

HOSTS OF FARMERS

Listen to Candidate Delamater's Plea for His Own Election as Governor.

THE TARIFF IS THE ONLY ISSUE, According to the Views Expressed at Considerable Length by the Crawford County Senator.

BEAVER'S ATTACK UPON MR. PATTISON.

He Makes Some Insinuations Against the Democratic Nominee.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

WILLIAM G. BEAVER, August 28.—The Intero-State Picnic Exhibition always draws its largest crowds on Thursday, and the Democrats are disposed to charge Manager Thomas with a little partiality in favor of his party in generally giving the Republicans this day for the public ventilation of their views.

The throng at the grove today was estimated at 30,000. Of this number the Cumberland Valley Railroad carried about 20,000, the rest having arrived in vehicles on foot and being camped on the ground.

Miles of vehicles of all kinds were drawn up along the roads and fields in the vicinity. At noon the Cumberland Valley Railroad Company had transported more passengers to the grove than the Thursday of last year, when the crowd was the largest in the history of the exhibition.

THE CENTER OF ATTRACTION.

Republican speakers took full advantage of the fact that this was Republican day. Senator Delamater was the center of attraction, and great interest was shown in his promised speech. When he reached the auditorium at which he was announced to speak, a big crowd had gathered. He was accompanied by Thomas J. Stewart, Republican candidate for Secretary of Internal Affairs, State Senator Boyer, Auditor General McCann, Chairman of the Dauphin County Republican Committee, and a number of prominent grangers and local politicians. Governor Beaver made his appearance at a later hour.

Mr. Rhoads, master of ceremonies, introduced the Republican candidate for Governor in a few complimentary remarks, when the latter began his speech with a denunciation of the Democratic party, which occupied nearly an hour in delivery. Although the audience was composed of very good listeners, it indulged in only moderate applause as Senator Delamater appeared on the platform and pointed out the virtues of his party, referred to the alleged delinquencies of the Democratic party, and essayed a defense of his action in the matter of the grangers' equalization of tax bill.

EXPLAINING HIS POSITION.

As he was on record as having voted against the motion of Granger Brown (the Senator from York) to discharge the committee which had it in charge and thus give the Senator a chance at it, he devoted a large portion of his speech to an explanation of his course to show that his position had been misunderstood. He informed the audience that this was the first time he had visited the picnic, which he learned had been started 17 years ago.

AFTER INDICATING the purpose of the benefit in imparting education intended to benefit the farmers he remarked that he would not discuss politics but for the fact that the bill had been misapprehended. He informed the audience that the progress of the States and nation was ascribed to the wise policy of his party. It had been organized and perpetuated to do the greatest good to all people.

IN THIS campaign the great, living issue was the tariff and the thing of it was, shall American citizens be paid for their labor? Wonderful enterprises had sprung from it, and, as a result, a market had been created for the farmers' products. As showing the difference between the operations of a tariff and free trade he stated that American workmen would not live in the miserable hovels occupied by people in some of the old countries.

A PLEA FOR LABOR.

He was for American labor, and wanted it taken care of in the future. The workmen should not only be able to own comfortable homes, but they should be privileged by receiving good wages to lay them aside. An examination of the platforms of the great parties was invited. For the first time two years ago Pennsylvania Democrats had the face of a man who had free trade absolutely, and the answer was Harrison's election. To insure the continuation of the policy of protection and election of a Republican, the speaker stated that there should be no doubt as to the result at the next election in Pennsylvania.

The Senator Delamater then branched off on the subject of having discussed the State taxation. He stated that twenty-five years ago the Republican party had taken the tax of real estate for State purposes and required the corporations to pay all State taxes. The public debt of the Commonwealth had been gradually reduced under Republican administration, and now the State owed practically nothing, thanks to the administration of Governor Beaver. But notwithstanding this relief to the agricultural interests, complaints, which grew louder as time passed, were made that the farmers were discriminated against in the matter of taxation and that corporations were not adequately taxed as compared with the burdens imposed on the agriculturists.

A QUESTION OF TIME.

The education of the people was a gradual process. The farmer's interests were slow work, but it finally came, even if it did take a civil war to accomplish it. Corporate power of course sought to be relieved of taxation as much as possible, and a great step had been made in the direction of a more equal system of taxation. A great party had said in so many words that real estate was paying more than its share of taxation and that it ought to be relieved and himself, by a gradual process of education, had come to a believer in the idea.

Senator Delamater then gave a history of his connection with the grangers' tax bill. He had voted for the favorable report of the bill for the purpose of having discussed in open Senate, although he did not think at the legislation the farmers needed to improve their condition. He did not want the impression to prevail that the measure was being smothered. Subsequently he voted against the discharge of the committee. The allegation that his action was dictated by opposition to the farmers' interests was a hallucination. The bill had not been passed, he stated, but he had been asked to draft a resolution for the creation of a commission to frame a new tax law, in which he took care that the grange was represented.

OTHER VALUABLE MEASURES.

If the grangers' bill was not passed the Republican Legislature had passed laws that would win for them more than the annual school appropriation $1,000,000 a year, and had diverted a large portion of the liquor license tax to the counties. The farmers could calculate how much these measures would relieve them in lessening local taxation.

On the question of ballot reform Senator Delamater said he was in favor of the system of elections in operation in this State, believing the machinery to be superior to that of any other State. He was in favor of honest and fair elections, and he would support any bill, whether incorporating the Australian, the Saxton or any other system which would make sure and certain the result. The Republican party was then organized.

T. W. PHILLIPS' MANY NEW VENTURES

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

BUTLER, August 28.—Zelienople just now is attracting considerable attention. Should two or three more wells like the Lashav venture come in, confidence in the territory would be fully established, and another hundred-foot excitement would not be at all improbable. The old well is producing a good 60 barrels a day, and shows no signs of declining. Six or eight wells are under way, and by this time next week the number will most likely be duplicated. Lashaw & Co. have No. 3 rig ready for the drill, and are down 400 feet with No. 2 on the Allen farm, and on the island Cunningham & Co. are down 400 feet with No. 1.

The Shaver well, three miles from Prospect, is doing 12 barrels a day. This small strike has stimulated some new work, and like Zelienople, if others follow, this section of old Butler would become a busy place, at least for a time. McFarland & Co. are building No. 3 rig on the Shaver, and the Pioneer Oil Company, the Adam Webber farm, have a rig already ready for the drill, and are building four more within a radius of a mile from this point. The Oil Company are doing considerable work. The Shaver well, three miles from Prospect, is doing 12 barrels a day. AN ACTIVE OPERATOR.

T. W. Phillips is also doing quite a stroke of work and is getting a nice production. At Great Hill, he has completed a few days' work on the George Welsh farm in the Saxenburg field. It is good for 50 barrels per day. They torpedored their No. 12 on the Crawford farm, and they are now drilling a No. 13. They got a dry hole today on the Wash farm, south of Amerson.
