ITS SILVER JUBILEE,

The Celebration of Its Natal Day by the Salvation Army at Crystal Palace in London.

NOVEL AND INSTRUCTIVE DOINGS.

Fifty Thousand Soldiers Dressed in the Garb of Thirty Nations Listen to Gen. Booth's Address.

Recigiming the Pallen.

(FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT,) LONDON, July 26 .- What a day it was ! I mean the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Salvation Army's birth. Aside from the more serious aspect-that is, the religious mission of the army-there is always lots of fun among the rank and file of the army, even on ordinary occasions. I will never forget a day I spent with the forces will never forget a day I spent with the forces one Easter morning at Epplug Forest about eight or ten years ago. On that occasion there was a rival organization known as the "Skeleton Army," supported by brewers and saloon keepers. This army was composed of the very worst characters of the East End of London, and its mission was to impede the efforts of General Booth's army.

As a result there were many lively scenes. But the "Silver Jubilee of the Army," at Crystal Palace, on the 15th inst., was free from all opposition; the army had sole command, and, as the bills announced, anybody who wished could have "16% hours of manly and spiritual recreation." General Booth and his army had the palace for a day, and they opened the gates at 6:30 A. M., and they remained open for the time just mentioned. And during that time there were sights to be seen and facts to be learned that were worth a journey from the other side of the world. It is not often in a lifetime that one has such an opportunity, and, depend upon it, those who saw the jubilee will not forget it. BISE OF THE ARMY.

Well, there is something about the Salvation Army that interests the natives of almost every civilized nation in the world. However we may differ regarding its objects and modus operandi I emphatically untain that it is one of the most remarksble organizations of modern times. To say that the Salvation Army is extraordinary is only a very mild way of qualifying it. of us remember its organization, and we are aware of the determined opposition the army has had to face from time to time and the various degrees of persecution that the "soldiers" have had to undergo. We also all know of the 101 predictions that have been made to the effect that the "army" was simply composed of a lot of impulsive fanatics and that their wild enthusiasm would soon subside. However, after all these things have been done and said I witnessed the performance of about 50,000 of the army at Crystal Palace and nationalities. It is this cosmopolitan teatpre that is of interest to Americans just as well as to the English, French or Germans.

The weather couldn't have been finer, and when the morning's sun began to chase away the gray and black clouds hundreds were already on their way to the palace. Thousands of soldiers, dressed in their peculiar uniform, were strutting about the salace grounds almost as soon as the birds on the trees were rendering their morning carols. Long before noon there were fully 50 000 members, male and female, of the "army" inside the palace gates. And what a programme they had! Bills were posted all ever, stating in the most original fashion place. Special trains from all parts of En-gland and Wales were arriving almost all day, and when the proceedings had fairly commenced beside the 50,000 soldiers there were 4,000 bandmen and 500 foreign officers and delegates. America was represented by Mrs. Ballington Booth. The sight was, indeed, wonderful.

THE SLUM SECTION.

These militant missionaries have ever been original in their methods of "Christianizing" humanity, and at their jubilee they still clung to their notions of originality. Each department of the army, for in-stance, was allotted separate space, so that visitors could at once see the plans of workring, and have ocular demonstrations as to the results of these plans. In one part one could see what had been done by the "Sum" section. In this section were reproductions, horrible enough in all conscience, but still far short of the reality, of the conditions with which the "Slum" sec tion has to deal. There were rags heaped up for a bed; old boxes for table, and chairs; grimy windows broken and stuffed with pa-When these conditions prevail in reality the army has its missionaries preaching the gospel of thrift and cleanliness. In fact, the "Slum" section gave a soul-touch-ing picture of thousands of human dens that abound in the eastern part of this vast and wealthy city. And looking at this picture one could not help thinking of the wearying battle that the soldier o: the army must have in trying to establish a moral re formation and a religion of hope into such cheerless and apparently God-forsaken dens. It is needless for me to say that the "Slum" section was well patronized during the entire day.

But there was another "display," and to me it was just as impressive and interesting as anything in the palace. This was the "Shelter" section. There was a model shel-ter, showing exactly the operation of the system. I was told there are in London now shelters for more than 600 persons. Of course these shelters are merely what their name indicates, and are for those poor, unfortunate wretches who cannot pay for a lodging of any kind. Well, at the jubilee about 500 or 600 of these "dossers," as they are termed, had an excellent meal under the auspices of the "Shelter" section, and a right good time they had. There was really nothing to indicate, as far as appearances went, that there was anything but reality in the proceedings. A short distance removed from the "Shelter" section was a model prison, and on making inquiries I was in-formed that this prison system is worked in conjunction with the shelter department. The matter is really worth the serious thought of every American interested in prison reform, and I presume there are many thousands who take an interest in the reformation of our criminal class. The object is one of the noblest in christendom.

TWELVE POOR PRISONERS. Well, in this little model prison I found 19 men dressed in English prison uniforms and they were employed showing correctly what prison life is. They were working with a will and performing exactly the kind of work that real prisoners as convicts do. The truth is some of them did their work so easily and well that I came to the work so easily and well that I came to the conclusion they had "been there before many a time" in reality. However that may be they were there steepping it lively on the treadmill, picking oakum and chopping wood. Of course this was all to point out the way in which the Government tries to reform criminals. But in way of contrast the army had its method of prison reform in invarcation to the Government. form in juxtaposition to the Government method. The army had at ready command a new "Red Maria" to meet discharged prisoners and take them to the Shelters. Inside the "Maria" there are cooking arra'ngements and any discharged man who enters the "Maria" can depend upon a good hot breakfast on the way to the Shelter. In this model prison, that is the army's, the small group of men working in it repre-mented 250 years of prison life. They had all been noted characters, and each had "done time," the lowest being 5 years and the highest 38 years. The latter was indeed a veteran, and he looked it.

