It is Found by a Constant Traveler to Lie in a Trip to the States of South America.

A VARIETY OF VALUABLE HINTS

For Those Who Have Pulmonary Troubles to Cure and Who Wish to Witness the Beauties of Nature.

IN A JOURNEY OF ONE HUNDRED DAYS

The South American Continent Can be Comfortably and Easily Encircled.

Fresh from one of the most interesting lands on this side of the ocean, Dr. Charles J. Stephens, now stopping in the city at the Seventh Avenue, has an array of facts and figures touching on South America, at his tongue's end, that would fill several of the numerous D. Appleton volumes, which he handles in his profession. He is an old traveler, and his Yankee dash and spirit, sharpened by varied experiences in foreign climes, adds a polish to his character. His quick mind flavors his smooth-flowing conversation with breezy points of information that run with the rapidity of a buzz saw, but, unlike the buzz saw, which has an off-hand way with acquaintances, Dr. Stephens has an engaging manner that invests his every word with interest. Coupled with this the sparkle of genuine health glows in the countenance of the book man that makes one think of the salubrity of the tropics, and is a standing recommendation of the invigorating Southern

The Doctor had found the road to health. and in an interesting talk with him yester-day he un olded a volume of information, embracing a variety of valuable hints that the tourists of the country should stick a pin into. He suggested a plan that is entirely novel and attractive, and offers the most pleasant release to the business man from the dull drudgery of the desk's dead

OUT OF THE BEATEN PATH.

"Americans have sought the beaten path year after year," said Mr. Stephens, "by taking the same old trip to Europe in summer and going to Florida in winter. The place to seek healthful rest is where there is a pleasant change in one's work and a new outlook, and that place is Spanish America, the land of health, happiness and hope. The merchant whose mind is long and often on neighbors with ill-treating his two sick chilthe rack of anxious thought, the invalid of the North, the young man of means seeking delightful journeyings, can all find the Mecca of their hopes in a trip by steamer to South America, and a pleasant tour through our sister Republics. I am going there shortly, myself, to secure data for a book I am preparing to publish, and when I return, in the course of two years, I will speak to the public on this matter from the lecture platform.

"The time is not far distant when these Spanish-American trips will become a popular feature, since the proposal to establish direct steamship lines. When the summer heats wilt your linen and your brains you can board a New York vessel bound tor South America or the West Indies, and take a trip through the most picturesque spot under the sun. In nearly nine cases out of ten people suffering from lung or throat diseases lose them overboard before the ships land at Havana.

A WONDERFUL EFFECT.

"The effect of the halmy ocean breezes in the tropics is wonderful. I have twice checked pulmonary troubles by taking a voyage to the South. You can leave New York on a winter's night in a driving snowstorm, and before you are two days out of sight of land you will bask in the sunshine on the steamer's deek in a white linen duster, palmetto hat and slippers.
"The point is to encircle the South American continent, and you can do it comforta-bly and easily in 100 days. Two routes from New York to South America are the Royal Mail Steamship Line and the Boiton. Bliss & Dallett's 'Red D' steamers. The ocean trip is grand. In the days there is the exhibaration of brightness and breeze; in the nights, the balm of coolness and repose. The first land you behold is that part of the New World which Columbus named San Salvador, but is now more prosaically known as Watling Island, one of the most fertile of the Bahamas.

