for a mystery. This conclusion is not well founded, as Mr. Griffith, one of the principal owners, said that everyone interested in this locality of the field, would get a square deal; and that the well was open to all visitors. Last night about 12 o'clock the jars broke, leaving a part of the tools in the holo, and sev-eral days will clapse before the well is drilled in.

The Harley well is reported to-night as through the bowlder, and at the present rate of drilling will find the sand the first of the week. Those who claim a thorough geological knowledge of the northeastern end, of the field venture the opinion that if the Harley is not a duster it might as well be, as far as a paying investment is concerned. Gibson & Giles' Harbush No. 6 is doing from 6 to 7 inches an hour to-night. In this venture the pay was found deeper in the sand than in the other Harbush wells, and a number of practical operators are of the opinion that there is another pay farther in. No. 3 Harbush is making 37 inches an hour to-night; No. 2 Harbush, 22, while No. 1 shows no deviation from yesterday's gauge.

GALLANT GEN, LOGAN

A Hitherto Unpublished Story of His Disobedience of General Grant's Orders.

DIRECTED TO TAKE THOMAS' PLACE

He Refrained From Doing So, Having Satisfied Himself the Latter Was Acting Wisely.

THE WISDOM OF HIS COURSE PROVEN.

Though Laurels That Might Have Been His Were Give to Another.

COURSPONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH. WHEELING, October 10 .- The engagement between the armies of Thomas and Hood, known in history as the battle of Nashville, was one of the most important of the war. Had the rebels been victorious in that engagement, the outcome of the rebellion might have been wholly different. If Hood had got Forth the result can scarcely be conjectured. Naturally, that battle has been treated of by all the historians of the war, and on one point they all seem to

It is recorded in history that in the few week's prior to the battle of Nashville, both President Lincoln and General Grant were dissatisfied with Thomas' failure to attack the enemy. Grant, in his own story of the engagement and the events which preceded it says: "Hood was allowed to move upon Nashville, and to invest that place almost without interference. Thomas was strongly fortified in his position, so that he would have been safe against the attack of Hood. He had troops even enough to annihilate him in the open field.

"To me his delay was unaccountable, sitting there and permitting himself to be in-vested, so that, in the end, to raise the siege obliged to remove him unless he acted promptly. He replied that he was very sorry, but he would move as soon as he

General Logan happening to visit City Point about that time, and knowing him as a gallant, prompt and efficient officer, I gave him an order to proceed to Nashville to relieve Thomas. I directed him, however, not to deliver the order or publish it until he arrived there, and if Thomas had moved then not to deliver it at all, but communicate with me by telegraph,

READY TO MOVE AT LAST. After Logan started, in thinking over the situation, I became restless and concluded to go myself. I went as far as Washington City, when a dispatch was received from General Thomas announcing his readiness at last to move, and designating the time of his movement. I concluded to wait until that time. He did move, and was successful from the start. This was the 15th of December. General Logan was at Louiswille at the time this movement was 'made, and telegraphed the facts to Washington ceeded no farther himself.

This story, substantially, is told by all the writers who have touched upon this part of the history of the war; yet, it is now de-clared on high authority that, as to the part General Logan took in that history, all these writers, including General Grant, were misinformed, and the revised version of the narrative east a new light on the character of General Logan-a light which shines the brighter because, so far as can be discovered, General Logan never made public the facts.

BUTLER SUPPLIES SOME DETAILS Judge R. H. Cochran, President of the Wheeling Bridge and Terminal Railway Company, a soldier in Thomas' army in the war, and now a member of the Executive Committee of the National Council of Administration of the G. A. R., has just re-turned from a trip to Boston. While there he called on Benjamin F. Butler, an old nequaintance, and in their conversation General Butler told him a story which he said had never been printed, but for the entire truth of which he vouched.

General Butler says that early in that December General Grant summoned him to City Point to hold a consultation. He found there a number of prominent Generals. To them General Grant stated his uneasiness lest through what he considered Thomas' needless delay, irreparable harm might be done. His fear was that Hood would get North, and as Thomas did not seem disposed to move in response to repeated urgings, he had concluded to remove him. The question was whom to send to Nashville to re-

General Butler suggested: "Send Logan. He is competent, active, prompt. Moreover, he is popular with the soldiers, and his assuming command will cure the growing discontent in that army."

The suggestion was adopted, and the order written relieving Thomas and placing Logan in command, not to be published, however, if Thomas had moved when Logan reached Nashville.

