ON STANLEY'S TRAIL.

Four Gentlemen Will Leave This City Monday to Traverse the Great Explorer's Route.

Pittsburg is to have a real, live Stanley. It is not surprising that there should be some people imbued with the idea that the great explorer could be imitated with little difficulty, but that his accounts of the long travels through deserts and the wilderness and the hardships and starvations to which his party was subjected should be doubted by the intelligent American public is more

The party will be composed of Michael Hawkins, of the Thirty-sixth ward, this city; Martin Conway, a roller in Youngstown, O.; George Jackson, a rott turner in Akron, O., and Thomas Collins, another mill worker, of Cleveland. The young men are all single and have accumulated several thousand dollars, which they propose to "blow in" either verifying or disproving some of Mr. Stanley's statements. They have been reading all that the latter has written, and to them some of his tales are big fish stories, which they imagine can be counteracted by proofs collected from the natives,

WILL FOLLOW STANLEY'S ROUTE. To secure these proofs they must go over identically the same ground Stanley went over, see the same people he saw and get from their own months statements concerning the various events treated upon by the

This is precisely what the party expects to accomplish. They are all inclined to disbelieve Stanley's side of the Major Barttelot affair and think they will have no difficulty establishing their position in that matter. They are not taking anyone with them to took after their personal wants, in case sickness or depression should set in, nor are they counting on making any extensive preparations for such difficulties as Stanley ountered. They expect to find the trait left by Stanley's expedition along the bewn pathway through the great forest, and instend of consuming many months in passing through they will cover the distance in a few weeks. They will capture a piemy queen somewhere along the way to rook for hem and will avoid all detentions afforded by encounters with boggy ground, elephant pits, caunibal dens and the few other little misfortunes which made it necessary for Stanley to bid farewell forever, one by one, stated.

to the long-tried members of his party. They will take no chances, however, on striking Victoria Nyanga in the dry season. and will probably lay in a good supply of old Monongahela with them.

SMALL, BUT DETERMINED.

In this and in many other respects they will take advantage of the many good pointers furnished by Stanley. Altogether, will no doubt be fraught with many interesting evelopments, and the public may look for much valuable and instructive information.
The Pittsburg gentleman, Mr. Hawkins, who will help to make up the party, was seen yester-day by a DISPATCH reporter. To the latter he "This may look like a large and an nawise undertaking, but the whole party are determined upon making the venture. believe that trip can be made. None of us may ever see Pittsburg again (and here the geatleman grew serious), and in fact we are all leaving with little hopes of ever returning but we feel that the good that may result from our expedition will fully make up for any sacrifices we may make make up for any sacrifices we may make. There is no reason why Pittsburg should not have men who can dare and endure as much as Stanley ever did, and here are four men as Stanley ever did, and here are four men who have set themselves upon the trip.

"We will sail Tuesday for Liverpool. Preparations for our going have been in progress for three weeks and we will have everything in good shape by the last of this week. We will probably make a tour of Europe before going south and we may see Italy before crossing into Africa."

"Are you all confident of being properly prepared for such a trap?" asked the reporter.
"Thoroughly so," was Mr. Hawkins' reply. "I den't know that any of us are very well educated, but we have read all Mr. Stapley has cated, but we have read an air. Stanley has written, and we believe he has been putting it on to a very large extent. I think we will be able to show to the American people that the trip can be made without so much fuss, with less inistortune, hardship or loss of life. What Stanley has done others can do, and we propose to demonstrate that Pittsburg can turn out needle as good as Stanley."

soring the reporter that he would keep the Disparch readers posted on the result of their investigations, Mr. Hawkins said goodby and started for Cleveland to meet the other members of the party, where final arrangements for the departure will be made to-day. The four gentlemen will come to Pritsburg Saturday, leaving Pritsburg on Monday evening at 7:15 on the fast line.

Mr. Langston is very bitter against Mabone. He says his State is cursed with what he calls a perpetuity of Mahoneism, a bossism so complete that nothing like it is known in the North. Virginia Republicans blame Quay for shelving the Federal election bill. Mr. Langston says the Democracy of the South regarded it as a backdown, and it helped mightily to defeat the Republican party, but he thinks things will right themselves by 1892. He favors a Federal law that will apply to the whole country, and will insure a fige ballot that will be fairly counted. cases against them.
Inspector McAleese was in the crowd, too, ust to brush off any flies that might attempt to light on the Department of Public Safety. He also had a further interest there, for when he quit talking to Alderman McKenna the magistrate decided to postpone the case for a week.

John M. Robb, the attorney for the defense, objected because he did not want the defendants to stay in jail so long. He suggested that if they must wait so long the bail gested that if they must wait so long the bail be fixed at about $1,000 for each man.

"Make it at least $5,000," said Inspector Me-Aleese over the magistrate's shoulder.

"You want to put the bail away out of reach," exclaimed the attorney, growing angry. But his anger gave away to despair when the Inspector's answer came.

Then the prisoners were called in from the alderman's back office where they had been resting from the publicaze. The crowd parted to let them pass. In the lead was a corpulent individual who were a neatly brushed black broadcloth suit, and the name of Clark M. Eggleston. He was a phllanthopic looking old gentleman who might either be a Sunday school superintendent or the president of a country bank. The whiskers which decorated his chin were snowy in their whiteness and served to add to the length and appearance of his well-rounded face. His head had apparently bid a last farewell to hair many years ago, but the cloud of 25 charges of conspiracy, aided by a tall silk hat, served to protect this shining orb from the wintry blasts.

