The Country Parson, Who Has Performed the Feat, Tells How.

MYSTERY OF THE INTERMEDIATE.

The Price Takes You Across, Around the Island, and Back Home,

TWO SHIP OFFICIALS TO BEWARE OF

IWRITTEN FOR THE DISPATCH. A great deal has been written about cross ing the ocean. Descriptions of travel and the experiences of the traveler always seem to have a charm for the American pcople. We are a nation of tourists. Europeans have a notion that to be an American implies the possession of riches and necessitates a profligate expenditure of money.

But is it not a fact that here and there an American may be found who either does not talk, talk, but never tell your friends tates a profligate expenditure of money. possess a large fortune, or who, while in good circumstances, has no particular desire to keep up the national reputation for plethoric purse and reckless and unnecessary expenditure?

It has been my privilege to meet such people, and as it is likely that I have not seen them all, may it not be of some interest ge from Pittsburg, visit the principal points sum covers ail really necessary expenses. Of course this feat cannot be accomplished unless the traveller knows all the ropes, keeps his eyes wide open, and utilizes all the selfupon the subject.

What the Intermediate Is.

Necessity is said to be the mother of invention, and may it not be added that comparative poverty is sometimes the father. A desire born of these parents prompted the District Courts throughout the country. writer to try the "intermediate passage" on a steamship. A return ticket can be bought for from $50 to $65 in New York City, and writer to try the "intermediate passage" on for from $60 to $65 in New York City, and possibly in Pittsburg. Say that the railroad fare to New York and return costs $25, and you have an expenditure of $90. That sum will take you across the ocean and home again in comparative comfort. But, says the reader, what is the intermediate passage? The accommodations compare favorably with those on many of our river steamers, if you select the right line upon which to travel. The rooms contain from two to eight berths, and every necessity is provided in the shape of bed, covering, etc. There is a saloon or dining room in which the meals are served. Of course the cuisine of Delmonico is ab-sent, but any person in fair health can pull through for a few days.

The bill of fare is varied from day to day.

For the first three days it is possible that instead of desiring to be fed he is apt to posseas an insane desire to feed the fishes and seagulls, even after everything of a solid character has been thrown up. In this respect the most economical passenger realizes for once, if he never did before, that it hunting, fine springs, pure air and a deis more bressed to give than to receive.
When this ordeal has been passed and the surplus bile has been parted with, the nerves of the stomach resume their function, and a ravenous appetite is the result. The dinner bell, which a while ago turned the stomach upside down, has now a musical sound. If the service is not inviting you will be too hungry to notice it. It the coffee has a "shippy" taste, and if the odor of the "omnipresent bilge water" offends the delicate sensibilities you will let it pass. Oh, the hunger of the convalescent sea-sick passen-ger! His capacity for consuming food becomes prodigious, and it seems to him that he could digest a marlinspike,

A Man to Hand'e Gently.

The intermediate passenger must be a philosopher for once in his life. When that little poppiniay of a steward speaks insult. ingly, and struts around with the air of a bantam rooster, he must smile meekly and swallow it (his chagrin, not the steward). If it becomes necessary to approach that individual with any complaint it must be A dollar bill, at the beginning of a voyage, slipped quietly into the hand of His Royal Highness, with a faint promise of a possi-ble repetition of the dose at the end of the voyage, will at least purchase his civility. He is generally an Englishman, small both alted opinion larger than the Cardiff Giant or John L. Sullivan.

If you are sick don't send out for the doctor if you can possibly help it. Nine times out of ten you will be exasperated by his assumption of superiority. If you know anything about medicine or physiology you will probably be as efficient as he is. A steamship doctor, with few exceptions, is an unmitigated piece of pomposity. I have crossed the ocean on several lines, and have never met but one physician who had the slightest solicitude for any but first-class passengera. It is almost needless to say that he was an American and that the ship 16, $1 39; 22, $1 69; 40, $1 99 a bolt of ten was an American one. What with flirling with the indies in the saloon and dancing attendance on the "gentry and nobility," he can spare but little civility for the intermediate. If prayer is your habit, as it should be, do not forget to ask the Lord to remember the poor steerage passenger, for the doctor gives him very little attention.

Stenmship Doctors' Hereafter. Outside of purgatory, if there be such a place or condition, the steerage passage, when sickness intervenes, has no rival, it observation amounts to anything. Death is sometimes a welcome messenger in such cases. I once saw the body of an old man thrown into the sea, who died of pure neglect on the part of the physician. His children had sent for him to spend his last days with them, but when they came to the DIVISION No. 9, A. O. H., to be held at Kauffeld's Hall, Carson st., on SUNDAY, at 2 P. M. By order of THE PRESIDENT. thrown into the sea, who died of pure children had sent for him to spend his last days with them, but when they came to the American seaport to meet the dear old "fader," for he was a German, a death certificate and a few personal trinkets were all they had to show that he had started. A rude pine box, loaded with iron, was somewhere entangled amid the slimy marine plants at the bottom of the Atlantic, and if the complialistic desidens of old father ocean the complex of the composite of the composi the cannibalistic desidens of old father ocean had not burglarized that narrow home and devoured the body it lay water-logged in that uncouth habitation. I verily believe that beaven will be the final home of millions of 'beloved physicians,' but if there are many steamship doctors among them I

The coast of Ireland at last. Fog and damp and gloom. A slow passage through St. George's Channel and we land in Liverpool. Of course it rains. If you didn't bring an umbrella along, go and buy one. No matter if the sun does shine, go and buy an umbrella. An Englishman without an umbrella is a freak. Why, bless you, a man's standing in society is sometimes graded by his umbrells. Now you have landed with 22 bright sovereigns in your Wales," and "Oh, What a Happy Land is Hingland," and you can buy food and lodging for one-third what you could if it were known that you were an American Do this and you can swing around the circle of the "tight little isle" for five weeks at the rate of £4 s week, and land in Liverpool with enough change to see you home.

Of course, you can only visit the chief points of interest, and you must eat at coffee houses, of which there is an abundance in houses, of which there is an abundance in all the principal towns in England. You can get a night's lodgings very cheap, and, untrameled by society usages, can see a world of wonders. Unless reared in the lap of luxury, either man or woman can visit England, traveling second-class on rail-roads, eating at coffee houses, and sleeping in second-class lodgings for the sum men-

A Sure Cure for Bloody Flux.

Last summer I had a very severe attack of bloody flux. I was taken in the worst done with extreme deference. Though you may be an educated man, used to command, it may be better to reverence his tightmost a constant flow of blood. I tried fitting blue uniform and brass buttons. If everything at hand, such as pain killer, you can keep a secret, I will tell you one. etc., all to no effect. They did no more etc., all to no enect. They did no more good than so much water, and knowing that our doctors could do nothing with the dis-ease; at least, they had failed so far, I thought it useless to call them in my case. I had suffered exceedingly for 24 hours, and thought my case a gloomy one, when, thanks physically and mentally, but in his own ex-alted opinion larger than the Cardiff Giant Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy. The first few doses gave me much relief, and in three days I was able to resume my work. I used but two bottles, and they thoroughly eradicated the disease. I think your medicine saved mequite a doctor bill, and perhaps my life. With many thanks for the good you have done, I am, very sincerely yours, GEORGE SCHEOTTLE,
