hurt to the cause, I am disposed to reconsider the decision at which I had arrived, that my personal duty in the present pending campaign was to support Mr. Pattison: that while apart from this consideration of regard for the wishes and opinions of my fellow Prohibition-ists my disposition and my judgment are un-changed, I feel that the duty I owe to others, and the effect my action may have upon them, make it incumbent upon me not to adopt the course which I had proposed.

An observant old sport remarked to us yesterday that summer hats in general, and straw hats in particular, are beginning to look quite passe. We think it, therefore, none too early to trot out our new autumn derby, especially as the inquiry for something novel in the way of a hat was quite lively the last few days. We have named our latest after the turf king of 1880, "Salvator," fully believing that it will "outron" any other derby which may be pitted against it. As will be noted, this new style has a full crown and massive curl, in keeping with the heavier clothing and overcoats worn during the fall and winter.

By all means inspect our latest derby.

As some of this catarrhal poison extended to the bronchial these of her lungs she felt a tightness and weight in her cheet. She coughed hadly, and as her disease further advanced she felt very weak and tired all the time. She could get but little sleep and felt tired and worn out in the morning.

In her weak condition every change of weather would give her a cold. Her appetite failed, and she had belching of gaf and a nauscous, sick feeling at her stomach after eating, and she had a had taste in her mouth every morning.

Her brother, Mr. Henry L. Ehrhardt, also suffered from catarrh. While he had many of the above symptoms, the disease so affected his head that he became quite deaf. He had a dropping of catarrhal mucus from his head into his throat, where it became very tenacious and hard to expectorate. After becoming cured by the catarrh specialists, at 32 Penn ave, they add:

Mr. Gill from the change that he had sold out to the Democrats last fall in Westmoreland county, and sollowed the action by reading a type written letter signed with the name of M. S. Quay, dated October 29, 1889, which produced a great sensation in the convention, which included in loud applicate as the name of Quay was announced.

Pennsylvania to entrap him, because, as he says, he had learned that through Quay several thousand dollars had been sent into the county to defeat the prohibitory amendment. The letter contained the following: I will be very giad indeed to have you help the Republican ticket, whether you are of our politics or not. The submission of the amendment to a vote of the people was not made either so benefit or to injure the liquor interest or the cause of temperance, but simply to permit the people of Pennsylvania to pass upon propositions which a very large mit the people of Pennsylvania to pass upon propositions which a very large number of them desired to have incorporated in the Constitution. As it resulted I presume it benefited your people and disposes of the question of prohibition for some time, although it was not intended specially so to operate, and inasmuch as yours was the victorious party in the struggle, you certainly have no reason to complain of the action. I sincerely trust that you will help our people out in Westmoreland, where I understand they are pretty hard pressed.

WOLFE CHANGES HIS MIND.

WOLFE CHANGES HIS MIND.

The convention was subsequently excited by the proposal of C. A. Babcock to read a letter from Charles S. Wolfe. Several delegates frantically jumped up in their seats and protested against the reading of the letter, because of the recent declaration of Wolfe that he had about decided to support Pattison for Governor. The intimation was thrown out that the late candidate for Governor on the Prohibition ticket had recauted, and that he would stand by his old friends. The letter was finally reterred to the Committee on Resolutions as a way out of the Committee on Resolutions as a way out of the gnarl. John D. Gill, of Westmoreland; H. F. West, of Philadelphia; Colonel Charles E. Hyatt, of Chester; Rev. W. B. Covert, of Westmoreland; Tallie Morgan, of Scranton, were named for Lieutenant Governor, but before a bullet was taken Messrs. West, Morgan and Gill withdrew their names, and on a rising vote Colonel Charles A. Hyatt was named by a large majority.

The Committee on Resolutions here presented the letter which was read. It is as business of the Prohibition State Convention was almost entirely confined to the nomination of candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Secretary of Internal Affairs, nearly four hours were consumed to-day in completing the work. The convention unanimously ratified the choice of the Central Committee for State Chairman, Prof. H. D. Patton, of Lancaster, and the gentlemon made a few remarks in recognition of the compliment, after which on his motion thanks were extended to the retiring Chairman, A. A. HARRISBURG August 21 .- Although the the enthusiastic Prohibitionists was the signal for uproarious applause. The committee appointed to inquire into the feasibility of establishing a daily Prohibition paper had made very little progress and was continued at the request of the Chairman. The collection of funds for the prosecution of the campaign followed.

