CORRESPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH. MONONGAHELA CITY, PA., September 5 .- Early next week the Monongahela Valley Directory will be issued from this city. Advance sheets are in possession of THE DISPATCE correspondent, from which the following synopsis of historical events and comments is culled: From an historical standpoint the Monongahela Valley is traught with the most profound interest. Long before the ripple of the quiet waters was disturbed by the cance of the Red Men, when the forest upon her rock-ribbed hills first echoed to the roar of the storm king, nature had poured into ber lan exhaustless resources. Little more than a century has passed since the development of this valley began, and to describe its growth is to tell the development of the nation's industries,

IN DAYS OF YORE. Through this highway marched the advance columns of emigrants who laid the foundation of the great Western States. Where now stands the metropolis of the valley England and France strove to hold the empire. Art and architectural beauty mark the spot where, on the 17th of April, 1754, began the memorable war whose operations extended over continental Europe, Asia, Africa and America, and spread devastation, terror and death for eight entire

Prior to this war attempts at settlement had been constantly interfered with by the Indians, but now the hunting grounds of the Iroquois, the Shawness and Delawares were supplanted by fields of pasture and waving grain. Fort Burd-now Brownsville-and Fort. Pitt became the strongholds of the early settlers. From these two points begon the growth and development of perhaps the richest valley in the world. The Monongahela river and its tributaries trace a mineral field unsurpassed in quality and extent.

When the eminent geologist, Sir Charles Lyall, investigated this field, he said: "I was truly astonished at beholding the richness of the seams of coal which appeared everywhere on the flanks of the hills, and at the bottom of the valleys, and which are accessible in a degree I have never witnessed

WHEN COAL WAS USED.

The use of this coal by the inhabitants is noted as early as 1784, but the first shipments of which we have knowledge were made by a company of French merchants in 1803. Within the 80 years following this date it has been estimated that the shipments and consumption of coal have amounted to 2,096,865,011 bushels, 108,487,800 bushels of which were removed in the year 1883, With a contiguous area of 2,500 square miles, it can be truly said that the product of this field has accareely been touched. By act of Pennsylvania Assembly, in 1782, the Monongahela river was "declared a public highway within the limits of the State, so far as it had been or might be made nively. far as it had been or might be made navi-gable for rafts, boats or canoes." In 1814 a river commission was appointed by act of Assembly to inquire into and report upon the advisability of creating dams and locks. In 1832 an effort was made in Congress to have the work done by the National Gov-ernment as an extension of the navigation of the Ohio to connect with the national road at Brownsville.

road at Brownsville.

This project failed, but on the 13th of November, 1844, the "Monongahela Improvement" was formally opened by the Navigation Company. From Cumberland, Md., where the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad had then reached, traffic was carried via the National pike for 75 miles to Baltimore it was tensified to the "Magic City."

selling rapidly, and building is going on constantly. A mammoth plate glass plant is locating here, as also a large shovel tactory. Charlerol is in the immediate vicinity of one of the richest gas territories in the world. The future looks bright, and nearly everybody has unbounded faith in the "Magic City." wia the National pike for 75 miles to Brownsville, where it was transferred to packets. This route was crowded with passengers. This continued until 1852, when the Pennsylvania Company opened their road up the valley. The Navigation Company had already carried 800,000 passengers. In 1856 navigation was opened to and picturesque valley. From an histori-Geneva, 32 miles further up the valley.

THE CHANGES OF TIME. River navigation is now supplemented by railroads on both sides, and both are loaded with freight and passengers, the river being insufficient to carry the trade. Other railwest, and branch roads ascend the side valleys and ravines to the mines on the Morgantown, W. Va., a beautiful little city, is located on the right bank of the Monongahela, in Monongalia county, W. Va., of which it is the capital. The town was incorporated in 1785, but the settlement dates at least a quarter of a century earlier. The same gloomy record marks the early settlement and growth or this locality that is common to the whole of Western Pennas common to the winds of and adventur-ous persons from the East push into new localities, amid the wilds of the forest; encounter the disturbed and enraged red man and perish. Meanwhile their tales of wonder and the love of adventure attract others:

The earliest settlement in this locality was made by a party of Dunkards, who first stopped at the mouth of the creek bearing that name, but afterward located on Cheat river, where they were ultimately killed by the Indians, with the exception of Dr. Thomas Eckerly, the head of the company. who was absent at a trading post on the Shenandoah. In 1758 Thomas Decker and some companions located at the mouth of the creek that now forms the southern boundary of the town. The following spring, however, most of the inhabitants were killed by a party of Indians from the Mingo and Delaware tribes. One of Decker's party, who escaped, carried the news to Fort Burd, now Brownsville. The garrison here was too weak to detach a pursuing party and the commandant, Captain Paul, sent a messenger to Captain Gibson, commanding at Fort Pitt, who immediately dispatched a scout with 30 men to intercept the Indians, but their efforts were unavailing.