"The voyage past the Lesser Antilles is beautiful. Mile after mile of shifting scenery is passed, the same type of delicate loveliness beautifying every variation. Rising high on the Southern horizon you see banks of gray clouds, from under each of which, as you near it, descends the shoulder of mighty mountain, dim and gray. Nearer still, the gray changes to purple; lowlands rise out of the see, sloping upward with the gray and simple concernment. with those grand and simple concave curves st always betoken volcanie land, The purple changes to green, as we go nearer still. Tall palm trees and engine houses stand out against the sky; the suri gleams white around the base of isolated rocks. A little nearer, and you are under the lee or western side of the island, while the sea grows smooth as glass. The steamer stops at coaling points, and then you sail into Carlisle Bay, the port of Barbadoes, an island divided into two parts by a deep valley. Something like 500 vessels can anchor in that spacious open roadstead. ONE OF THE CHANGES. "Years ago ships stopped at St. Thomas, situated some distance to the Northwest, where the mails arrived. The place was given considerable commercial importance and prosperity, but since the introduction of the cable at Barbadoes, vessels make that point their main stopping place, in order to receive immediate instructions from Europe and other ports as to where they should sail Barbadoes and St. Thomas bave a warm sumption or kidney diseases derive be climate, with the thermometer ranging from 70° to 90°, and those suffering from confrom a winter residence there. And, by the way just 33 miles off the Cuban coast is the Isle of Pines, that can be reached from Ha-wana by steamer. If there is any place where the bloom of health can be brought to the cheek of the consumptive, it is on this island, where the breezes are perfumed by the precious pine. "Touching at the shore of British Guyava, you set foot on the main land in the city of Georgetown, where the true English gentle-man meets you in his bluff, hearty way. English hospitality is nowhere shown more marked degree than among the hail, well-met fellows of British Guyava. In speaking of the ocean voyage mention must be made of the picturesque island of Trinidad, which contains that natural wonder, the famous Pitch Lake of La Bres, about 40 miles south from Port of Spain. A commodicus passenger steamer runs there two or three times per week. Upon the point of La Brea are a small village and several 'boiling down' factories. All the inhabitants of the village are employed in entting and bringing asphalt from the lake, or in melting it and packing it in barrels to transport to New York and Paris, and, in Exceptions to the report were filed by the plaintiffs, and are disposed of by Judge Magee, in his opinion. He said that in exceptions Nos. 1 and 2 it was stated that the valuation placed by the master on the mill property was not enough. He valued the Millvale works at $900,000 and the Clinton mill at $300,000, while the plaintiffs claim both works are worth $1,900,000. This in-adequacy of price is given as affecting the validity of the assignee's sale.

QUITE THE CONTRARY. The Court was of the opinion from the testimony that the valuation by the master was too high, instead of too low. A mere inadequacy of price, however, does not call for the setting aside of a public sale. With other things it may serve as an inducement to the Court to avail itself of technicalities as a sufficient ground to set aside in the interest of justice. It is, however, a weak plea to make to the Court, a year and a half syndicate for the purpose of depressing the that there was no agreement or understand-ing that they were not to bid. They merely secured their claims as best they could, and had no intention of purchasing the mill. It was no error in the master to find that no such contract had been made, and that Fraud must not be presumed, but be proven. The movement was not secret, but open to all the creditors her futher that he has at night picked up whose interests were involved in the sale. The combination was not intended for the benefit of a few, but with the hope that all house, laying her down on the ground un-der a grape arbor. On last Tuesday he compelled his wife to sleep in the stable, would unite for the common good. The testimony shows that it was composed of a large number of creditors who had no fraudulent intent, but wanted to prevent the sac rifice of the property for the mortgaged debt of $500,000 or $600,000, and so leave nothing for the other creditors. Two-thirds of the creditors took part in the purchase, and those who did not declined to be ingreat trouble was to get any person to bid for property so heavily encumbered, and that the only bona fide bidders for the prop-

In conclusion, Judge Magee said: "All things considered, it would seem to me an inequitable thing at any time, and especially at this late day, upon the testimony produced, to disturb the sale made. Such a course would be an injustice to many, and do no good to the few. I see no The attending physician stated that he knew the children were not receiving proper treatment, but did not know matters many, and do no good to the few. I can only say that if we had a few more pugilists on the police force in the First ward it would be better for that part of the city. You will pay a fine of 6 cents and costs."

Your record as a soldier was that of fidelity, bravery and wholly of honor. Your record as a citizen was evidenced by the personal credentials given by hundreds of the foremost business men of your former home and of Pittsburg.

No partisan line could have been drawn through these recommendations, and I was gratified at their heartiness and extent. I need not add that your conduct of your agency fully justified all that your friends had said for you. It was business-like, energetic and most successful, and I believe that in case of your election to the office for which you are a candidate you would display in behalf of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania the same good qualities. The numerous papers which were sent to me were placed on file in the Appointment Division of the Bureau of Pensions and in the Interior Department, and are probably accessible to any one who might desire to examine them.

A beer team drawn by a pair of heavy The truth would seem to be that the stopped the animals just in front of the sickly-looking handbills. He left them there and went into a restaurant. Pretty soon one of the horses was attracted by the handbills, and he began to move backward, pulling his mate along with him, until he was within easy reaching distance of the paper. Then he reached over and took a mouthful of the green handbills. These he shared with his mate, and both animals which he likewise shared with his mate.

