The local men did manage to take one from the Buffalos this series. But it was not their fault. They did nothing to merit the game. It was the aw ol work of the visitors that caused victory to rest with the Pittsburgs. Manager Hanlon's team can now doff their caps to the Buffalos, as yesterday they played a worse game than the local men ever dreamed of. They gave the Pittsburg men 14 unearned runs. For about four innings the game was a very pretty one, and the score close enough to keep them shouting. Then the jig went up in a hurry. In the fifth inning four runs were made on three hits, two sacrifice- and an error. Then, in the sixth, six runs were scored, and not one was earned. Three hits, three errors and a base on balls combined to help the score increase. on balls combined to help the score increase. The Bisons coucluded that Conningham had done enough, though it wasn't his fault, and Keefe was substituted. He acted like a man in a dream, and pitched 12 balls without getting 1 over the plate. One strike was put on the next man, and he also got a base on balls. In this three runs were scored without an

Anson's Colts To-Day.

Anson and his colts will play at Recreation. Park to-day. President O'Neil telegraphed Ted Sullivan, late manager of the Washing-tons, to get him two good pitchers. Sullivan replied that he would be here to-day with the required men. One is probably Phillips of the defunct Washington club. He is said to be a first-class man, and Sullivan wanted Mr, O'Nell to take him some time area. to take him some time ago.

TALK OF RELEASING THE MANAGER

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCE. BOSTON, August 8 .- Members of the New York Players' League Club have no hesitation in saying that Buck Ewing, star catcher and captain-manager of the cham-pion ball club of the world, is to rejoin the pion ball club of the world, is to rejoin the National League next year. Of late Buck's many talks with National League magnates have given rise to much talk among people on both sides of the baseball fence. Matters eached a crisis among the players on the New York team, while they were in Chicago during the last Western trip. In that city Ewing was frequently seen in company with Spalding, Anson and Day. Directly after these interviews, it is said, and said upon the best of authority, that Captain Ewing called upon three members of his club said upon the best of authority, that Captain Ewing called upon three members of his club and proposed what he called a compromise be-tween the two Leagues. This compromise was nothing more nor less than a proposition to the men to desert the i layers' League at the end-of this season and join the National League. These men, whose matter, by the way, are Conner, Richardson and Keefe, rejected Buck's proposition, and their reinsal was so decided that it is said the great catcher has not dared approach another man on the team. The so called "treason" of Ewing was quickly noised about among the men, and even before the club left Chucago it was debated as to whether it would not be best, all things con-sidered, to give Ewing his release. If this were done it was agreed that Buck would not be a hile to "play to b ends against the middle," so to speak, but others and that Ewing was playing great ball, was a big drawing carit, a capable manager and a wonderful captain and that he was agreat ald in this season's work, whatever he might prove to be for next. This latter argument carried the d., Ewing himself will not talk upon the subj dt, except in a general and non-committal way, and neither denies nor affirms the charges made by his asrociates. Director Talcout nor President McAlpin havo a suspicion that anything is wrong. Advices from New York declare that should be way distributed, leav-ing the Chy of Churches to the mercy of the National League.

Professions Turned Loose, To the three professions of law, physic and divinity the city of New York contributes not less than 1,000 neophytes annually, according to a writer in the New York Ledger. What becomes of a majority of the annual butches of novices is a mystery. Like pins nicely arranged on a creused paper, one sees them for a moment side by side in shining rows, on examination day, and then two-thirds of them, pin-like, pass into impene-trable obscurity. Many young men think it a fine thing to beiong to one of the learned professions. If ambition and ability were habitually coupled, this would be well enough; but, unfortunately. the createst ninnings are not batches of novices is a mystery. Like pins

DEATH OF A HERMIT. Forsnking His Father's Home He Lives

Alone in the Woods. From the Lewiston, Me., Journal.] It was a queer li e which ended last week at South Addison-that of Walter L. Tabbut, the hermit who was found dead in his hut. Not having been seen for several days, his father went in search of him and found him dead, lying in the rude box that had served him for a bed for five years, having been dead several days. When a boy, the Machins Republican says, Walter joined the Adventists and gave himself up to Bible reading and prayer so zealously that he did not hesitate to pray at all times and on all occasions, and during school hours he would break out in boisterous prayer. A lew years later he took to reading the Koran, and when a little more than 20 years old, came out a full-fledged Mohammedan. Forsaking his father's house he repaired to a neighboring wood, where he built a small stone house that for five years served as his dwelling. In the center of his abode, resting upon four stakes, is the wooden box in which he has slept. This, together with an open fire and a few cooking uteusils, made up his household effects. He was exact in the performance of his religious rites, and had certain rules which no caller was allowed to violate. No person who would admit that he had been handling the flesh of swine could enter his habitation until he had first washed his hands. He generally ate but two meals a day, and they usually consisted of buttermilk and unleavened bread. His Sabbath day began at sundown Friday and sundown Saturday marked its closing, and during the time he fasted.