Morgantown, since its incorporation in salety, under the supercargoship of Mr. creek that now forms the southern Morgantown, since its incorporation in 1785, has been a thriving village and is now a wealthy town of 3,800 population. Sit-uated at the head of navigation, 105 miles from Pittsburg, and surrounded by im-mense mineral wealth, its natural ad-vantages cannot be overestimated. The streets are well laid out at right angles and planted with trees, presenting to the stran-ger a picturesque and pleasing appearance. The social and moral characteristics of the citizens are above the usual standard, as they partake of the culture and education derived from the institutions of learning that are here located.

Brownsville, Fayette county, Pa., is situated near the head of the fourth pool, & miles by water from Pittsburg. This is the point where the national turnpike crosses the river. Here are located three separate boroughs, West Brownsville, Bridgeport and Brownsville, three distinct municipalities, but really one community. Browns-ville and Bridgeport are on the left bank of the river in Fayette county, a $50,000 bridge

MANY NOTABLE INCIDENTS.

Brownsville, as the theater of many incidents in the history of the Monongahela Valley and the West, as well as from its early settlement, is a point of much historical interest. Fort Burd was creeted in 1759, by terest. Fort Burd was erected in 1759, by Colonel Boquet, then in command at Carlisle. Among the archives at Harrisburg, in Colonel Burd's journal, is found the following record: "Ordered August, 1759, to march with 200 men of my battailion to the mouth of Redstone creek, where it empties itself into the river Monongahela, to cut a road somewhere from General Braddock's road to that place, as I shall judee best, and on my arrival there to erect a fort."

The fort erected by Colonel Burd continued long to be the favorite rendezvous for those men who kept watch upon the move-those men who kept watch upon the move-ments of the Indians inhabiting the headwaters of the Ohio and its tributaries. In 1775 the town of Brownsville was laid out upon the site of the old fortification, and the place became one of much celebrity among the emigrants to Kentucky as a point of embarkation. This circumstance gave rise to a lively trade in the construction of keel oats. Emigrants here embarked with their families and their entire stock of goods for the long voyages down the Western river.

In 1789 the wagon load of merchandise was brought over the mountains on the southern route, being nearly that now traversed by the national road. Brownsville at once sprang into a place of great im-portance both in the manufacture of iron and boat building. The steamer Enter-prise, the first boat that ascended the Mississippi and Ohio rivers from New Orleans to Pittsburg, was built at Brownsville, and her engines were made in the Brownsville shops. The building of the national road, which was completed to Brownsville about 1817, gave a great impetus to all the business interests of that section.

California, Pa., is a pleasantly located village, seven miles below Brownsville, on the left bank of the river coming down. It is in Washington county. The title to the land on which this town stands traces back to an Indian which known in early downs. to an Indian chief known in early days as "Indian Peter," who sold it to a Mr. Young, by whom the Indian title was trans erred to Robert Jackman, who in 1784 took out a patent for it under the laws of Pennsylvania. From Mr. Jackman the title passed through various hands until it became vested in Job Johnson, who associated with him five partners and laid out the present village, which was incorporated May 1. village, which was incorporated May 1.

The first permanent settlement on this tract of land was made about 1778. The town is neatly laid out on a gently sloping plain and the broad streets, shaded by beautiful trees, run at right angles. The population of the place numbers about 2,000, and the buildings are principally brick. Cali orna is noted for its normal schools, which, in many respects, even similar institutions. many respects, excel similar institutions. Last year 642 students were enrolled.

SOME SMALLER TOWNS. Coal Center, formerly called Greenfield, was laid out in 1819 by Robert Jackman. It was incorporated under the title of Green-field in 1834. It is situated at the month of Pike run, on the left bank of the Monon-gahela river in Washington county, 52 miles by river from Pittaburg. In its early days, the trade of the town consisted in shipping, by flat boat, produce to New Orleans and the Southwest. Fayette City is a thriving town on the right bank of the Monongohela river, in Fayettee county, about 14 miles below Brownsville. The place was first settled in 1794, and was laid out by Colonel Edward Cook, an active participant in the whisky insurrection against the Government. The town, when first laid out, was called by Colonel Cook, Freeport, but its name was atterward changed to Cookstown. It is now incorporated under the title of Fayette