APPEALING FOR FUNDS. Rev. W. R. Covert, a lively member of the cold water party from Westmoreland county, appealed with great earnestness, mingled with humor, for contributions to the cause. He preached short sermons, told laughable stories and availed himself of all sorts of expedients to induce subscriptions. His subcess wass illustrated by the fact that $2,693 were guaranteed, a considerable portion of which was paid in cash. In addition a basket collection was taken up amounting to $50 34. One delegate announced a contribution of $25 by his wife of her own money. The smallest county delegations sent up $190 to be used during the campaign.

Besolutions enlogistic of the late Clinton B. Fisk, thanking the railroad companies for favors extended to the Prohibitionists in reduced fares, and recognizing the Women's Christian Temperance Union as an aggressive and powerful ally, were adopted, after which Mr. Stevens presented the name of Charles Miller, of Franklin, Venango coun-ty, as a candidate for Governor.

TIRED OF AUTOMATONS. He spoke of the great importance of nomi-nating a man for the office who had all the cations for it, and said the time had passed to nominate automatons to be knocked down at the polls. A pronounced disposition to close the nominations was exhibited by those who wanted to get through early with the business of the convention, but a number of delegates frowned down upon a motion having this object in view, because they had favorites whose claims they desired to present. Judge Briggs, of Philadelphia, was one of the men who urged greater deliberation in choosing a candidate for the head of the ticket. As soon as he had taken his seat a delegate on the platform named for the posi-tion the Judge, who protested against this move, as it looked as if he had arranged it with the gentleman, whose name he even did not know. Judge Briggs said that he had received a number of letters and per-sonal requests to run for Governor, but as cause as a private soldier in the Prohibi-tion army than as its leader in the coming fight, he had declined to be considered a candidate. He pledged himself to do all in his power for the election of the ticket that might be nominated, and to battle for the cause of prohibition until his death. MORE PEREMPTORY DECLINATIONS. Ex-Chairman Stevens was also named but he rejused peremptorily to stand, and asked the convention not to commit suicide. The selection of a man who had been in the fore-front of the Prohibition fight he thought was a very unwise proceeding. Judge Camp-bell, of Fayette, who had been named, had others warmly pressed John B. Gill, of William T. Duna, of Alleghenv, was nominated by acclamation for Secretary of Internal Affaira, and Colonel Hyatt, the nominee for Lieutenant Governor, made a brief speech, in which he promised to do all he could to be elected after which the convention adjourned.

Wolfe's change of purpose as a voter is said to have been brought about by several interviews which prominent Prohibitionists had with him last night. These men subjected him to a caustic lecture for even temporarily deserting the ranks, and one went so far as to denounce him as traitor to the party Prohibitionists. The result of this conference was that Wolfe dictated the letter read in the convention.

There have already been sent into the office the returns from 14 of the reservations, and the work is progressing very satisfactorily.

"This will be the final clearing up of this kind of work in this country," said Mr. Donaldson. "When the time for the next census comes around there will be no North Americans Indians to count. There are at present about 25,000 of them, but they have been allotted a certain section of land apiece, and they will shortly disappear as the buffalo have done. A CONVICT WITH A RECORD. Recapture of a Thief Who Has Repeatedly Broken Jail. CHICAGO, August 21 .- An official of the Minnerota State Penitentiary is here with a desperate convict named John A. Long. who escaped from the Stillwater prison July 18. He got away by prying spart the bars of his cell. Long is a very clever hotel thief, and he was caught in Duluth doing this sort of work. He one day attacked the jailer with an iron bar and nearly killed him and escaped. He was captured in Ohio, and returned to Duluth and given four years at Stillwater for the erime, but he broke loose again recently. He was again caught in Ohio, and is now on his way back to prison.

