Unruly School Children Pilfer at the Exposition Building.

TURNED THINGS UPSIDE DOWN.

A Big Popular Vote for Underground Electric Wires Polled.

THE SHIP CANAL THE TOPIC TO-DAY

The attendance at the Exposition yesterday and last evening was something over 20,000. Hundreds of people came to the city on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and swelled the afternoon attendance. When the city visitors came in the evening there was indeed a crowd. The talk of the day was the actions of the Allegheny school children, who were admitted by passes. They swarmed the building like flies, stole cards, pounded on pianos, and for a time completely turned the whole building upside down. One little girl purloined a whole armful of sample cakes of soap, and was taken to Manager Johnston's office, but released after being sysred. The police dropped everything else, and crased some of the boys out of the gates.

the complaints sent to the office of the depredations of the youngsters, and when seen last night said: "Never, in all my experience, have I seen worse conduct, or a nore unmannerly crowd. Those Allegheny children seemed to do everything they should children seemed to do everything they should not do, and hundreds of complaints were sent into the office about them. They pilfered boxes and candy from the counters, shouted, jostled the other visitors, and behaved in the most disorderly manner. If the children's parents cannot control them they ought not to let them come the Exposition at all. Surely some teachers might have been sent to look after them here? might have been sent to look after them here? The directors are very anxious that the children should come here and enjoy themselves, but if they cannot do so in a more orderly manner, the free tickets will all have to be cancelled. We hope that the parents or teachers will see to it that an improvement is made. The Excession, with so muchivaluable property stored up in its halls, is hardly a fit romping place for all the unruly children in Pittsburg."

Voting at THE DISPATCH headquarters was a little one-sided. The question was: "Do you favor or oppose a law compelling telegraph, telephone, electric light and electric car companies to place all wires underground?" The precision with which the "Yeses" went down on the book argued well for underground wires. Page after argued well for underground wires. Page after page of affirmative votes was recorded and only four "noes." These that registered "no" said that they did not think an underground system practical. Some of those who voted "yes" did so with the provise "If it is possible." To resume the vote nearly everyone is in favor of underground electric wires if practical, and if there is such a thing as putting them out of harm's way, the people demand it to be done.

The voting topic for to-day is: "Should the National Government aid in the construction National Government aid in the construction of the proposed Lake Erie snip-canal." Voters will please register their names, address and answer in the poll-books at THE DISPATCH

SHEAFER & LLOYD,

Successors to Wattles & Shenfer; Diamonds, Silver, Statuary.

A structure of bright mahogany, beauti-fully carved, encloses a very large square space, in which showcases, tables and gradusted steps all made of the same wood, form a reversed square or maltese cross. Two large plate glass cases face the north and middle nisles, while the other sides of the square are formed by immense graduated platform steps on the west, and flat glass cases on the east. Facing the middle aisle is a very fine display of sterling silverware, a tea set of repousse work, six pieces, valued at more than $1,000; while there is every beautiful creation possible in silver in the smaller forms. In the flat case on the east side is a wonderful canary diamond (which shines as only a diamond can) that weighs 58 carats, value $16,000. A necklace of three strands of the purest pearls each as large as a marrowfat pen, is carded at $12,000. The ost careful observation failed to discover in shape, with vivid green lights through it. This is worth $2,000. A diamond scroll pendant or lace pin is worth $825. Another pendant $950. It is called the "sun" and ts rays branch out wondrously. The "star," snother pendant of diamonds, is worth $1,300. There is a huge bluish green emerald as big as a marble. Watches, chains and such trifles are scattered everywhere, and there is a perfect glitter of jewels generally. On the graduated steptables (or whatever may be the technical term) is a display of cut crystal glass—something to look at. The glass is so thick and clear, the cutting so deep and varied, that they shine like icicles under a bright sun. There are lowly sometimes to the sound of the pupils, under the circum-stance. bowls square, triangular, round and with the huge punch bowl of the star, fan and piliar cutting. There are vases of the celebrated Hawkes glass, (whose exhibit in Paris took the gold medal), which have a most curious effect as you look at them. One set is red and white, another set green and white. In certain lights they look all white or all red or all green as the case may be. The colors are apparently changable, but totally different from irrides cent glass. It is impossible to do justice to this charming exhibit in the limits of a sin-Numbers of most beautiful obects d'art are necessarily omitted. Ma-

