LESSONS FROM JONAH'S LIFE.

Rev. Dr. McRobbie, the Eminent Scotch Divine, Discourses on the Power and Bounty of Christ's Love.

MONSTER SUNDAY SCHOOL SESSION

Excursions, Personals and Minor Mentionings at the Famons Lake Resort.

PEPECIAL TELEGRAMS TO THE DISPATCH. CHAUTAUQUA LAKE, July 13 .- Would you believe it? the programme on Sunday at the Assembly grounds is the largest one of the seven days in the week. Not only every hour is taken up, but there are three or four meetings at a single time and all are well attended. The Bible students on the grounds were out in full orce this morning at 9 to hear Dr. Harper, the tamous Hebrew student, expound on the "Story of Jonah." In the history of Jonah we must draw the line between the story, the event and the account. The book was evidently written 200 or 300 years after the event, as it was written not in the classical, but in the later Hebrew. There are four things to be considered viz: Was it literal or allegorical a myth or a legend or idealized history. Every Bible account of myth has its counterpart in Babylonian and Roman stories and legends. This has none. There are many wonderful omissions in this book, and many irrelevant things. It tells nothing of Jonah or his place of residence. Where cast up or what his fate after being journey to Nineveh.

rebuked, nothing relative to Nineveh or his

JONAH'S PLACE IN HISTORY. There is no book of the Bible as artistic as the book of Jonah and it has an acknowledged purpose. The New Testament, alluding to this fact, indorses the character of it and decides that the mission Jonah had tends to point directly to Christ's resurrection. He took two views, typical and symbolical. The first was the typical fate and future of the heathen and to do away with the narrow views of the prelates. The symbolical view intended to teach us a moral lesson. It meant to show that God was not a God of the Jews only, but for other nations also. The condition and treatment of the heathen was a warning to Israel.

A mighty congregation! A splendid choir! This was the sentiment of everyone as they came away from the amphitheater after morning worship. To all who have never attended a Sunday service at Chau-tauqua let me say that it is simple and beau-tiful. Everyone takes part in the impressive responsive service and the great au-dience sing with one voice that makes the amphitheater shake and the grove echo and re-echo again and again with its mighty

THE MORNING SERMON.

Dr. William McRobbie preached the sermon, taking for his text Paul's Epistle to the Thessalonians, iii, 4: "To know the love of Christ which passeth all knowledge." At first sight these words seem to imply direct contradiction. But we may be under $500 ball for court. What is the explanation? How can we know God? How shall the finite know the infinite? In the very nature of things we can know but very little of what lies before us undiscovered. A little child may know us undiscovered. A little child may know a person well enough to confide in his love and nestle in his bosom, and yet know nothing about that person. In the same way we may learn to know God. One man loves membership will secure one of those elegant another because he has received some favor or kindness from him, hence there is nothing strange about human love. What rea-son has man then not to love God? For

THE POWER OF CHRIST'S LOVE. The love of Christ as to its motives or reasons cannot be known. Were we adequate to know how this love will raise us we would have to scale the height of heaven itself. Human language falls short of the description. The love of Christ can be known by his sacrifices for us. We estigives us, but by what he sacrifices for us. od gave his son "That whosoever believes in Him shall not perish." That son was the very jewel of his heart. A greater sacrifice could not have been bestowed on us. Behold how munificent His love. Christ gave His life for not only his triends but to those who were His enemies. In the suffering on the cross He was suffering not for His own sins, for He had none, but for the sins of others. Everywhere we are struck with the manifestations of the Savior's love. So much different from any other love that we have ever seen. His love was not like the human love. In the story of Lazarus we see how He preferred to let things reach the worst that they could that the more brillians would be its glory. FAITH IN CHRIST.

* How may we come to know some of the reasons for the love of Christ? Before we can in any way know the love of Christ we must know the words of the apostle. We must have faith in Christ. Here the mes-sage of salvation is addressed to us nowhere else in the universe. There it will be im-possible for one to become surety for his brother. Make everything depend upon the love of Jesus Christ. Then in some way may we understand that love. Our meat and our drink shall be with Him and in that way shall be workers with Him, and know Him. When we become rooted and grounded in that love we may alone know how to comprehend it.