But there was still another ramification of this system, and that was the labor bureau. To take charge of a discharged prisoner would seem foolish if there were nothing more to be done toward giving the unfortunate creature a start in life. To meet this requirement the labor bureau has been established. Names of men wanting been established. Names of men wanting work and the kind of work wanted are taken, and the number of men at command for the various kinds of work is published in the daily papers. Employers can thus know where to secure workmen. Of course, this list is not confined to discharged prisoners, but is open to everybody.

NOT A SCAB ORGANIZATION. Commissioner Smith, who has charge of this department, was delighted with the suc-cess achieved so far. There is also a bakery in connection with this department, so that the public can have "salvation" bread at current prices. But the labor bureau, I

THE ARMY'S IDEAS ON PRISON REPORM. may remark, does not supply men to work at places where the regular hands are striking. "The army," said Commissioner Smith, "don't deal in blacklegs or scabs," The most helpless kind of men and women are benefiting by this labor bureau, and Mr. Smith said: "We get hold of them at the Shelters, when every other resource seems to have failed them, and it is enough reward for our effort to watch the transformation that takes place in a few weeks. You can see hope coming back again into their lives and > the jubilee, and one in which every parent at least will be interested. In the long pro-cession which took place there was a de-tachment of young women looking as gay and bright as sunshine. These young women had been rescued from street life, and I was told that exclusive of the Help and Inquiry Department 1,470 women have been received into and passed through the nome during the past year. Of these only 240 have proven unsatisfactory, leaving a year's record of 1,230 women saved from a living death. Now, whatever may be our predictions regarding the Salvation Army, none of us can reasonably shut our eyes to he extraordinary work done by its agents. I trouble mysel; to state all these things because I know that so extraordinary will they appear that they will seem to be romance rather than cold truths of daily life. The army has provided work for these resened women for whom outside employment is not directly available. All kinds of needlework are done, uniforms are made, dressmaking and bonnetmaking are carried on, and there is also an extensive book-binding department. Now, who will for one moment argue that this is not a noble work however fanatical and widly demonstrative the "Army" may be? Its work really begins where the "Christian charity"

GENERAL BOOTH'S ADDRESS. There was a "monster meeting" and all the soldiers, officers and delegates were there. The English soldiers were in red, the Scotch men in bright tartan, the Irishmen with sashes of green and orange blended, Hindoos in flowering robes and yellow turteans, and Canadians in blue blouses. It was a great sight and when General Booth appeared there was a tremendous shout indeed.
In a speech he stated that the Salvation Army is represented in 35 different countries with a total of 2,829 corps, 856 outposts and 9,200 officers. Four years ago they had only 1,500 corps and 28,000 members, but now they had 50,000 enrolled members. In four years the number of their meetings had increased 1,460,000 to 2,500,000 per year. They had also 85 slum officers, 188 officers engaged in rescue work, 38 rescue homes, 65 food officers and 19 food depots. He said the army was making good progress in Germany, Norway, Sweden, India, Aus-tralia and Africa. He gave the world to understand that the army is preparing for an attack on Japan. He went on to say that at the end of the next 25 years they would have a crystal palace of their own. He also admonished the soldiers to take kindly to persecutions and have patience with thos to persecutions and have patience with those who opposed them.

He concluded: "The world is going to hell not for want of churches, chapels, creeds, Bibles or sermons, but for the want of blood-and-fire men and women who are full of the Holy Ghost. Set in practice what we preach, and go and live and work as it all those we love are going to hell—to drop straight into the great fire. We want money to carry on this campaign, and we must have no hesitation in bleeding the rich and spoiling the Eryptians."

rich and spoiling the Egyptians." CHARACTERISTIC LANGUAGE. Of course this language is, perhaps, not of the kind that a Farrar or a Spurgeon would delight in, but it is characteristic of the "army" leaders, and is, without doubt, one of the elements of its success. One cannot overlook the fact that after 25 years' hard battling against all kinds of opposi-tion the Salvation Army is to-day one of the most powerful agents for the distribution of a certain kind of morality and religion. It is here and here to stay in a very impressive form. And we must also admit, everyone of us, that the work of social redemption done by the Salvation Army during the quarter of a century of its existence has been more than remarkable. Just as the glorious work of Francis Murphy in social reform is carried on, chiefly among sections of society that ordinary church members and pastors desire to keep clear of, so have "General" Booth and his forces found out the outcasts vationists, and then came the name of the "Salvation Army." This military title of course suggested military methods of organization, and so we have those methods of society and replanted hope in their souls. Certainly organization has been the greatest element of success. The "army" had its origin in 1865 in a sermon by the Rev. William Booth in the east end of London. He was a minister in the Methodist New Connection, and was so impressed with the church's neglect of the masses that he resigned his position in the ministry and de-voted himself to the poor and outcast. His wife, whom I am informed is on her deathbed, of course has been his great help. For many years the work was known as the Christian Mission, but gradually the followers of Booth became known as the Salin operation to-day.

As the world was the parish of John Wesley, so is it the battle field of the Sal-Wesley, so is it the battle field of the Salvation Army, and to-day it is storming almost every civilized country on the globe. Sir Charles Dilke, in his "Problems of Greater Britain," tells of the rapid strides the "army" is making in Australia, and of the great social work it is doing. He says their prison brigades there are "doing praiseworthy and effective work." Sir Charles further points out that the Salvation Army is being successful even with the Hottentots.