Supurb Display. Included in the space of this notable exhibit are to be found the elegant Decker, supurb Knabe, popular Fischer pianos, celebrated Estey organs and pianos, the cheaper grades to suit all purses and re-quirements. So careful has been Mr. Hamiln's business conduct that the mention of his name is guarantee of worth and re-mability, and his supplies are only procured from such manufacturers as prize reputation above all things. Beautiful Work Displayed by J. R. Pearson, 96 Pifili Avenue, Pittsburg, and 43 and 45

Federal Street, Allegheny. it is a pleasure to look at pictures like The variety of styles is illimitable—there is everything, from a sweet baby enjoying its morning bath in a big basin to aged men and women who have long forgotten that they ever wore golden curls and toiled around holding mamma's finger; large groups containing 20 or 30 people, small groups of three and four, single figures, whole families, college and camping parties, and brides, of course, in full array fill the vast space from ceiling to floor. You know when looking at these pictures that they are marvelously good likenesses. When the portraiture is satisfactory and finish of the highest order of photographic art you must indeed be difficult to please if you want anything more.

THE HE NO TEA HONG. Where They Give Ten to All

Without cost, and served in the best manner, in pretty Japanese cups. The He No Tea Hong is in itself, without doubt, most educational. People are taught the actual customs and habits of the Celestials; they learn about their style of architecture and the materials they use in the construction of their homes. It is valuable information acquired in the easiest and most agreeable manner. Although the magic cave was not quite finished yesterday, it is only fair to any one who will suggest a plan whereby such a cave can be constructed on a better principle the sum of $3,500. The firm cer-tainly is convinced that it cannot be ex-MANAGER JOHNSTON WILD.

Manager Johnston was nearly wild with an extravagant offer. When all is said and done, however, the question of He No Tea is the one of vital importance; for it con-cerns home comfort and health. Compare it with the stuff, by courtesy called tea, and which must disarrange the consumer's diges-tive organs, and see whether you are willing to admit any but the pure, fragrant He No within your doors. There is no difficulty about testing or tasting it, for all that is necessary is to present yourself at the Tea Hong and have it served to you. It is a droll idea to have a flaming dragon preside over a spot where they want people to come and enjoy themselves; for what man or woman fails to re-member how, from their earliest infancy, the dragon was held up to them as the most of objects, the awful thing that would take possession of them if they were naughty! Yet here is a dragon that has become the pet subject of the visitors, who while they gaze right into the flaming jaws of the monster-a forcible instance, truly, of what juxtaposition will do for us. The Tea No Hong has come right to us, captivated all hearts, made Pittsburg a city of tea drinkers, and created a huge sensation generally.

HOPPER BROS., NO. 307 WOOD ST,

Fine Furniture, Hangings and Carpets. Delightful additions have been made to this charming exhibit, in North gallery, in the form of two luxurious chairs, the arm rests and head pieces being composed of polished horns, whose natural curves conform thoroughly to the shape of the chair. The covering material is brocatelle—the color olive green. The companion differs in the color, which is mahegany brocatelle, the seat mahogany tapestry. The work-manship upon these chairs is very fine. A sofa calculated to make the non-possessor envious is covered with full mahogany brocatelle, the trimming a brand new style of netted fringe, with balls and tassels ingeniously commingled. A handsome black tur rug lies in front of this haven of rest, the glossy sheen of which seems to empha-size the mahogany tint. The refinement and perfect taste which marks the entire arrangement of this vast room grow upon you with each visit, until you are ready to de-clare that it is the prettiest thing of the kind you ever saw. The storerooms on Wood st. are filled with any amount of these things, and it will repay strangers and Pittsburgers to call there.

AN OVERFLOW OF PUPILS.

Lincoln School Directors Trying to Find Room for Them-Publishers of Books Unable to Supply the Demand-A Start-

A special meeting of the directors of the Lincoln School, Twenty-first ward, was held the alightest blemish or particle of difference last night to consider what measures should in hue or size. A gem to make one's mouth | be taken to relieve the present overcrowded water has the distinction of being the largest opal in the United States. It is oval the school was so great that an old building, formerly used as a store and dwelling, was hastily prepared and the children of two of the primary rooms placed therein. The rooms are small and during cold weather would scarcely be habitable. stances.

Another difficulty arising from the increase curved over-tops; candelabras for five lights with the newest square flat bases and surmounting all is Gourley & Co., from whom the majority of the books are obtained, are unable to supply the demand. Such an increase in attendance that occurring was unlooked for by school be publishers, and they failed to lay in a suffici supply.
