

I haven't heard that Mrs. Harrison, in cot nection with the other financial schemes in which her name figures, has taken any stock in which her name figures, has taken any stock in friendship rings, but a great many people are investing capital to the amount of one penny is a gold band that will encircle some one class finger, and is dignified by the name of friend-ship rine. They resemble slightly the financial rings that engage the attention of the sterner sex, inasmuch as there is never any dividend on the investment paid, but they differ in the fact that such is thoroughly understood by the stockholders before they become such.

They are pretty little swindles, if such they may be called, and are occupying the attention of society in a marked degree just at present, the soliciting for their purchase varying the usual pastimes of riding, reading, bathing, sleeping, and—whisper it gently—firting, that make the summer season such a delight to the purely ornamental portion of humanity. The name surely is not a misnomer, for they must he a test to friendship when subscriptions for their purchase are solicited by any other than a little tot in whom a request for a penny is natural and to be expected, and if the friend-ship weathers the test, it is but proper that the rings in name should testify to that fact. One jeweler, alone, in this city, last week, took in 2,000 pennies for which he gave in exchange 20 exquisite little rings to 20 equally exquisite

One petite miss seen yesterday was jingling her pockets at a great rate as she, accompanied by a little companion, joyfully made her way to a prominent jeweler's establishment. When questioned about her noisy wealth she laughingly replied: "Pennies, just pennies for a friendship ring. I commenced yesterday noon and have only had one day collecting for it."

And as the coppers were turned out on the counter a tray laden with any number of pretty little conceits in rings made its appearance, all the same price, $1. But that ring was selected with as much care and consideration as if it were valued at one hundred times the amount paid for it, and fitted to the little finger of the tiny hand with exacting precision, as of course it wouldn't be proper to wear it upon any other finger, nor is it the thing to wear a guard with a friendship ring. As the little purchaser departed, happy in her possession, the question arose where did she find 100 friends, or even acquaintances, in this forlorn, forsaken THORN BRANCH.

For instance, the water tax on a business property on Wood street, which brings in $2,500 or $3,000 a year, is about $30. On a residence property producing an equal income it is $150. Other taxes also favor business property. This, he added, prevents a great many from

THE WEEK IN OIL. The Record for Duliness Broken-Two Days Without a Transaction.

The oil market yesterday was a repetition of that of the previous day. It opened and closed without a transaction. This is believed to be the death knell of the system of trading in futnres. Pittsburg speculators do not take kindly to wind. They want something tangible to show for their money. Whether the revival of show for their money. Whether the revival of cash dealing will prove an attraction to them is doubtful. They seem to have lost all interest in oil. The future of the market depends altogether upon the success or failure that may attend the issuing of Lima certificates. If outsiders bite, business will revive; if not, the Standard will have all the fun to itself, which will be something, as it will be relieved of the bulk of the burden of paying for its own carrying.

bulk of the burden of paying for its own carrying.

The standing bid vesterday was 80%. Once as hige as 80% was offered, but the longs resisted the temptation. They realized that they have the shorts in a hole, and seem determined to keep them there. Clearances for the week were 128,000 barrels—the smallest in the history of the Exchange. Clearances the previous week were 367,000.

The course of fluctuations for the week was as follows:

This shows a loss for the week in actual transactions of %c, but in the bidding of only %c, as 89%c was offered for 1,000 barrels yesterday.

SOME VERY PLAIN FACTS.

For many reasons it was a notable interlew that the writer had with Mr. Joseph Marsh, residing at 303 Renfrew street. In the first place Mr. Marsh is well known and very popular among the citizens of the East End, and his story will be of great interest to them, as well as to the general public. The interview is notable in the second place for the remarkable experience it describes. During a recent interview with the writer, Mr. Marsh said:

"Eight years ago I contracted the whooning cough. Although to all appearances I got rid of it, the bad effects were still left in my system, and for many years I have not known what it was to enjoy a really day. That may sound strange, but it is the

THE TREND OF TRADE

AN EXPERT ON VALUES OF REALTY. English Capitalists Have Full Data of All

This Thriving Community.