A small sized crowd began to assemble and interestedly watched the disappearance of the pile of green hand bills. The horse made a third attack on the green goods, now nearly gone, when a man came out of the ticket office and moved the horses further of the saloon about the same time. He be-gan a wordy war with the ticket office man, which ended in the beer man bringing his horses back to their original position. The ticket man went back into his office, and the beer man returned to the restaurant. There was only about another mouthful of green handbills left on the post, and these the nearest horse quickly gobbled up and divided with his mate.

for two months except the funds of the Benevolent Society. Weekly, there are thousands of Hebrews arriving in the country, the majority of them almost paupers, and it is claimed they are induced to come to America on false promises of the Baron de Hirsch fund. It is also claimed that their admission to this country is in violation of the immigration laws. The weekly influx to Pittsburg is from 10 to 70 during the winter months and in the summer the number is increased to 100 and over.

Alexander Fink, of Ferry street, has been resident of the Hebrew Benevolent Society of Pittsburg for over 15 years. He was een at his home yesterday by a DISPATCH reporter. His remarks give an idea of the work of the society and the care it takes of the Hebrew poor. Mr. Fink said: THOUSANDS OF EMIGRANTS.

Hundreds applied to us for aid, and although it was a hard struggle, we attended to all. During my term as president of the society, over 15 years, I have attended to the wants, in a measure, of thousands of needy countrymen. In Russia the persecutions are almost unbearable. The Czar has driven the Hebrews from place to place, until they are huddled in one orner of the country. Here the pursuits in which they may engage are very slender, making it difficult for a living to be earned. "It is also ordered that Hebrews must forsake their religion, and unite with the Greek Church of Russia, or the Lutheran Church. By so doing they become citizens of Russia and are allowed the usual privileges. Many joined the Lutheran Church which they considered less idolatrous than the Greek religion, but this order was afterward limited to the Catholic Church only. When the Hebrews congregate here they take advantage of the money after arriving here. When they ap-ply to us we pay their board for two months, meanwhile ordering them to secure employment and teaching them the English A HEAVY DRAFT.

"After a few months here they have learned some trade or become established in business, and they join the society. Just now the draw on our funds is so heavy that if the influx increases it will be impossible to aid every person. One relieving feature is that some of the immigrants arriving here ow have relatives here who came to Amerdent of the Grant Street Synagogue, or erthodox Hebrew Church, said to the reporter that the rush of emigrants was greater this summer than at any time since the beginning of Russian cruelties, ten years ago He said the unds of the Benevolent Society, of which he is a member, were getting low and he thought the society could stand very little more pressing. Mr. Rosenthal ap-proximated the number of arrivals weekly in Pittsburg at over 100, the majority of them being poor and needy.

When doctors disagree, it is popularly upposed to be difficult to find an umpire, and on the subject of school seat and desk architecture, treated in yesterday's DIS-PATCH, they are not unanimous, some treating the matter lightly, while others attach importance to it.

Dr. Craighead yesterday said he hadn't been in a schoolhouse for so long a time that The fund donated by Baron de Hirsch, a rich Hebrew of Paris, to aid his impoverished countrymen to emigrate from Russia and escape the oppression there is causing a pretty heavy draw on the funds of the Hebrew Benevolent Society of Pittsburg. The members of that society are experiencing much anxiety because they drew on their funds an average of 100 immigrants a week. Of course, not all of this number need be provided for, but many of them are absolutely penniless and have no resource for two months except the funds of the structed on bygienic principles, but doubt-less there was still room for improvement. He seemed to think most boys would succeed in getting through fairly safe, however. TOO LONG TO REMEMBER.

Dr. W. Snively said: "It's a long time since I've been in a school house, and I cannot say much about the matter. I think, however, from what I've heard, that the child's life at school is happier than it was when I was a boy."

Thomas W. Baker, Superintendent of the Board of Health, said: "School accomodation are much better than they were when I was a boy, and I am not humpbacked."

Dr. Thomas W. Shaw thinks the seats and desks in schoolhouses all right. using our knees. The seat legs were made by sawing a V into the end of a board, and if a boy wanted any fun he could manage, when the teacher's back was turned, to upwhen the teacher's back was turned, to up-set us all, so we were forced to balance like chickens on a roost. The matter was not remedied until we were promoted to the writing class, when we got desks. Now pupils have them from the start."

