockets of sight-seers from every part of the world, who would never have heard of him but for the war waged by the noon.
police and politicians. The sight-seers at Ap one time were quite a nuisance, averaging 20 a day and behaving as if Schwab were a wild man of the woods instead of a genial man who rides a hobby:

man who rides a hobby.

More curious, although less famous than Schwab's, is the "Castle," a gloomy and forbidding place on Fifth street, near the East river. It is the headquarters of several musical organizations—and it is filled by day and crowded by night. Its construction is worthy of a Nihilist lodge in Russia. The rear wall of the saloon is a solid mass of heavy timber and steel brease, the supplements. musical organizations—and it is filled by day and crowded by night. Its construction is worthy of a Nichilist lodge in Russia. The rear wall of the saloon is a solid mass of heavy timber and steel braces, through which a strong door, so small that only one man can squeeze through it at a time, admits into a dark corridor. From this a second door like the first allows ingress into the meeting room.

whereabouts. Mr. Wright called at the house where his niece was employed, and Miss Wright opened the door in response to bis ring. The girl began to cry, but her uncle's forgiveness was quickly given. The pretty runaway said she was already tired of the life of a kitchen girl, and on five minutes' notice she quit her place and went to the principal hotel in the city with her uncle. Mr. Wright and his niece returned to Jamestown to-day.

FALSE APPEARANCES.

The entire place is redolent of suspicion, fear and hostility. As a matter of fact, the proprietor, employes and patrons are just the reverse. They are natty, clean-shaven and amiable people when the lead of the propriety of the lead and amiable people, who laugh and sing more than 90 Americans out of a 100. They are Socialists by inheritance and from education abroad. They have built their "castle" just as they would have built it in those lands where all reform is treason and all attempts to better one's condition are felonies.

As to leaders, the Socialists can give As to leaders, the Socialists can give points to all the political parties of Christendom—all are leaders, and followers there are none. They have an intense individuality which does not brook the management of a "machine." Despite this skirmish line or mob condition, a number of them tower up above the rest through intellectual, oratoric or executive ability. Of this limited aristocracy there is not one but could be made the subject of an interesting study. Not alone the foreigners, but also the native-born, are the heroes of actual dramas, which, though seldom or ever published, wield a tremendous influence for good or evil upon modern society.

Of the great Socialists of New York, probably the most brilliant is J. R. Buchanan, the writer and orator. He is a tall, slender, but well-built man of about 40, with a clearcut, pallid face, which in the time of the Reformation would have been mistaken for that of Calvin. He is an admirable writer, that of Calvin. He is an admirable writer, and earns a handsome livelihood with his pen. He is a still better speaker, and has the rare knack or genius of being able to please an audience of day laborers as well as one of scholars.

A MAN WITH A HISTORY. In Denver, years ago, he stopped the Anarchists who proposed to remove by dynamite the millionaires of that famous silver capital, and afterward in Chicago he was capital, and alterward in Chicago he was the only Socialist leader who was not suspected by the police or the authorities. His last great public work was the closing of the Southwest strike, in which he succeeded in placating both the corporations and the strikers. Next to Buehanan, the most intellectual of the Socialist leaders is Charles Sethers the discinguished book expect Sotheran, the distinguished book expert. He is one of the best known men in New York, having an acquaintanceship remarkable for its variety. He came into prominence as an author in 1873, and late in 1876, when he, with Madame Blavatsky. 1876, when he, with Madame Blavatsky, started the Theosophic Society. In 1877 he was the first to expose that lady's jugglery. From that time on he has kept himself before the public as a cataloguist of vast ability. He is an Englishman by birth and shows his origin in a herculean frame, blonde complexion and easy-going but British manners.

Another environs character is Serging She-

Another curious character is Sergius She-vitch. Imagine a typical Presbyterian theological student, smiling, cynical, cul-tured and well bred, a fine-looking but caretured and well bred, a fine-looking but care-worn face, a long, wry frame and a melodi-ous voice, and the man is before you. Though brilliant, he is unpopular to a high degree. The people who are similar to him in tastes and tendencies reject him because of his doctrines and beliefs. The people whom he leads reject him because he is an aristocrat. No man has done more for socialism in the United States than he, in Seventh street, near the Bowery. She is not over 25, is ideally beautiful, and is probably the best read person of her age in the metropolis. She never speaks in public and seldom writes upon socialistic doctrines, but devotes all her leisure time to reading, work and study. She has a hundred followers, who always reverence her. She is an extremist in her opinions, believing in passive anarchism rather than socialism or

