considerable damage. Many trees were blown down in the West Branch district. The steam line on the Willoughby property was broken, and a tank of oil belonging to S. D. Heffner was destroyed by lightning. In this place the Work street sewer flooded the cellars, and the electric light lines were badly damaged. The rain poured down in torrents, but luckily there rain poured down in torrents, but luckily there was no wind accompanying the storm, or the damage would have been much greater. Mrs. C. H. Morrow and Frank McCay were shocked by the lightning, but were not seriously hurt. Several houses were also struck and damaged slightly.

A cloud burst between Derrick City and Foster Brook, on the Olean, Bradford and Wellsville road, and the track was washed away for the distance of a mile, and as a result there were no trains Monday. In that district there were two houses lifted from their foundations, and one was completely demolished, though no lives were lost.

BRADDOCK, August 4.—Braddock Borough Council met to-night, and the hall was not only crowded, but the crowd roosted o the full capacity of the winding stairway. The dense mass and vitiated atmosphere were purgatorial suggestions of the hotter wave expected when the ordinance granting right of way through the borough to some traction company should come up. Burgess Shallenberger fanned himself for a time, listening to the strains of a barrel organ. The owner thereof, however, got closer by degrees, and finally what space was left in the council room was filled by the melody of Annie Rooney and other popular tunes. The Burgess could stand it no longer and ordered the sergeant-at-arms to remove Mr. Montercoli, which he did, and a petition signed by a great many people was read asking Councils to foster home industry.

Messra. Dible and Holtzman collided on matter of parliamentary law, which was the only intimation for a considerable time that there was a volcano smol lering in the hall. They were the members who called each other pet names at the previous meeting.

THOUGHT IT PADDED. A list of petitioners asking that the home company, the Braddock and Turtle Creek, be given the right of way, was presented, and Mr. Holtzman insinuatedthat it had been padded. Mr. Holtzman fought the ordinance in its various stages, and was finally called to order by 'squire Holland. Holtzman replied by stating that five to four were cowardly, using their strength to gag discussion. He argued that bribery or no bribery, the $5,000 offered by the Pittsburg, Braddock and Turtle Creek Railway Company ought to be accepted. He moved the insertion of the word "Pittsburg," and the acceptance of the bribe, if a sale to the highest bidder were to be so termed.

Mr. Dible said the $5,000 was intended for the corruption of enough members of Councils to put the measure through and was only offered the borough when the bribe tailed. He said a member had been followed and pressed to name the size of the check he wanted for his name the size of the check he wanted for his vote.

As Mr. Dible looked at Mr. Holtzman while talking the latter raised the point of order that he must address the Chair. The Burgess ruled the point well taken, and Mr. Dible proceeded to say that if the member advocating the Pittsburg, Braddock and Turtle Creek Railway could have gotten the measure through without showing his hand he would have pocketed the $0,000 and the offer to the borough would not have been heard of. Finally Mr. Dible said that a member of Council had been threatened with loss of his place if he didn't vote right.

Mr. Holtzman got his war paint on again and insisted that Holland should not address him, but the Chair, and when the latter retaliated by stating that he was addresting all, and especially some people. Mr. Bruman, a good man, who weighs at least 200 pounds, sprang to his feet and said he had never been offered a cent and he'd knock the man down who said he had.

Mr. Holtzman said there were but two members in the home company; they had made an affidavit to that effect, and he insinuated what affidavit to that effect, and he insinuated what some others hold, that they were in for speculative purposes, and would sell out. Continuing, he ridiculed those business men who said they didn't want a railroad to Pittsburg, and intimated that they weren't deuce high if they couldn't hold their trade against Pittsburg. He further charged them with being people who would start a company store, "a curse to the town," "Why throw away this $5,000? I'm sure the town needs it; besides, Mr. Mellon isn't interested. Call it bribery or what you like, I don't cave."

Mr. Speer—No money was ever offered me and my position is not at stake. [Thunders of applause from the lobby.]

Mr. Hollaud—The gentleman from the First ward speaks very flippantly, but I think it a

Ar. Holland—The gentleman from the First ward speaks very fippantly, but I think it a serious matter, and also that a corporation or anyone elso so engaged should be criminally prosecuted. Continuing at some length in this strain, Mr. Holland finally said that, while the home company did not profess to be able to build the road, it would give the citizens of the town a chance to buy stock.