Long has served terms in the California and Montana State prisons. From the Montana penitentiary he escaped, but was captured, being badly wounded by a bullet from the revolver of the pursuing officer.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH BELMONT, W. VA., August 21.—The growth of the town of Belmont has been by no means phenomenal. In fact, it has not kept pace with developments, and does not possess the hustling characteristics of the impromptu oil towns that have come and gone in the Pennsylvania fields. For an oil town it is very conservative, and no one cares to venture unless he is sure of his footing. The mercantile and other business establishments, however, are in a healthy and flourishing condition. The place has no lucenses, but is infested with floating speakeasies concealed among the dykes, where the vilest tangle foot is dealt out. In these dens gambling reigns supreme, and many an innocent and unsophisticated youth has received their first lesson in the arts by dropping a good round sum of hard-carned money. Operators and contractors find these salooms a menace to their business as their employes at times frequent these places and the excess of dissipation incapacitates them for work. The aid of the authorities has been invoked, and in a few days Belmont will be cleared of this pestilence.

The honor of opening up the Belmont pool belongs to William Johnson, of Pittsburg, who far a long time fought it out on this line. No producer ever clung to a theory or worked so assidulously as has Mr. Johnson, and certainly none have met with better success. Mr. Johnson anchored his frail bark in the Belmont field in the fall of 1882 and began operations on the Cook farm on Henry Camp run, a mile and a half south of the Belmont field. He was looking for shallow wells and HIS FIRST VENTURE.

HIS FIRST VENTURE,
had it been struck at the present time, would have made a paying well, but at that time it cost more to buy barrels than the oil was worth. Mr. Johnson then left the diggins for two years, when he returned and drilled another well on the Green Ruttencuter farm, one-third of a mile south of the Belmont field, and found a gasser in the Eureka sand. His next venture was located one-half mile south of the above well on the Cook farm, where he found four feet of sand, a little oil and some gas. From this well he naturally drew the conclusion that the farther south he went the thinner grew the sand, and that he was working in the wrong direction. He then turned his attention to the north and drilled a well on the Ab Smith farm, just on the edge of the town. This well had 19 feet of sand and sprayed a little oil, but never made a well.

At this juncture of his Belmont career, Mr. Johnson's exchequer became exhausted, and not withstanding the fact that he controlled 2,700 acres of what is now the most prolific territory, he could not induce capitalists to venture a cent. They called him crasy, and for a time his operations were suspended. In May, 1888, James Story and George W. Boss untilized Mr. Johnson's experience and the knowledge he had gained, assumed control of the 'amous island, organized the Two Brothers Oil Company, and on February 19, 1880, struck a 400-barrel well. This set the ball a rolling, and the pioneer Johnson soon followed with another well un the Browse farm, which started off at 700 barrels a day, thus crowning his efforts with success. Mr. Johnson now has six producing wells making a daily output of 800 barrels. The probabilities of an extended field yet remains for the drill to determine.

The oldest operators here think that there will be found an extension on the Ohio side on a second degree line, running northeast. This opinion seems to have received additional support from the fact that the McCullough well on the Rowland farm, located three-quarters of a mile southwest fro

Taking the Brown well as a basis of argument, which, by the way, had 14 feet of sand and is now producing 50 barrels a day, the con-summation of the Rowland and Green farm wells would indicate that they are edge ven-tures. wells would indicate that they are edge ventures. Just whether the prolific streak lies to the east or west of the Brown well, will be a matter of future revelation. On the southwestern end of the Belimont belt but little is doing, as the geological formations are irregular and broken. One peculiarity of the field that the rock dips to the northeast, while in most other pools the dip is to the southwest.

The Borcher well, located across the river, on the Gano farm, three-quarters of a mile west of Belmont developments, is dry in the Eureka sand, but they are still pegging away for something below 1,850 feet.

The Brown Oil Company's No. 3, Taylor farm, will find the sand Monday, and their Nos. 2 and 3, on the Jones farm, will most likely tap the sand Monday or Tuesday, while No. 1, Hendricks' farm, and No. 1, Core farm, will finish a few days later; their No. 4, Taylor, is drilling at 500 feet, and No. 5 is a rig-building.

On the Stewart farm the Thomas Pencer Oil Company, 1,500 feet in advance from the acre and a haif well, are drilling at 1,000 feet.

The Traveiers' Oil Company are building a rig on the J. B. Reynolds farm, three miles up French Creek from Belmont and three-quarters of a mile west of the cotton farm gasser. The Duncan Oil Company, on the A. Smith farm, have a well down 650 feet. Last night, what might have proved a serious accident, was averted by the timely flagging of the Parkersburg and Wheeling accommodation due at Belmont at 7:30, just as the train was near the trestle. The Brown Oil Company struck a heavy vein of gas and salt water in the salt sand in the well, which is located near the trestle.
