WHERE VENDETTAS ARE COMMON

Factional Differences Extended Even t the Courts of Law and Statutes Disregarded.

DISPUTES SETTLED BY THE SHOTGUN.

An Explanation of the Causes of the Periodical Murderous Affrays.

[CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH.] LEXINGTON, Ky., July 18 .- The news now and then of another mountain vendetta has almost ceased to elicit comment, and unless of a very bloody character causes no excitement whatever. The recent feud at Harlan is fast becoming a memory, although it has cost the State of Kentucky thousands of dollars and blackened its reputation as a law-abiding community almost beyond repair. The local authorities are unable to cope with these tactions, and in a number of instances are partisans themselves. It is a well known fact that a Sheriff in one of the mountain counties declared that he would not arrest a noted desperado, upon whose head the price had been set, stood before him, claiming that that indiwidual was his triend, and that he would die for him if it was necessary. The Judge of the same county has done everything in his power to arrest the same outlaw, not because he feels that it is his duty, but be cause he hates him as intensely as his brother officer loves him. They are, in truth, membors each of the factions that have rendered their country a plague spot on the face of this State.

LAWLESSNESS SUPREME. Of course, with the County Judge and the Sheriff arrayed on opposite sides the despera-does cannot be arrested. To impanel an impartial jury in this county in case of an arrest would be as impossible as changing the course of the Cumberland river. The lew law abiding citizens that live in this community are overawed and bulldozed by the more turbulent element, and are in such a hopeless minority that they dare not utter a protest or suggest a remedy.

The law is always lax in isolated communities, and the character of the Kentucky mountaineer leads him to take advantage of this fact. The most of these feuds can be traced to intermarriage. These mountaineers are descendants of a people who have always shunned civilization, who always seek the solitude and wilds of a new country. They are a type of what Boone and Kenton were. Their lite is as free as the air they breathe They are simple, modest and honest, and know nothing whatever of ambition.

A LAW UNTO THEMSELVES. They are content to live and die in the shadow of the hills where they were born, and are restive only when trammeled by civilization under the garb of the law, of which they have an utter contempt. They eldom appeal to law for redress for wrong, but believe in settling it man to man, which often ends in the death of one or the other, and the first thing one knows another

It is well to draw a picture of the indi-vidual who has brought this State to such tuckians are, slim and supple. His head is usually surmounted with a home-made chip hat, generally of a battered appearance, through which his light tow hair can be seen. His eyes are gray and keen, and naturally fair, but generally very much tanned, contrasting strangely with the lightgreenish hue of his beard. A hickory shirt, collarless and open at the breast, a suit of butternut jeans and brogans complete the costume. THE MOUNTAINEERS.

These people are easily amused. The violin and basjo are their favorite instru-ments of music. They will sit and listen for hours to one of their number, who is generally a wit as well as a musician, play on a cracked fiddle or drum or a tuncless banjo. The country that these people inhabit is unsurpassed in grandeur by any portion of the Union. Take for instance 'aiscences of that fraternal strife that apstrangle a republic that led the world in science, though scarce a hundred years old. gunboats of the Government and its vinecovered banks has telt the thunder shock of Blood from the Northland and blood from the Southland has been mingled together, and the souls of the dead have floated out anto the unknown realm as the blood drifted out to the sea. Liberty must have knelt in sackcloth and ashes in those troublous times, and her head must have bent low when the sullen gun at Sumpter awoke a peaceful country to war.

EFFECTS OF THE WAR. There are many things that remind one of the war in the solitude of these mountains. During the recent visit of the State troops to that section, one day an old man came into camp, who eyed them curiously for awhile, and then after a bit he seemed to have screwed his courage up a little. He approached the sergeant of the guard, and asked him if he knew anything of his son, who had left him years ago to ollow "sojers" like they were. "He was but a lad," the old man said, "and he has never come back." He thought probably some of the "sojers" could tell him something of his boy. This boy, as was afterward learned. had gone down in one of those awful charges at Stone river, and was numbered among the unknown dead that are gathered from every battlefield. There are many like this old man that have telt the cruel effects of the war. Widows who have lost husbands, and children who have lost fathers. Many of them know not when the war commenced nor when it ended-knew not what great questions were involved and cared as little. ARCADIAN EXISTENCE.

Their life upon the hills and in the val-ley of the Cumberland had up to that time been truly an Areadian one. The sound of the bugle and drum awoke this slumbering paradise, nor left it until that insatiable monster, war, had drawn into its embrace the flower of its people.