Mrs. Cynthia Leonard deserves mention at this point. She is best known to the public as the mother of that charming opera star, Lillian Russell, but, possesses an individuality which will be remembered when the stage favorite is forgotten. Her entire existence is given up to social reforms, in the pursuit of which she does more work per diem than the poorest paid car conductor. She belongs to a dozen societies, including a socialistic section, and never tires of writing and speaking in support of her hobby. Old friends and foes of Mrs. Leonard are Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Hinton. Colonel

Hinton is an iconoclast from the beginning. He was a John Brown man before and a fierce Unionist during the Rebellion. He organized the first regiment of negro troops, and sed them to the seat of war. Since then he has been identified with every radical movement. During the Harrison-Cleveland campaign there was a split in the Socialist ranks, and Hinton led a very large number into the Republican fold. It may have been a reward or not, but the new adminis-tration expressed its appreciation of his worth by giving him a snug office in Washington, which he still holds. He is short, is a short, thick-set, gray-haired man, who may be anywhere from 40 to 60 years of age. He has been here since 1884, when it is said the choice was offered him of emigrating or going to a political prison. He thanked the police and took the former. Then there is Christian Growland, the author, who is tall, black-eved and mournful looking, and looks partly like a poet and partly like a dyspeptic. He is very gentle and very popular partly like a poet and partly like a dyspep-tic. He is very gentle and very popular. By attacking Growland some years ago and calling him "spy," "renegade," "sneak" and other happy Anarchist titles, Johann Most first aroused the great comity to him-self which has since stripped him of nearly all his influence.

all his influence. There is an army more—Ernest Boehme, Otto Boehme, Joseph Holler, Jacob Brain-tree, the 30 chief delegates of the Central Labor Federations and the founders and officers of the Brooklyn Labor Lyceum. There are a few points worthy of being remembered in regard to the Socialists. Suppression doesn't suppress, but strengthens them. They are growing rapidly in New York and every other large city. Where they used to be exclusively for-eigners, the Socialists now include a great many native Americans. Against every odds, and without wealth, patronage and influence, they have built up an organiz tion of 40,000 hard-working men and women who earnestly believe in the "New Civiliza-tion" and the "Impending Revolution."

his wife and some of his children. The former, by the way, is a very pretty and clever woman, who has contributed largely to his success. Schwab has paid the penalty of his opinions, having been clubbed by the police, arrested time and again, and on several occasions assaulted by hoodlums of the Eastside. His pluck was so great that he always came out with flying colors and gained a sympathy that has paid him very handsomely.

Service as a Domestic.

CLEVRLAND, July 6.—Miss May Wright, whose uncle, James Wright, is a wealthy merchant at Jamestown, N. Y., ran away from boarding school one week ago and came to Cleveland in search of an adventure. BRIGANDS IN ITALY

Are by No Means Entirely a Matter of History Even Now.

THE CAPTURE OF A MILLIONAIRE The Was Forced to Pay a Round Ransom to Secure His Release.

ONE BAND CONFINED IN AN IRON CAGE

ROME, June 28.-Those who fondly imigine that the Italian banditti belong to a y-gone age, and that they no longer figure anywhere but on the operatic and dramatic stage, would speedily become convinced of the fallacy of their views by a visit either to the town of Frosinone, not two hours' ride from here on the high road to Naples, or, if they should prefer it, by a trip to the ancient city of Termini in Sicily. At Frosinone they would see a gang of 33 blood-thirstylooking brigands, male and female, heavily chained and confined like wild beasts in a great iron cage constructed for their particular benefit; while at Termini they would have the pleasure of making the acquaint-ance of and listening to the tale of woe re-lated by Mr. Arrigo, one of the wealthiest bankers and most extensive landowners of

He has just effected his release from eaptivity of 21 days in the mountains by eaptivity of 21 days in the mountains by the payment of a ransom of $100,000 in cold cash to the brigands who had kid-naped him. Termini is a town of 26,000 inhabitants, about half an hour's distance from Palermo, at which ancient scaport Signor Arrigo has entertained many United States naval officers when their ships touched states haval officers when their stips to dened there. Four weeks ago, while spending an afternoon in visiting one of his estates in the neighborhood, accompanied by his bailiff, he perceived a little squad of six carabineire, or gendarmes, halt before the gate of the villa where he was sitting.

A CLEVER STRATAGEM. an aristocrat. No man has done more for socialism in the United States than he, and no one has received less gratitude in return.

A REMARKABLE LEADER.

Most remarkable of all in this drama of daily life is Dr. Gertrude Kelly, who has a large and lucrative practice as a physician in Seventh street, near the Bowery. She is not over 25, is ideally beautiful, and is professed object of holding them until he had convinced himself by a personal inspection of the document that the permit had been duly granted. Having thus obtained possession of all the weapons in the place, the gendarmes announced their intention of placing the banker and his bailiff under arrest, and of taking them as prison-ers to Palermo in order to authenticate the veracity, of their statements.