Rev. McRobbie is from Scotland and in one of the church examiners in the ministerial requirements in the Greek language in his native land. His sermon was a typi eat argumentive Scotch discourse and delivered in the broad Scotch accent. His style was plain and simple the way of Scotch sermon far different from the "sky-rocket" style of many American ministers. MONSTER SUNDAY SCHOOL SESSION. In the atternoon at 2:30 President Lewis Miller presided over the assembled Sunday school meeting in the amphitheater and discoursed upon the lesson in a practical, illustrative way. He leads a prayer meeting in the same sturdy style that he does all of his work—the style that accomplishes the best results. Dr. W. A. Duncan led the Sunday school meeting in his own invincible style. Whenever Dr. Duncan leads you can depend on the presence of all the boys and girls. Mr. Potter, of Cleveland, led the young men's meeting and C. L. S. C. vespers were held in the ball at the same time. There was no sermon in the evening but songs and an address by Mr. Duncan.

It didn't take one of the sharp-eyed fellows very long to discover that a rat had become stranded on an awning on the opposite side of the street, and here was an opportunity for some fun. One of them climbed a support and shook the canvass. This made his ratship quake with fear, and his antics as can wass. This made his ratship quake with fear, and his antics as he danced around in trying to get to the ground amused the drummers, and as the sport continued the crowd grew. Then a fusilade against the prisoner was commenced, and all sorts of objects rained down on the belpless animal, but he was a good dodger, and few of the missles struck him. Engages in a Religious Discussion Some St. Louis Citizens.

General Benjamin F. Butler passed through the city last evening bound for Washington. He was on his way from St, Louis, where he had been trying a case. There were a number of St. Louis politicians on the train, and the General, with ticians on the train, and the General, with tutional rights, secured at the expense of three of them, occupied a smoking apartmillious of lives and billions of money, the ment, and was engaged in a heated discussion on the Catholic religion when a reporter accosted him.

The great lawyer was minus coat, vest and hat, and wore a finusel shirt. The St. Louis man was inclined to do most of the talking, but every now and then the old General would run his fingers through his thick, curly gray hair, and make a few emphatic remarks in the discussion. ## AN HONEST BALLOT

The Opportunity for Securing it Under the New Federal Bill.

SMALL GROUND FOR OPPOSITION. Position of Dignified Importance Allotted to Silver.

LIFE-LONG DEMOCRAT CONVERTED CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH. WASHINGTON, July 13 .- I do not understand how any honest man can object to the new elections law just passed by the House of Representatives and now in the Senate. either willfully misrepresents or is ignorant of the provisions of the bill. It will not even prevent dishonest elections or the intimidation of voters, though it proposes to do that. It will, in my estimation, do no more than give opportunity for the official report of fraud and suppression of votes. I hope it is stronger than that, but I fear not. It is a good bill, but it does not go far enough. In view of the deliberate and unconcealed suppression of votes of the colored people of the South, the open declaration of Southern Democrats that the people of that color shall not be allowed to exercise their consti-lican, can oppose a measure which cannot affect honest elections unfavorably, and which must, if anything can be operative in that direction, contribute something to the development of the manhood and responsibilities of citizenship of a people who have been the sport of the politicians of their section as they were of their former masters. Their presence and numbers have been taken advantage of to increase the representation in Congress of a delegation absolutely antagonistic to them, and which is always in mical to the interests of the North, and yet a vast number of humane people, and even professed Republi-cans, of the North turn up their sentimental noses at this bill because they fear it is going to force some good Southern brother to do something he does not want to do. The political, or party, opponents of this bill know what they are about.

"No rogue o'er fellows."

"No rogue e'er felt the halter draw, With good opinion of the law."