THE DESKS OF LONG AGO. "In the schoolhouse of our grand-fathers," said another gentleman, and for that matter in our fathers' days, and even in many of those now of middle age, especially in the country districts, the pupil when promoted to a writing desk, was more comfortably situated than the one of the present day. Seats were placed around the walls of the buildings, and the walls fur-nished back rests. The long desks in front were high enough so that the pupil could sit upright when writing. The little tots who sat in front had supports for their backs, but their feet dangled in air, leaving their limbs not only in an uncomfortable position, but in one that had a tendency to impede the circulation of the blood, and they looked forward anxiously to the day when they would be promoted to a writing desk. Such arrangements can still be found in some of the backwoods districts, but as school are only maintained in these districts four months in the year, the little folks are not greatly punished, even if their accommodations are not constructed on hygienic principles."

The people in the vicinity are furious, and say that Chestnut and Magee streets are not only impassable on account of the two foot lift necessary to get on to them, but that accidents are liable to occur at any minute.

me people insist that no special effort has been made to hurry the work, and, "gathering their brows like a country storm, nursing their wrath to keep it warm, they swear, that in case of accident, the municipality shall pay the piper.

HOME

IS WORTH MORE THAN ALL THE MONEY IN THE WORLD,

And yet, strange to say, it takes very little of this world's money to make it so. Provided, however, you will be wise enough to patronize KEECH'S, the place where your dollars will go further than at any other establishment in the city.

Keech's $18 Chamber Suite

For instance, is a veritable prize. It is good and handsome enough to find room in the palace of the millionaire, and its price is low enough to place it within the reach of the mechanic and laborer. See it and judge for yourself. And, while you are here, don't forget to look at # and desks in schoolhouses all right. Henry Rea, Jr., said: "When I was a boy I sat on a seat that had neither back to it nor desk in front, and if we wanted the latter we were forced to extemporize it by using our kness. The seat less than the latter we were forced to extemporize it by

It is hardly necessary to say that, unlike certain other houses, we don't indulge "in blowing our own horn" all year 'round. But, in this case, the circumstances warrant us to say that these $28 Parlor Suites are the best and biggest bargains ever offered by any Pittsburg Furniture Store. The coolest and most pleasant floor covering on earth. Well, we have too large a stock and want to get rid of it. Help us to do it, and you will help yourself. You, certainly, won't object to a big saving of money.

Special Notice to the Ladies!

Within a few days our present store will be connected with its new addition, now nearly completed. This will necessitate a complete "change around" of the Dry Goods Department. Before this event takes place, however, we are bound to reduce our stock of Drygoods as much as possible. Mr. Keech says he'd rather sacrifice the goods to his customers than to the dust and dirt. And he is right. But you are wrong, if you neglect to accept this offer.

Complete Exoneration of Judge Bailey's Course as Assignee

IN THE GRAFF-BENNETT MATTER.

Was Exactly Proper.

The well-known case of the Cherry Valley Iron Works and others, creditors of Graff. Bennett & Co., against J. W. Friend, J. M. Bailey and James Pickands, trustees for the syndicate that purchased the property of Graff, Bennett & Co., at the sale by the assignee, ex-Judge Bailey, was concluded yesterday. Judge Magee handed down an opinion confirming the master's report, dismissing the exceptions thereto, and dismissing the bill and cross bill, putting the costs on the plaintiffs. In his report, J. H. Miller, the master, stated that from the evidence he could find no traud, in the sale or before it, on the part of the defendants, and after the sale. Continuing, the Court said that the re maining exceptions are to the effect that the assignee's sale to the defendant trustees was fraudulent and void. They set forth as fraudulent acts, the purchase by the trustees of the claim of Thomas Carlin & Sons and W. W. Dickey for the purpose of inducing them to desist from bidding at the sale, upon their agreement not to bid; and further, in the formation of the so-called value of the property at the sale; in other words, that the purchase of the claims and the formation of the so-called syndicate were in the acts themselves, or the character of the transactions, a fraud on the other creditors. Carlin & Sons and Dickey testified Collier and Slagle for sentence in the Criminal Court, yesterday, was Ulysses Weims, for shooting John O'Hara, on Fifth ayeune, in front of McNulty Brothers' livery stable, some months ago. Weims' attorney, James K. Wallace, made a strong plea for mercy, and when he had concluded Judge had nothing to say, and Judge Collier said: "Before passing sentence in this case, Mr. Wallace, the court desires to thank you and Mr. Robertson for the able manner in which you defended this young man." Addressing the prisoner, the Judge said: "Ulysses Weims, you have been convicted of a cold-blooded, deliberate murder. More than cool, deliberate perjury. You did more than that—you tried to pass the erime from your own shoulders, and attempted to fasten to the purpose of the court thinks that the jury gave you the extent of all possible mercy by finding the verdict returned.