The two captives were accordingly bound and blindfolded, and were taken in broad daylight, not down toward the coast, but up into the San Cologeri, mountain, where for the first time it dawned upon them that the men dressed in the uniform of gendarmes or police were members of the famous band of brigands that had long intested the district.
The bailiff was soon set at liberty and sent to Palermo for the purpose of informing the partners and relatives of the banker as to the amount of money required for his ran-som. Twenty-one days elapsed before the negotiations on the subject of the latter was completed, and during this time the captive millionaire lived in a mountain cave, sleep-ing on a bundle of hay, and forced to con-tent himself with a diet of black bread, fruit and a cheap but very powerful Marsala

THE RANSOM PAID OVER.

The ransom money has now been paid over to the bandits in full and the banker restored to his anxious friends at Palermo. A funny quid pro quo took place on the day of his release. He had been turned adrift by his captors at the foot of the mountain, and worth by giving him a song office in Washington, which he still holds. He is short, stocky, long-haired and long-bearded, a finished writer, a good speaker and a very companionable man.

NEW FACE IN THE RANES.

A new face in the ranks is Moses Oppenheimer, the editor of a small local paper. He is a short, thick-set, gray-haired man, who may be anywhere from 40 to 60 years of age.

his captors at the foot of the mountain, and had not gone far when he appeared to meet a patrol of three carabineiri. So ragged, unkempt and generally disreputable did he appear to them that the worthy gendarmes were convinced that he was one of the band of banditti for whom they were hunting, while he, on his side, taught by sad experience, was equally confirmed in his belief that the gendarmes were nothing but brigands in disguise.

It was not until the police station at the gate of Palermo was reached that the carabinieri became assured of his identity and consented to cut the cords with which they had secured him. Owing to the prominen and rank of Signor Arrigo, the Government is displaying unusual energy in the pursuit of the brigands, who for many years past have infested the picturesque country around about Palermo, and although none of the actual capters of M. Arrigo has yet been caught, several persons, including a lawyer and a priest, have been arrested on the suspicion of being affiliated with the

A DESPERATE DEED. With regard to the 33 brigands confined with regard to the so brights confined in the iron cage at Frosinone, there are no less than 470 separate charges against them, most of them for murder, burglary and highway robbery. They are all natives and inhabitants of Artena, a mountain town not an hour's ride from here, which has, since the sixteenth century, possessed the most evil reputation of any place in the penin-sula. Mayors of the town have fallen beneath the stilleto of assassins.

Almost the entire population of the place are more or less directly engaged in brigandage, and the chief of the band, who is included among the prisoners in the cage of Frosinone, is one of the wealthiest and most respected municipal councillors of Artena. His name is Pasquale Villani, his fortune amassed by highway robbery amounts to $30,000, and his fame as a brigand dates back to the days when Pius IX still exercised temporal sway over Rome. For Pasquale, though still hale and hearty and ready as ever for any deed of villany, is old and gray-headed, and stands on record as having during the course of his long career committed 42 murders, 62 robberies and 184 assaults with intent to maim, and kill. a Child From Drowning. WILERSBARRE, PA., July 6.—John Moody, colored, was drowned in the Sus-quehanna this afternoon while trying to save a child who had fallen into the water. Moody had taken two white children belonging to a neighbor for a walk along the river bank. A short distance above the Kingston bridge he placed the little ones in a boat, which was moored to the shore by a long chain, and began swinging the boat around for the amusement of the children. The little on the stern who sat near the wall fell into the water, and Moody at once arranging in after it. sat near the wall fell into the water, and Moody at once sprang in after it.

A crowd of people rushed down the bank and one of them swam out to where the child was struggling and brought it to the shore. The negro never rose after his fatal plunge. There is a strong eddy at that point, and, being a poor swimmer, Moody was drowned.

A Mess in Clothing.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

At this time of the year manufacturers try to push off goods that particular stores wouldn't take. They get the best prices they can, and let goods go. They tempt stores to buy them-for a price.

It makes a mess of selling clothing. It's expected peo-ple will buy solely because the prices sound small. They injure buyer and seller.

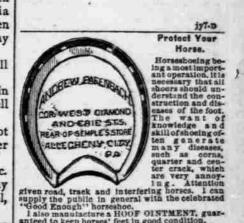

We have our own make only. Always a solid and $20 and $25 PARIS ROBES at $10-the Paris Robes are to go at | well-known value in that. We don't have time nor desire to help clothing we don't know to get sold. Our own we'll guarantee: for high quality-