Silver is Dignified. Hail silver. It is now taking a position dignity. It is to be no more that indefinite thing called money, but takes its place with other products of the soil that have a somewhat steady value. The Senate example has been followed by the House and the conferees' bill has been enacted, and if the President be not influenced by the to attend. usurers and the Wall street sharks to intrude his veto, bullion will soon be bought and stored in the vaults of the government at a rate of $4,500,000 a month, and legal tender certificates issued to the extent of its | Pittsburg, Pa. market value to pay those who have the commodity for sale. Of course it will be a great thing for the silver mea, but it will also be a great thing for the common people of the country. The rich will not be so apt to hoard with this vast addition to the "circulating medium" of the country, and in the general overflow more of the stuff percolate to the pockets of you and me-that is, the poor. The fools who wor ship metal money, and demand an "intrinsic value" for money, deplore the degradation of silver to the level of corn and oats. Degradation forsooth! What is more dignified than corn and oats? But, they say, if bullion is to be warehoused, and certificates issued for it which shall be a legal tender, why not warehouse corn and oat and issue certificates for them? And why not, pray? The certificates would represent the labor value of producing and transport-ing the corn and oats, and if accepted at that value by the Government and housed till it were wanted, it could be sold at almost that same value, and would not be subject to trusts or corners, or speculation of any kind. The certificates would be redeemed by the sale of the grain. The farmer would get his money for his labor at once, and would not be subject to the manipulations of the market or the pinching of his own necessi This principle recognized by the purchase of silver bullion is a narrow and ill-digested experiment of the very kind proposed on a universal and scientific scale by the State Socialists. Under this bill it is to be assumed the coinage of silver would cease year from this time. So much the better.

Certificates represented by the commodity called bullion are good enough for us.
When the vaults overflow with bullion the Covernment can sell it to those who want it at the market price as it would corn and oats. It is a tremendous step to divest the public mind of the old fiction that gold and silver are money in themselves apart from their representation of labor values. And what do we want of the cumbersome coin when we can have the nice crisp certificates to handle and hold? Seventy millions more each year added to the circulation of the country under this bill! Think of it, Senator Stanford's scheme to lend money on farm mortgages at 2 per cent will not be necessary. This bill, it it become a law, ought to knock money down to 2 per cent

Converted at Gettyaburg. Colonel Thompson, a fine specimen of the New Englander, is one of the most charming men about the Capitol. His face ever adds a ray of sunshine to the sacred precincts of the office of the Secretary of the Senate. He told me a little story the other evening of how he became a Republican. It was during the terrible carnage at Gettysburg. He was in charge of an immense ambulance corps, and for 72 interminable hours was engaged in transporting the dead and wounded from the field. In all that time no sleep came to his eyes, nor slumber to his eyelids. On the fourth night from the time of the beginning of this ghastly work he turned into his tent to take a bit of rest. He could not sleep. His brain was on fire. He could not see anything but the horror of the mangled and the dead, the heaps upon heaps of siain, the earth soaked with blood and strewed with shreds of flesh and limbs torn asunder; and he could hear nothing but the heartbreaking cries of the mangled ones. his condition could not be due to overdoses of liquor, which might well have been taken in such circumstances. He arose, procured his horse, vaulted into the saddle, rode awey to the most silent place he could find, and tried to calm his swollen and bursting brain. Suddenly there burst upon him a thought that, in all those years of army life, had never occurred to him before, and that was that in all those piles of rebei dead there was not a single Republican. There were Democrats in the Union Army, but in all that the state of the state Democrats in the Union Army, but in all that torn and tattered crowd, fighting for the last gasp of its life, there was not one Republican. Lake the great light that fell from heaven upon the mind of St. Paul, this tremendous truth burst upon the understanding of this life-long Democrat, and from that moment he was a Republican, without a possibility of being anything else if he should live a thousand years. The Democratic party had not, before that time, been the party of the Rebellion, but it was now inseparably so. The colonel rode slowly back to his tent, his mind calmed, his soul at rest, and sank into a long and refreshing slumber, and from that day never took into his hands a Democratic ballot.