While the State guard were among them nothing seemed to delight them as much as the sound of a drum. Its martial tones seemed to fascinate them as nothing else could. It could be plainly seen how easily their feelings could be swayed, and how easily they could be influenced to right or wrong. They would cluster around the drummers, and give vent to their enthusiasm by frequent shouts and expressions of encouragement to them who, nothing loth, would beat the different marches and calls for these simple people bours at a time. One day a corporal was accidentally shot and mortally wounded, and in a short time there were several women at the side of the dying boy, and they stood over him with streaming eyes, and ministered to him with untiring care and pity. A PREACHER'S BRAVERY. Now such a scene as that is common enough with them, but that divine pity that has a meat within every woman's soul, led them to the couch of the dying stranger. This boy's body was taken that night over a mountain road to a distant station, ful. 35 miles, to be sent home. It was accompanied by two soldiers and a mountain preacher.

On ther way to the station they were de-layed by several little accidents to the wagon, and it was seen that one of the party would have to go ahead and if possible hold up the train. This could be accomplished by a short toot route across an immens hill, which would cut off several miles.

It was a lonely route and a very tiresome one, but as soon as the matter was suggested the preacher was the volunteer, and he accomplished his purpose. The train was delayed until the arrival of the wagon. One would have to go over that road and go over it at night to appreciate the walk and over it at night to appreciate the walk and understand the kindness of the deed. That man is held in tender regard by every com-panion of the dead soldier, and is a type of the master he serves.

VENDETTAS DYING OUT.

Since the war has become a memory these people have been drawn into an internecine strife by bad men. They are naturally clannish and easily led. The law of nature forces them upon one side or the other—that of self-preservation. If one knows anything of these mountain vendettas he knows this is true. There can be no neutrality, and there true. There can be no neutrality, and there is none. They may say to a stranger that they belong to neither one side nor the other, but it is not true, for every man, woman and child is a partisan.

There is a mother who, from her latticed window, can look down upon three graves in which like the heading of her sons who in which lies the bodies of her sons who were shot to death in a recent fend, and in sight of the same window is the house of the man who caused their death. She says but little, but in her eyes can be seen traces of the tragedy, and you are impressed with an idea that she is looking forward to a time when the account will be settled in full.

The day is drawing near when these feuds, however, will be a thing of the past, and that portion of Kentucky which has known them so long will be pointed to with pride, and those silent hills that have thrown shadows over deeds of violence, will be illuminated with the glare of the furnace and the echo of the shrill sounds of the locomotive. . A COUNTERFEITER SUICIDES.

The Notorious Brickyard Sayder Hangs

SPECIAL TELEGRAN TO THE DISPATCE. LEBANON, July 18 .- A few days ago was chronicled the capture of a notorious counter eiter of half dollars at Annville, and his imprisonment in the Lebanon county jail here. The man was Charles Becker, alias "Brickyard Snyder." Since his arrest he acted strangely, and the prison keepers maintained a watch over him lest he should do himself injury. But to no purpose. On Monday the prisoner succeeded in hanging himself, and yesterday his dead body was buried at the County Almshouse, but later was disinterred and taken to Philadelphia for examination at the Philadelphia hospital.

He had made a sort of rope out of a piece of blanket, one end of which he tied to an iron bar in his cell window and the other end around his neck, and then jumped off his mattress. He was 40 years old.

WE'LL SOON BE OUT OF DEBT.

Allegheny City's Great Gain by Annexation to Pittsburg. Controller Morrow was congratulating himself yesterday that Pittsburg's debt would be wiped out by 1910. "There is not much likelihood that new debts will be incurred before that time," he said, "as the question of issuing bonds has to be submitted to a vote of the people, and they are generally opposed to such action. Delinquent Tax Collector Ford, who was in the Controller's office at the time, was led by this to remark that, while he was in favor of the consolidation of the two cities, still the fact that Pittsburg would soon be out of debt, and at the same time possess all of the latest improvements, was additional evidence to him that Allegheny City would have the best of the deal.

A JO-BOAT MYSTERY.

It Floats Down the Ohio in Good Shape, but Without Occupants. There is a jo-boat mystery lying partly submerged in the Ohio river at the foot of Chartiers street, Manchester. About a month ago the boat floated down the Ohio in midstream and a man named Sarver swam out and caught it. In the boat was a brand new set of furniture and cooking

RIVAL APPEARS IN THE FIELD.