LOGAN'S MAGNANIMITY. Logan left City Point in the first week in December, and went to Louisville, as history relates; but he did not stop there, as has been generally supposed.

General Butler says General Logan went en to Nashville, saw Thomas, saw his prin-cipal officers and his army, saw the situation and the preparations for operation. Thomas had not moved and was not ready to move. Logan's orders were positive; he was to relieve Thomas unless the latter had moved. But from bis observation and from what he was told, Logan concluded that Thomas was doing the best he could and as well as anybody could do to prepare to attack Hood. He believed that it would be un-just to remove Thomas just as he was prepared to act. Had he been removed then, the new commander could have been ready to move in a day or two, and the movement would probably be victorious. To a man ambitious as Logan is said to have been, the temptation to act upon his orders must have been great.

General Logan quietly returned to Louisville with the paper giving him Thomas's command in his pocket. He reached Louis-ville December 13, and remained there, silent, until the 15th, when he heard of Thomas's victorious movements. Then he telegraphed to General Grant that he would go no further.

'Logan's magnanimous conduct on that occasion," said General Butler, "and his moral courage in accepting the risk of putting his own judgment, after personal inspection, against the authority of his superior at a distance, were traits of a character understood only by those who knew him best. Logan told me the story at the time in confidence, in answer to an inquiry as to why he was so long in reaching Louis-ville. I have never given the story to the public, but I do not feel that it is wrong to tell it now that both Thomas and Logan are gone. The battle of Nashville was the first in the war in which the conquered army was literally annihilated, and in history when it is finally made up, that victory will rank above the achievement of Sherman's march to the sea. Sherman took the flower of his own and Thomas' armies to pierce through the rotten shell of the Rebellion, and left Thomas a culled force to meet the real foe."

STILL THEY COME. EXCURSIONISTS FILL THE EXPOSITION

To-Day's Musical Programme—British Airs This Evening — Wonderful Artificial iongsters - Voters Think the Show Should be Kept Open Next Year as Long as People Come.

"A 'swell' crowd to-night, is it not?" queried one of the English iron and steel delegates at the Exposition last evening, as he surveyed the visitors through a dainty eyeglass. And a "swell" crowd it undoubtedly was. Friday is usually the antithesis of Saturday. The former day is as much the pet day of the classes as the latter is of the masses. Large excursion parties were also present last night, there being a regular invasion of visitors from the countryborhood of 7,800 barrels, yet one or two scouts claim the output is 8,300 a day. The Mr. Jones' wonderful mechanical singing and is being closely watched by a number birds are just now the principal topic of inof producers. There is no little speculaterest in the big show. Efforts are being tion as to the correct status of the well, some claiming that it is just made to get the leader to let his feathered songsters perform to-night as well as on Monday night, and it is probable that he through the bowlder, while others who have kept close tab of the venture say it is anywhere from 6 to 15 feet in the

This is to be British night. All the Euglish, Irish and Scotch airs are to be per-formed. "Tullochgorum" will mingle with "The Roast Beef of Old England" and ance, the presumption was general among the producing fraternity here, that when the well would reach the sand it would be worked 'Garnyowen.

Now that the Exposition is drawing near a close, there is no little discussion as to the advisability of keeping it open longer, if not this year next. In order to see how the general public think on the question THE DISPATCH yesterday took a vote at the Exposition. There were only 6 negative votes cast against 141 affirmative ones. Probably the most reasonable answer was:
"Keep it open as long as folks come." One voter said: "Sixfy days would be reasonable."

Following is to-day's band programme: PART I.

1. Overture, "Carnaval Romain".......Berlioz 2. Reverie du Soir, (Sulte Algerienne, St. Saens 3. Popular Fantasia, "Gems of Wales" 4. Air Varie for Clarinet, "Suwanee River"

Men, women and children congregate about this exhibit at all hours and enjoy to the utmost the fine tones which emanate from the various instruments. It is one of the busiest spots in the Exposition building, and the corps of assistants have all their time filled in distributing cards and telling about the different planos and organs, and, above all, the church pipe organ, whose rich great sounds reached to the farthest points in the galleries, covering completely the din of voices and scraping of feet. The days are few now in which people may enjoy this exhibit, but there is no known law to preexhibit, but there is no known law to pre-vent their perpetuating their visits to the warerooms, where they can see and hear just the same class of instruments, only in greater numbers, and they can pass along the long lines and pick out just the make and style to suit them without being kept at arms length by pretty chairs and railings so necessary at an exhibit. At the warerooms can be seen a number of standard makes of both pianos and organs which are not represented in the display through lack of floor space, but they are in their way just as desirable as any shown at the stand.

