

ORANGEMEN ALL OUT

They Parade in Force and Surprise Both Their Friends and Foes by an Excellent Turnout.

THREE THOUSAND PERSONS IN LINE

Memories of the Old Land and Old Times Recalled 'Midst the Leafy Shades of Hulton Grove.

TWENTY THOUSAND PICKICKERS THERE

A Frantic Pickpocket Captured and Sent for the Day to the Lockup.

The turnout of the Orangemen yesterday, in parade, commemorating the two hundredth anniversary of the battle of Aughrin and the restoration of Protestant ascendancy consequent on the defeat of James the Second in 1690, was a surprise alike to themselves and to those whose views ran in a different direction. It was not expected that the parade would have been longer than last year's, and the fact that it was, numerically three times stronger, must be taken as evidence of a steady growth of the order in this section of the State and Eastern Ohio.

The parade was in the order of the strength of the Keystone District is placed at about 3,500 and of this number about 3,000 joined in the parade and of the demonstration it is only necessary to say that it was marked by good order, steady marching and for the absence of comment of any kind which characterized the crowds along the line of march. The various lodges turned out in full paraphernalia, gorgeous in red, blue and orange scarfs, and with banners resplendent with golden devices. The latter bore such mottos as "William and Washington," "Derry, Aughrin and the Boyne," "We Maintain the Union," etc.

ALL OF ONE MIND

The paraders, their relatives and friends and the public in general who had an idea of their own hands, were of one mind in getting out of the city as soon as possible and making the most of the somewhat cooler shades of Hulton Grove. Here by far the greatest number of the holiday seekers lined their way; those who had elected to picnic to themselves, at Alliquippa being comparatively few in number. It is estimated that fully 20,000 people passed through the gates into the Grove. The ticket sales at the entrance between 9,000 and 10,000 tags, and as these were given only in the male portion, the estimate is probably not wide of the mark. There must have been, including babies in arms and children of every age, at least twice as many women as men on the ground. The ticket sales at the depot state that there were 3,000 tickets sold for Hulton, but the checking at the gate would be the best guide as to the number.

There was a marked absence of the overcrowding which usually characterizes a picnic train, line, without doubt, to the serenity and dispatch with which the transportation was handled. After the comfortable cool days of Thursday and Friday, the return yesterday of the terrific temperature of the earlier portion of the week was not hailed with joy. The leafy shelter of the grove was all the more welcome in contrast to the glare in the open, the foliage being so soft as to throw an interrupted canopy over theeward. Everything was in favor of a good time, and everybody present, excepting one unfortunate who passed the day in the lockup, seemed to derive full enjoyment from the opportunity.

A PROLIFIC PICNIC

This much being said about the Orangemen's picnic, there is very little more that can be added. It was like any other picnic, and to recount the details would be to tell the readers of THE DISPATCH of scenes they are familiar with. Perhaps, despite the determined effort of the mercenary to top the picnics, most interest centered in the dancing platform. Director Samuel Beatty and his Missouri Orchestra played such tempting dance music, so frequently and in such good time, that the floor was not vacant for one minute during a day which commenced at 12 o'clock and ended at 10 o'clock at night. And persistently the dancers kept at it. When not engaged in the "mazy" they indulged themselves, varied only by ceasing to drink lemonade to again "trip it lightly." There were young misses who had never danced before, and there were young men who had been watching other men doing so without finding out how it was done. And of course they all joined in and danced, and when anybody bumped into their neighbors, and against each other, and caused other dancers to smile secretly, until finally overcome by a knowledge of "how not to do it" they tumbled out of doors in search of lemonade and wilted, comfortably, on the grass. Then there was a gallant display of color.

THE ORANGE EVERYWHERE

Orange red with red, and red with blue, and both in turn with orange, which was visible everywhere, sticking out of coat pockets, at the neck, in wide scarfs on the shoulder, in the trimmings of the dainty white costumes of the dainty demoneses, and in the lemonade and cider, colored so in keeping, of course, with the prevailing sentiment. Then there were several old-fashioned awnings, and there were swung up and for all day long. Girls mounted just

PROUD OF HIS FRAUD.

A Philadelphia Man Who Turns Coffee Beans Out of Flour, and Isn't

AFRAID TO ADVERTISE HIS GOODS.

Pittsburg Coffee Roasters Warning Their Customers Against

AN OPEN AND BAREFACED SWINDLE

A man, said by Mr. George I. Whitney to be a cousin of the one who first made wooden nutmegs, is making some kind of artificial coffee in Philadelphia, and it has found its way to this city. It might pay coffee consumers to examine their berries and find whether they are being imposed upon. Abreckles & Co. have some of the bogus beans on exhibition, and Messrs. Flood & Edsall showed a reporter of THE DISPATCH some of them, which might deceive not only "the very elect," but a model housewife as well, mixed in the proportion of 75 per cent genuine to 25 per cent bogus. The manufacturer's disingenuous circular reads as follows: "DEAR SIR—I send you a sample of imitation coffee. It is a manufactured bean, and composed of flour. You can easily mix 15 per cent of this substitute with genuine coffee that ranges in price from 25 cents to 50 cents. It will improve the flavor of the same. It granulates the same as coffee. It is the most complete composition that can be made. It is packed in barrels, weight about 170 pounds to the barrel. By the use of our bean you can increase your profit 15 cents per bushel. It improves the flavor. Try a sample barrel, price, 15 cents per bushel. No return. Send free of charge and insured against moth and fire. Duquesne Hat and Fur Co., 445 WOOD STREET, Third door from Fifth avenue. jy13-84

DEAR SIR—I send you a sample of imitation coffee.

Several years ago a Cincinnati reporter, while investigating the methods of bogus coffee makers, came across an Italian who, armed with a tin mold something after the shape of a potato peeler, was scooping out a very fair facsimile of a coffee bean from raw potatoes and putting it through a glazing process similar to that which roasters employ with genuine coffee. This was an offense that might be particularly excused, on the same plea advanced by the storied mother—it was "a very little fraud—but this in Philadelphia is one of gigantic dimensions. It is one that can be very successfully worked on poor people. A poor man's wife, who is compelled by force of circumstances to provide a table for a large family on $4 a week—thousands in this city are forced to do so—falls into the trap readily. She is offered coffee 2 cents a pound under the regular rate, with an assurance that it is just as good as any other. Two dollars a year saving is an item to such. She may or may not discover that her coffee, adulterated 25 per cent, is weaker than it should be, but if she does make the discovery she is apt to be consoled by the reflection that the family live through it and she has a small balance saved. The woman who has been used to the best coffee, and who has expended $500 a year, knows nothing of the trials of a laborer's wife, to whom such a sum means luxury. Abreckles & Co. have sounded the tocsin in their circular sent out this week, but how many dealers have taken the bait and will strike hands with the Philadelphia rascal in turning a dirty penny, it is difficult to ascertain.

OTHER SIMILAR BRANDS

The fraud may not be quite so bad as that of "Oxeye" brand, which is not kaffee, but as the bogus bean may possibly be made of flour, as the makers claim, which would possess some nutrition; but, as Mr. Flood says, it is no substitute for coffee. There may be earthy substances that can be combined so as to granulate when the grain of coffee and several condiments can be counterfeited so that detection is only possible to the practiced eye.

How to Construct the Effects of Impure Water.

Mr. L. M. Martin, Superintendent of the St. Louis, Des Moines and Northern Railroad, says: "On my return from a recent trip South, where the water was very impure, I was attacked with a violent case of cholera morbus. Having heard a great deal of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, I concluded to try it, and with the most beneficial results." No household should ever be without a bottle of this remedy.