Pittsburg Industries. THE NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE CITY

There was an active trade movement last week, sales of seasonable commodities being large and prices well sustained. Large orders for specialties were reported. Merchants and manufacturers were encouraged over the prospect of a heavy fall business. The strong features of the situation are that there is no symptom of overproduction, that collections were never more easily and promptly made, and that bankers report; an abundance of money. The railroads are crowded with freight. Coastwise tonnage is, perhaps, heavier than ever before. The earnings and the savings of big and little capitalists are being turned into all sorts of commercial and manufacturing enterprises. Labor is in demand. Prosperity eems to have come to stay. Real Estate Values. A well-known gentleman who is interested in the purchase and sale of real estate, and who has lately made large investments in the Twen-ty-second ward, yesterday gave his views on values substantially in the language following: "The inquiry is often heard: Is real estate in our city selling for more than it is intrinsically worth? I answer by saying that the price of land is regulated by demand, the same as any other commodity. The more numerous the buyers the higher the prices. Causes for the demand should also be taken into consideration. If the cause of demand is based on the profit accruing or to accrue, or on profitable and advantageous use, then the price is not too high. Values fixed upon any other basis are speculative. Anyone who ventures to pur chase real estate or anything else without knowing where he is going to sell it or what use it is to be put to, assumes more or less risk.

An element of stability in the home market is the fact that nearly all the purchases are for a purpose—to establish homes or business. No risks are run. Consequently prices are on a reasonable basis. They are only keeping pace with demand for improvement."

To this it may be added that the use and profit of real estate are somewhat determined by the purposes to which adjoining land may be applied. English Capitalists Well Posted. Referring to the roports of operations of nent business man remarked yesterday: "Be-gore and during the Civil War English capitalists looked upon our Government as an experi ment and hable to go to pieces at any time. The triumph of the Union cause convinced them that the Republic had come to stay, and that it offered better inducements than any other country in the world for investments. Hence they commenced forming syndicates to buy up almost everything they could lay their hands on. I think they have placed considerable money here, but not nearly so much as reable money here, but not nearly so much as re-ported. They are still at work.

"The operations of these syndicates are based on extensive and accurate data. I talked with the representative of one of them not long ago, and he informed me that they had made careful surveys of all available property between the Atlantic seaboard and the Mississippi river, and, in some instances, still further west. Full statistics of every important Pittsburg industry are on file in London, and more complete information in regard to them can be obtained there than here." Substitutes for Lumber. A correspondent signing himself "J. A.," is not troubled over the prospect of the exhaus-tion of the lumber supply. He says: "The history of the world teaches, not only that every generation has looked out for itself, and that each generation lived better and had more con-veniences than its predecessors, but that the younger generation growing up have actually had no use for many things that their elders imagined they could not do without. A pros-pect of a shortage in the supply of tallow candles would doubtless have given our greatgrandfathers much concern, and perhaps they would have wondered how their descendants would manage to read at night in the event that candles could not be procured. But what use have we for candles now, and what use will our descendants have for gas lights?

"Many substitutes for lumber have already been introduced into our buildings, and many more will probably be forthcoming when the necessity for them become apparent. Our ex-tensive and costly buildings are constructed largely of stone, brick and iron, and very little lumber is used. Doors are made of papier mache, and seem to be quite as satisfactory as those made of wood. 'Necessity is the mother of invention,' and when the timber gives out, better to take its place." Business News and Gossip. Pittsburg builders were busy last week. They took out permits for 80 houses, the cost of which is figured at $200 000

New York, July 26.—The stock market today was a tame and uninteresting affair from traders were inclined to sell stocks upon the expectation that the bank statement would show a material loss in reserve as it was known tharduring the early portion of the week the sub-treasury had taken about $2,000,000 out of the banks. The heavy payments for fonds redeemed, most of which came to New York, did not show in any way no to last night.

If Government bonds have been dull and steady.
State bonds have been dull and featureless.
The exports of specie from the port of New York last week amounted to $2,378,381 of which $999,520 was in gold and $1,448,841 silver. The imports of specie from the week amounted to $224,834 of which $198,727 was in gold and $86,107 imports of specie for the week amounted to $254,834 of which $198,727 was in gold and $86,107 silver.

The Post says: Notwithstanding the complete stagnation of the stock market at present, the logic of the present conditions is in favor of higher prices for all dividend-paying investments. There can be no doubt that the issue of new and additional treasury notes for the purchase of silver bullion to be coined will add at least $50,000,000 to the circulating medium of the country within the next year, and that this will be an increase of floating capital seeking investment in something else and at the same time will be as available for bank reserves as that much increase of gold in the country, and therefore will increase the ability of the banks to increase their loans. By the purchase of bonds also there is that much more capital being turned out of the investment in them to find it in something else, and the low rates of interest which the Government bonds pay now show that there is an increasing demand for interest paying investments.