AIDS TO RIVER NAVIGATION.

Arthur Kirk & Son. The splendid models of dams, locks, etc., shown by this firm in Mechanical Hall, have met a most cordial reception from the public. Anything practicable to assist pavigation in the uncertain waters of this section will be gladly welcomed, and Mr. Kirk, who is being heartly indorsed by en-gineers and rivermen generally seems to have found the exact systems for this purpose; to be able to raise a river steamer, or to lower it from one level to another, with having to stop the engine is a remarkable thing, and any who have undergone the tedious hours occupied in "passing through the locks" will appreciate this invention, and hope for its speedy adoption in Western Pittsburg Wire and Railing Works.

Taylor & Dean have a display of most useful articles in ornamental shapes on main floor, but the attention of excursionists from far and near should be called to their manufactures in apparently indestructible objects, such as fire escapes, iron stairways. iron shutters, crestings, elevator enclosures, and enclosures for cemetery lots, stable fit-tings, mangers, feed boxes, heavy from or wire window guards and doors, tower and lawn ornaments, and everything strong, ye handsome in the way of cast, wrought and ornamental railing and fencings. The places to see all of these solid iron goods will be found at 201-3-5 Market street.

Eicho Oil Company's No. 2, McElhern, is four bits in the sand, and showing for a fair producer. Sill, Odell & Co, have not got the tools out of their No. 2, Phillips, yet. Their No. 2, McElhern, should get the pay by Saturday. Charles Ford's Beacom lot venture is dry, but will be drilled to the Gordon for gas. The venture exciting the most interest in that section these days is the well being bored by the Bridge-water Gas Company in the ravine running east from Robb station, on the Montour Railway. It is down about 2.000 feet, and companies who have leased the Robb, Scarborough and two of the Phillips farms in the vicinity are anxiously awaiting results. There was a pretty good show of oil in the lower part of the Hundred-foot, but the salt water got the better of the oil. After the salt water was eased off the casing collapsed and nearly a month was spent fishing. The well was freed last week, but on Wednesday of this week the tools were stuck again and fishing is again the order of the day. Members of the company state that they intend to go through all the known strata in that neighborhood.

BUTLER-Last night the Butler Assembly of the Producers' Protective Association held their first meeting in Ruber's Hall. The meeting was held behind closed doors, and no one was admitted but members of the association. The hall was comfortably filled and no little interest was manifested in the proceedings. Representatives from Washington, Pittsburg and other points were present and participated in the deliberations. Mr. T. W. Phillips was president of the meeting, and addressed his fellow-suffering producers at length in an earnest and impressive manner. THE DISPATCH scout was unable to learn everything the veteran producer said, but was informed from the most reliable source that he embraced the opportunity presented and squared himself with the independent element of the producers. In the course of his remarks upon the situation he said that his name had been peddled about the country, and that reports that ascribed to him as being too closely allied and identified with the Standard to take an active part in the independent movement. Some had even gone so far as to question his honesty of purpose and gave out the intimation that he was a wolf in sheep's clothing, or in other words, a minion of the Standard. These charges he emphatically denied, and gave his hearers to understand he was heart and hand with them, and in full accord with any movement that would ameliorate their condition. It was the sentiment of the meeting that the assemblies of every section in the oil regions should meet, and whatever was done by the independents should be accomplished through the P. P. A. By some of the more enthusias.ic who were present it said that last night's meeting sounded the keynote of a general uprising of the P. P. A. all along the line, and that it is the beginning of one of the most gigantic independent movements in the history of the industry and the most formidable opposition the Standard has ever encountered. The assembly will meet again next Thursday night. The following preamble and resolutions were adopted: "WHEREAS, It has been alleged that Thomas W. Phillips, President of the Producers' Protective Association, and of our local assembly, having sold a pertion of his producing interests in Butler county to the Standard Oil Company, he would be unwilling, as well as unable, to act in connection with our association, either as President or for the welfare of the producers; and,

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctore bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame,"—Civil Service Gazette. Made samply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound ting, by Grocers, labeled thus: JAMES EPPS & CO., Hemmonathic Chemists, London, England.