About this time Messrs. Dible and Holtzman left their seats and rushed together into the center of the hall, but it wasn' for the purpose of shaking hands. The Burgess attempted to use his oil can, but each disputant insisted he had as good a right to be personal. The Burgess, in heu of a gavel, knocked the stuffing out of a Bible and a book of gospel hymns, but still the lie. After he threatened to call an officer, the motion of Mr. Dible that the ordinance be put on third reading, and final passage prevailed 5 to 4, with Mr. Holtzman's amendment knocked out.

Mr. Holtzman's power as an obstructor was now shown to good effect. He moved to amend so as to allow no sidings or switches. This caused a long fight, but finally prevailed and Mr. Holtzman slung a taunt or two into the faces of Messrs. Dible and Holland, Helizman next proceeded to attack the ordinance in another respect and succeeded in requiring that the cars begin to run at 6 o'clock A. M. instead of 7, and that they must run at least every 15 instead of every 30 minutes. He almost lost his temper, however, at his want of support, stating that Holland's backers gave him pointers, while even Horough Solicitor Stevenson allowed him (Holtzman) to fight his own battle.

A FURTHER PROPOSITION.

He further proposed to amend by requiring the successful company to begin operations in 60 days. The ground was fought over inch by inch, and finally Mr. Holland imputed inent malice to Mr. Holtzman. Holtzman-I firmly believe the gentleman Holtzman—I firmly believe the gentleman knowns he is not telling the truth.

Holland—I firmly believe the gentleman from the First ward lies, but I consider him so far below me that—

For the next five minutes nothing could be made out except "lie," "bribery," etc., and the Burgess completed the demolition of the Bible, but Holtzman scored another victory, requiring the successful company to begin work in 60 days. On his next amendment Holtzman, though knocked out on a point of order that he was essaying to make a third speech, succeeded in carrying his point, knocking out the 60 days' grace allowance the company in case it could not get its electrical appliances, motors, etc., within a year. He next moved postponement for two weeks, to give the citizens a chance to act, stating that the petition presented was cooked. He was knocked out, 5 to 4, on this, as also on a motion to recommit. The bad blood engendered showed itself in the subsecooked. He was knocked out, 5 to 4 on this, as also on a motion to recommit. The bad blood engendered showed itself in the subsequent routine business.

The matter has left somewhat of a bad taste in the mouth of the people generally. Some are loud in their denunciation of the loss of the $5.000, which, they say, would not only be of benefit to people at large, but have made over $4.000 days' work. Some of them also say that Mr. Mellon pays more taxes in the borough than the entire corporation that gets the right of way, and many other things in a similar strain.

"Truly the sun do move!" Who ever would have thought that Gentle Jeems Galvin, the old Pittsburg war-horse, would get three hits in one game? The old man broke his record yesterday, sure. The way he sailed into the hit market was a caution, and he fattened his average by several. He is becoming somewhat of a sprinter, too, and came near stealing a base on several occasions. At one time he did make a hard run and got second, when Carroll got a base on balls and crowded him off first. It was a great slugging match, and as Hanlon's beauties had A good supply of sticks on hand, they proceeded to hit hard whether it broke the bats or not. Doubles and tripples sizzling hot were sent to all quarters of the patch, and the boys ran bases like race horses. Brooklyn also got up on her toes and husiled, but it wasn't to be, and at the toot of the trumpet Our Own were announced the vic-tors. It was not a bloodless victory, however, as Pitcher Galvin tried to stop a hot one with his hand and it opened up communication with his hand and it opened up communication with his gore.

After Pittsburg had earned a couple of runs in their half of the first inning the cranks howled and felt happy, but when Ward's men had quit a gloom o'erspread the countenances of the "fans." Five runs had been scored mainly on errors. In fact, four of Pittsburg's errors were made in this inning. But in the fourth inning the local men thumped out six runs, and after that "all went merry as a marriage bell." Weyhing retired from the box and Sowders succeeded him, which slightly improved matters, as only seven hits and four runs were gained off him in the remainder of the game. The greatest surprise of the game was the work of Beckley, he having two very raw errors. Fields had two wild throws and two passed balls to his credit—or rather discredit. Ward also had a couple of errors, but he is really not in condition to play ball. Corcern's nistake was a wild throw that went credit. Ward also had a couple of errors, but he is really not in condition to play ball. Cor-coran's mistake was a wild throw that went past the grand stand and apparently was going around to see the turnstile, allowing Andrews to score from third and Bauer went all the way around.
