MONDAY, AUGUST 4, THE PITTSBURG DISPATCH, 1890 thoroughfares between Oakland and East Liberty are thronged with private and liv-ery rigs, but last evening they were con-spicuous for their absence. The special policemen, who are supposed to stop racing, had nothing to do but mop the perspiration from their noble brows. He said last night: "Oh, we don't worry about ice. We use embalming fluid upon our subjects. It's cheaper, and it keeps the bodies better." Display advertisements one dollar per TO LET. OF CONGRESS FOR SALE-LOTS. CAPPED THE CLIMAX. WANTED. being reduced from 5 to 2½ per cent, or the 16 governments in which our people are people. The wind continuet to freshes during the night, and large crowds availed themselves of the only opportunity since morning to catch the cooling effects of the breeze. People remained on the streets until a late hour. The black sky threatened rain, but that did not drive the heated crowds to their homes until along near midnight.

An unusual thing that might be witnessed during the day was the appearance of the railing around the Court House. Even in the hottest time of day it is rarely descried, but yesterday it was so. Every afternoon all summer the Fifth avenue side of the Court House has been a cooling-off spot for loafers who do nothing but sit around squirting tobacco juice on the sidewalk and talk of the weather. They have been wont to perch themselves on the iron railing, with their knees almost touching chins, and sit there all afternoon, enjoying the cooling breezes, like a lot of crows on the limb of a tree. For once the place was deserted yesterday, and the railing did not receive its accustomed polish.

But notwithstanding the torrid rays of the sun, with the deserted appearance of the streets, a large number of people availed themselves of the cool breathing spots about the city. A big crowd went out to Schen-ley Park, probably thinking it was cooler there. Panther Hollow is a delightful place to lounge about on a hot day, but the puffing and blowing one has to do to get to it, takes all the comfort out of the trip. Nevertheless, hundreds trudged there for the sake of a few hours' relief from the baking streets of the city.

A PICNIC FOR THEM.

The heat which brought misery and almost despair to nearly all was a boon to the small boy. The boys crowded into the river bathbouses in numbers that have not been equaled any day this year. From early in the morning the swimming baths were filled to their utmost, and many grown persons succumbed to the weather and took dive in the water. At the top of the Schmidt-Friday building, where Sergeant Stewart, of the United States Signal Service, makes the official prognostications on the weather, and where a cool breeze is to be had if there is one, the thermometer reached a muximum of 96°. On Observatory Hill, Allegheny, where a small-sized gale is generally blowing, the thermometer registered 96° also. At Hazelood it was 940 in the shade.

For the month of July the Signal Service observations make the highest temperature 940, July 8, and the lowest temperature 53°, July 10. The mean temperature lor July during the years from 1871 to 1890, inclusive, has been as follows:
