KISSING AN EMPEROR.

Emperor William, of Germany, has landed in England, and has been received by Queen Victoria in a real motherly fashion. Thousands of Mohammedan pil grims to Mecca have been stricken with cholers, and it is feared that the dread disease may be carried to Europe.

> IBT DUNLAP'S CABLE COMPANY.] Cowes, August 4 .- The landing of the Emperor of Germany this morning at Cowes was a splendid spectacle. At half past eleven his imperial majesty set foot upon British soil, where here R. W. Biale, the German Vice Consul at Portsmouth awaited his coming. The imperial guest had been preceded by a brilliant staff, and in passing from the royal barge over the deck of the Queen's yacht "Albert" His Majesty was greeted by the Prince of Wales and suite, amid vociferous cheers from thousands of people assembled in all sorts of craft and on shore. The Emperor in exchanging greetings with Prince Christian, to whom he was particularly amiable, ex-claimed: "I am delighted to get to England again."

The Emperor and the royal party then drove to Osborne House where a guard of honor from the Rifle Brigade was drawn up. The Emperor was received by the Queen, the Princess of Wales, her daughters and the Duchess of Edinburgh. Her Majesty's greeting was most cordial, indeed it was affectionate, for she took the young Emperor's head in her hands and kissed him upon both cheeks. The band during these roval greetings first played the German and then the English national anthems. The Victim's Brother May Decide to Claim the Dead Body.

MAKING CHANGES IN THE DEATH CHAIR

All the preparations are being completed for the execution of Murderer Kemmler by electricity at Auburn, but while the guests have been invited, the date of the legal homicide is still kept secret. Kemmler keeps up his spirits, sings to a banjo accompaniment and professes to have no fear. His brother talks of claiming the dead body, and thus heading off the scientists,

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCE.

AUBURN, August 4 .- While none of the persons invited to witness the execution of Kemmler arrived in town to-day, and information regarding the affair continued just as hard to secure and just as contradictory as ever, the feeling in Auburn as to the execution coming off has changed remarkably in a very short time. A day or two ago nobody here believed there would be any exeoution, now everybody believes that there will be one, and that it will take place very

The only addition to the town's usual population so far consists of newspaper reporters and telegraph operators, but the town folks have waked up to something like the state of excitement that attended the attempted execution last May. Crowds walk past the jail, gaze curiously through the big gate and speculate as to which particular cell Kemmler occupies. As a fact there is almost no news to be had. It is pretty certain, however, that the execution will not take place until Tuesday night at the earliest.

INVITATIONS ISSUED.

Warden Durston has issued his invita tions, a fact that was first ascertained from sources outside the jail. The invitations request that all report to the warden at the jail at 7 o'clock Tuesday night. The law permits the Warden to invite 21 witnesses. specifying that the number shall include 2 physicians, 12 reputable citizens and 7 assistants, the assistants to include the electricians. Of these the Warden has named 16. They are Dr. Carlos McDonald, Dr. Samuel B. Ward, of Albany; Dr. A. B. Southwick, of Albany, one of the State Commission, and generally called the father of the electrical death law; Dr. E. C. Spitzka, of New York; George E. Fell, of fairly and still his agony. A strong spring will be attached to this electrode also and an additional strap attached to hold the body firmly down. Kemmler Does Not Fear His Some interest was added to the situation by a rumor that Charles Kemmler, the brother of the condemned man, had resolved to come here and claim his brother's body immediately after the execution, and before the physicians could hold an autopsy. The rumor started after a letter had been received by the murderer from his brother, but whether the letter contained any such statement to this effect is impossible to learn. Heretofore the relatives of Kemmler have held themselves aloof from him, and have taken no more interest in his position apparently than if he were a stranger to them.

THE LAW WITH HIM. If Charles Kemmler does demand his brother's body the law, it is believed, will uphold him. If such a demand is made and properly complied with it will be a sad blow to the physicians who are probably attracted more from a desire to study the effects of an electric shock upon the human body than electric shock upon the human body than from mere curiosity. Kemmler himself seems to be happy enough. He and his friend, the murderer Fish, were allowed to spend a few hours together this morning. Fish strummed on his banjo and Kemmler sat on the table swinging his legs and singing to its ac-companiment. He seems to be well enough physically, and has got back these last few days into his normal apathetic mood. He pays little attention to talks about his ap-proaching death, duifully tells his spirit-ual advisers that he don't fear death, and immediately falls to writing cards, singing immediately falls to writing cards, singing dismally. Whatever religion Kemmler ever got he has probably still got. There is the best of inside authority for saying that Kemmler's religion was the simple acquiescence of a vacant mind in the truth of statements made him by persons who he had learned to look upon as friends, and the same way that a dog re-gards his master as a friend. WILLING TO DIE

WILLING TO DIE He said to-day that he was perfectly will-ing to die, but it is evident that he scarcely, if at all, realizes what the confession means. Rev. Mr. Houghton was in to see Kemmler to-day. Mr. Houghton says he has no idea when the execution will come off. It is highly probable that Superintendent Barnes of the Fire Alarm Telegraph at Rochester, who Warden Durston recently engaged as electrical expert, will have noth-ing to do with the execution. Superintend-ent Barnes had intended to start for Auburn at noon to-day, but got a telegram from the Warden telling him not to come, but to await a letter It has since been learned that Mr. Barnes has been doing considerable talking of late, and the warden has become incensed at him. It is possible that the letter will fuform Mr. Barnes that his services are dispensed with. Warden Durston's rather ostentatious announcement to-night of the engagement of Electrician Huntley, of Buffalo, is regarded as an indication that he will take Mr.

Barnes' place. Mrs. Durston is visiting the house of her friend, Mrs. Rapello, at Lawrence, near Rockaway, L. I. She will remain there until after the execution.

Warden Durston has sent them invitations. Kemmler can also have two ministers if he wishes, and Chaplain Yates and Mr. Houghton, his spiritual adviser, will undoubtedly be present. The warden himself will make up the 27 who can be admitted.

Warden Durston was vigorous in his assertion that Kemmler is as well physically and mentally as he has been at any time since his confinement. He says that Kemmler is strong physically, and that he has plenty of nerve to enable him to face death without fear. Nobody believes this, and when the time comes for Kemmler to die it is likely that there will be a frightful scene.

MAY FOOL THE PEOPLE.

Durston said he sent out the notices to the witnesses on last Friday requesting them to report at the prison to-morrow night. If this is true the experiment of killing Kemmler by electricity will probably be tried to-morrow night, unless Durston keeps the witnesses in the prison for a day or two and then has the execution take place in the early hours of the morning. The dynamo and its connections are in

There is still a change to be made in the chair. Recent experiments have shown that in the prison arrangement it is quite possible for a man to wriggle around so as to evade for a moment the full force of the current. The two electrodes, it will be remembered, touch the body on the top of the head and at the base of the spinal column. The head of the victim is strapped tightly to the chair and the electrode is pressed hard upon it by a stout spring. Even if the victim should work his head loose from the straps the spring would keep the electrode tightly pressed upon it.

A GHASTLY POSSIBILITY.

The electrode at the base of the spine however, has no spring, and experiments showed that a man could wriggle so as to Hft his spine just clear of the sponge.