AN IMPORTANT PLACE. Monongahela City is situated on the left bank of the river. 30 miles from Pittsburg and 75 miles from Morgantown. It is one of the most beautiful locations in this fertile cal standpoint it occupies an important place in the annals of the country. It was the chief rendezvous during the whisky insurrection of 17914. A meeting of 200 delegates held August 14, 1794, was presided over by Colenel Edward Cook, founder of Cookstown, now Fayette City. The Secretary of the meeting was no less a personage than the celebrated Albert Gallatin, Secretary of the Treasury under President Jefferson. The town of Elizabeth, 23 miles above Pittsburg, on the right bank of the Monor gahela river, was laid out in 1787 by Colonel Stephen Bayard, and called Elizabethtown, in honor of his wife, whose re-mains repose in the burlal ground within the borough limits. The first settlers of the township were William, Daniel, Rickard and Samuel Applegate, four brothers, who settled on the east bank of the Monongahela river, between the mouth of Mingo creek and the Youghiogheny, previous to the Declaration of Independence der and the love of adventure attract orders. larger numbers pursue the same course; forts and blockhouses are built; intelligent resistance is offered; modern civilization is planted and the men of the forest are doomed.

The title of the land on which a part of the city now stands, was obtained by the issue of patent No. 3783, under the laws of Pennsylvania in 1769. In 1769 the title passed into the hands of Joseph Parkinson, who in that year laid out the town and gave A SHIP-BUILDING POINT. who in that year laid out the town and gave it the name of Williamsport. Previous to that date it was known as Parkinson's Ferry. The population in 1810 numbered about 500. In 1833 the town was incorporated as a borough under the name of Williamsport. Since then the town has grown into a beautiful city and contains a population of 4,000. It is the largest town on the Monongahela river, above the confluence of the Youghoigheny and occupies one of the most eligible situations in this magnificent

The original papers of the schooner are still in possession of Robert C. Walker. For many years Elizabeth had the largest boat-building establishment of any town on the Monongahela river. The thrift of the town is now very largely derived from the coal industry, which is particularly well repre-sented in this part of the valley.

BEATING A MAN AT HIS OWN GAME. Cambler Who Challenged the Wrong

Party for Once in His Life. RE DIDN'T SHOOT QUITE QUICK ENOUGH

Mr. James Searborough, of Robinson township, yesterday received an invitation to join the Argonauts in their reunion in San Francisco. Mr. Scarborough was once famous Nimred in the Rockies. He, when a boy, fell in with Kit Carson, and, though averse to killing Indians, had no very warm side for them, as for many years they gave him much trouble. Hunting, however, was a passion with him, and the woodcraft he then acquired has not deserted him yet and he can still trail game with almost the unerring instinct of a hound. The advocates of the culture of the "man ly art," claim that a knowledge of it tends to make its possessor peaceful, on the ground that he can afford to despise the bravado of men whom he can "do up" whenever he relief season. See announcement on Fourth sees fit, just as the lordly St. Bernard treats with good-natured contempt, the snarls and growls of the ill-tempered little curs of low degree that snap at his heels in the street, A CASE IN POINT.

If a man be of a magnanimous disposition

the doctrine certainly holds good and a case in point is turnished by Mr. Scarborough. He once located a good claim in one of the California mining settlements and went to work to make the competence he now enjoys. Mr. Searborough's nerve and ability as a marksman gave him courage to hunt grizzlies, and he killed so many of them that he became known as "Grizzly" among the miners. The necessity of promptly putting a bullet where it would do the most good soon gave Mr. Scarborough the ability to throw his rifle to his eye with accuracy and pull the trigger almost at the curacy and pull the trigger almost at the same instant. If he didn't, the grizzly

One day he was passing a gamblers' roost, where toughs of all kinds congregated, and as it happened, was not "heeled." One of the gang, a quick and a dead shot, who had heard of Mr. Scarborough's skill, conceived the idea that it would not only be sport, but add to his renown, to kill "Grizzly" in a duel, and to bring it about hurled a rock at him as he passed, the stone whistling past within a few inches of his head.

FORCED TO FIGHT. Though irritated, he was forced to put up with the insult for the time, but expressed a decided opinion of the gambler, which gave the latter an excuse to challenge, and as Mr. Scarborough could not refuse to accept without rendering his condition unbearable, he chose a second, and there was a meeting. He was advised that the gambler would shoot before the fatal word was pronounced, and exhorted to act accordingly, which he did. As predicted, the gambler fired before the word was given, but Scarborough's pistol cracked first, and the ball from the gambler's revolver ploughed the earth and his arm fell pow-erless by his side. Scarborough had said he would "wing" his man, and true to promise he did, and the gambler was trken off the ground with a broken shoulder. In order to prevent a repetition of the un-pleasantness, Mr. Scarborough informed his opponent that if it must be repeated he would shoot to kill next time. He was never challenged to shoot again, and as his Herculean frame was known to be braced with steel nerves he was safe from other methods of actack, and was never again insulted in that camp.
