as a site for the location of their immense machine shops and round-house, which are now being pushed to completion and will give steady employment to several thousand skilled me-chanics and employes. Several other large manufacturing establishments have also been attracted to the same locality on account of the abundant and cheap supply of natural gas and other advantages. This emphasizing the fact that this is but the nucleus of what promises to be one of the most enterprising and wideawake manufacturing towns in Western Pennsylvania.

others attracted to this center will require homes adjacent to the railroad and shop, and in order to meet the ever increasing demand for such Mr. C. B. When you consider that the 19 acres recently purchased by the city for the main entrance to the park will be beautified in the highest style of the gardener's art, that the magnificent main building of the Carnegie Library, the Art Gallery and Academy of Sciences will be here, candidly, will not the abutting property be far more valuable than any other residence property in this city or Allegheny, property on the parks not excepted?

yet can be bought here for a very small fraction of the above prices, is it not wisdom to buy now? We have some of these lots on our books. We think they are a good buy either for use or speculation. It's our business to sell them, hence this advertisement.

improvers be light, as only amphibians can be comfortable just now. But there is one thing that would give some relief in case good roads cannot be JACOB SPOHN, No. : Carson street. secured in all sections, and that is the coustruction of lateral railways along the course of the principal streams falling into our rivers hereabouts. It is said that one is projected down Moon run from its source, and one in each valley would enable people to come to and from the city, and few farmers would then be more than two miles from a railway. Such a system would bring all the country roundabout to the doors of the city. The matter is of more interest to the farmers than to the city, but the latter will, $10 to a cent, be anable to see it, i. e., as a class. Within sight of the city are thousands of tons of hay which will cost more to get into

of tons of hay which will cost more to get into it than freight would thence be to England or France.
But were such roads built it would be neces But were such roads built it would be necessary to operate them at much less rates for freight and passengers than at present. The latter is not so important as the former, but it is vital nevertheless. Suppose a farmer along the line of the Montour Run Railway wants to ship to the city, it will cost him six-sevenths as much to ship firme or four miles on that read as it will on the Pittsburg and Lake Erie Railway, and he must pay on both. The milk producer's freight is doubled, and some farmers think the companies should practice reciprocity. In the matter of passenger rates think the companies should practice reciprocity. In the matter of passenger rates the situation is still worse. If you live three miles up the Montour Railway the commutation rate is over 4 cents a mile, while it is a traction less than a cent on the Pittsburg and Lake Erie. Thus on a commutation ticket you can ride to Montour Junction, ten miles, for $\forall_2$ cents, while to ride three miles on the Montour Railway costs 15 cents. On the Sawmill Run Railway fair rates are given by the company, and Superintendent Jones says it is found to be good policy.

A vast amount of development is possible by seams of lateral railways on streams where here is nograding nor heavy cuts to make, but cannot exist when passenger rates are at a gure that makes horse carriage the cheapest.