Which Proposes to Make Things Lively for the Combination.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. CHICAGO, July 18 .- The bot weather of July finds Chicago tight in the grip of a gigantic ice combine, which has forced the price to large consumers up to $11 and $12 per ton and shapes things so that the small consumer has to pay as much as $20 and $25

The story of its formation is a short and familiar one to Chicagoans. Taking advantage of the scarcity of cold weather last winter the four largest Chicago firms, the Lincoln Ice Company, the Washington Ice Company, A. S. Piper & Co., and J. P. Smith & Co. pooled their stocks on hand, which were quite large, and bought all they could from Wisconsin deal-ers, and believing that nothing could stand against them put up their schedule until GROWLING LOUD AND FIEBCE is heard on every hand. The small butcher who used to pay from $1 75 to $2 50 per ton, has been compelled to pay $10 to the rapacious combine, thus increasing his ice bill from $5 to $20 per week, without any corresponding increase in prices, because he has had to compete with other large packing firms which use artificial ice are therefore independent of the combine. This is the more exasperating since it is capable of demonstration that the combine bought its ice for 90 cents per ton on commission and paid only 60 cents per ton to have it delivered in Chicago.

The produce commission men have been as great sufferers as the retail butchers and a few of them have formed a small combination and gone into the ice business on their own account. But the principal antagonist of which was recently incorporated with capital stock of $50,000. At its head is Thomas Armour, the most energetic opponent of the Chicago dressed beef monopoly to be found in Chicago, and with him are F. M. Smith, F. Scheibel, John Ford and Henry Sloan.

UNDERSELLING THE TRUST. These people buy their ice in Wisconsin, and undersell the trust about $4 per ton to large consumers, and more to small ones. Its half dozen wagons have proved inadequate, and 20 more are to be put on the streets at once. The advent of this company has caused the ice combine to stop and think. To-day it cancelled an an-nouncement that prices would now go up another notch. The artificial ice machine do not seem to cut much of a figure in th struggle for cheap ice, although this is a headquarters for the manufacture and sale of artificial ice machinery.

It is said that a similar combine has its hand on the throat of Pittsburg's ice con suming public. If that is true, the experi-ment of the Merchants' Ice Company ought to furnish a valuable hint what to do.

Bismarck's Neuralgia.

Truth, London, May 29, 1890.] All the deplorables and despicables o Germany have been engaged during the last few weeks in the congenial task of kicking the dead lion; but I do not suppose that Frince Bismarck troubles himself about th malevolent inventions of such contemptible vermin. The idea of Prince Bismarck having impaired his faculties by morphia drinking is really too extravagantly prepos terous a fiction for even lunatics to credit and the even more offensive allegation of "alcoholism" is not less nonsensical. Prince Bismarck formerly took his fair share of wine or beer, but he is a man of iron head, and certainly never was affected in any way by his potations. The days, however, when he drank champagne, beer and Rhine wines have passed away. A few years ago Prince Bismarck found his neuralgia benefited by a daily bottle of strong dry port, the wine being of special quality which he obtained direct from Oporto; but this was also discon-tinued when he consulted Dr. Schweninger; and for a long time past his customany beverage has been weak whisky and Apollinaris and even of this only a comparatively small quantity has been allowed.

A Sixty-Foot Whale Frightens the Cottager on Nantasket Beach. ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. BOSTON, July 18.—For two days past the cottagers along Nantasket Beach have been frightened half out of their wits by a sea monster which disported itself so close to the beach as to be plainly visible from the shore. The more timid ones could think of nothing but the mythical sea serient. the shore. The more timid ones could think of nothing but the mythical sea serpent, and all along the beach only the boldest dared try the surf bathing. To-day the monster came even nearer the shore, and nundreds of people saw it swimming to and fro.

At one time a big head would be raised out of the water and again a large fin would be seen. For several hours the creature patrolled the coast. It was not a sea serpent, but a fin-back whale about 50 or 60 feet long. It was unusually close to the shore, and its peculiar antics gave rise to the stories that it was a sea serpent. Keep Cool.

The thermometer adviseskeep out of the sun; don't walk too fast; hunt the shady side of the street. Drop in at Wanamaker's, corner Sixth Wanamaker's, corner Sixth street and Penn avenue, for comfortable clothing. It'll be your fault if the last bit of advice doesn't make you cool and comfortable in spite of thermometers. We want a busy July, keeping our stock on the move, more than we want profits, when we make uncommon low prices. Our Pongee, Mohair and Alpaca Coats and Vests are just the thing for midsummer wear, and the prices are the lowest in the city for goods of equal value. We laugh at hot weather here with all our sorts of cool clothing. Buyers are snapping our bargains up daily.

BREAKFAST. "By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocca, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk.