When the amount of the bail was named, he exclaimed, "What! Three thousand dollars!" He did not shed any tears, but his eyes protruded so far beyond his forehead that there seemed to be danger of his shedding those useful members, themselves.

Behind Mr. Ergleston came Henry Kimberly. He did not have much of nature's head covering left either, but carried a bigger stock of nerve than his aged partner. Robert Snyder was there also, and wore the appearance of a man of few years but many sorrows. M. Jacober, the superintendent of the association, was not there, and the trouble is that his present whereabouts are unknown. No one appeared to give bond for the appearance of the defendants, and they were taken out to the patrol wagon. By this time the crowd had gathered outside, and as the trio mounted the wagon one woman cried out: "See the old sucker sweat!"

That was the start; then almost ecah member of the crowd hurled after the men a series of farewells, all of which lacked the ring of sympathy.

The trouble seems to have originated from Mr. Powderly's effort to draw the order into politics, and the discussion drew in M. H. Butter, of Harrisburg, who helped Powderly to hustle for Pattison for Governor, and A. M. Dewey, the ex-editor of the Journal, and James Campbell, of Pittsburg, both of whom worked for Delamater. It is said that a whole day's session was devoted to the question, and the revolt against Mr. Powderly was very open. Mr. Powderly's ideas in regard to the formation of a new political organization are also creating great dissatisfaction among the local Knights.

An ex-Master Workman of D. A. 3 said yesterday: "It will not be of any benefit to take the order into politics. The majority of the members are Democratic any way, and if the order goes into any party it will be the Democratic party. This will drive the Republicans out and the organization will lose influence."

"The pace that Pennsylvania will travel has been set by Pittsburg's member of the National Commission, Captain William McClellan," said Mr. Wales. "Captain McClellan made such a brilliant fight for General D. H. Hastings as Director-General that he naturally was awarded the distinction of making General Davis' nomination unanimous. Before any committee were announced President Palmer, of the National Commission, came to Captain Mc-Clellan and asked him upon what committees he desired to serve, as he had shown himself to be a very decent man in the Hastings-Davis fight."

ONE VICTORY FOR MODESTY. "Captain McClellan said that he wanted to be on just such committees as was the pleasure of the President. There had been such a terrific struggle for fat places that Senator Palmer was astonished by the Pittsburg man's modesty, and forthwith placed him on the three best committees: Manufactures, Classification and Tariffs and Transportation. The Committee of Manufactures is of keen importance to Pittsburg and Pennsylvania for the general expectation is that Pittsburg will make an exhibit which will justify her universal characterization as the greatest manufacturing center in the world. As Secretary of the Committee on Classification Captain McClellan has just finished and laid before the commission a first draft of the grouping of exhibits which seems to be universally commended for its clearness, acope and perspicuity."

It is unquestionably a wise move, and shows that General Davis has risen to the situation. His desire to avoid the cumbrous committee system is the essence of good sense when it is considered how limited the time at the disposal of the commission has become.

CRICAGO November 19 - There was or ganized in this city during the past few days one of the largest corporations in this line in the world. The charter was filed in Spring-field to-day, and the name of the new company will be the American Harvester Company, for the manufacture of harvesting machinery, with a capital stock of $35,000,000.

The directors of the new company will be Cyrus H. McCormick, William Deering, Hou. Walter A. Wood, Lowis Miller, Colonel A. L. Conger and General A. S. Bushnell.

American Progressive Photography. The efforts of photographers who have gained no individual distinction to climb into prominence over the shoulders of their sitters who have never left the head-rest since they were "taken" are as peculiar as they are jutile. It reminds the American public of the "Hatters to Her Majesty," and 'Butchers to His Serene Highness" seen in that in G. Aufrecht's "Elite" photograph gallery, 516 Market st., there were photographs produced last week. He has worked with Sarony, of New York; Tabor of San Francisco, the two greatest authorities on artistic photography in the country, and by Mr. Aufrecht's new glace process he can produce a finer likeness with a better finish than any operator in the country and at a very much smaller cost. As far as being called upon to act as an expert artist for notable people is concerned he need only mention that he has made likenesses which are still held as souvenirs of DeWitt Talmage in Brooklyn; Terrence V. Powderly, in Scranton and Dom Pedro, the former Emperor of Brazil, in San Francisco. To-day pupils of Mr. Aufrecht are conducting prosperous galleries in Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Boston and the finer work required is not excelled in New York, London, Paris o

Vienna. The most difficult department of photog raphy, that of babies, is fully exemplified in his groups, where no individual expression is lost, but all blended into a harmonious whole, pleasing alike to parents and friends No patron of a photograph gallery would wish to see himself or his children repro-duced in the print as the negative leaves the camera. It is the artistic work in shading and retouching which tells in a likeness, which, taken by machinery and chemicals is made perfect by a true touch and artistic judgment found at G. Autrecht's, 516 Mar ket street. Telephone 1456.

Officer Burke arrested Jack Gilson yesterday in Joseph Stoltzer's saloon for one of the boldest attempts at larceny that has been recorded in local police circles for some out a hard fight, in which he was knocked down, and when the doors of the bastile finally closed upon him, one of the most notorious members of the "Dirty Dozen" gang that ever looked through prison bars

A week ago vesterday Gilson went to Peter Schnefer, of No. 1334 Penn avenue, and told him that he had a pile of scrap iron to sell. Schaefer went with him to see the same, which was a lot of castings used by the city in certain street gutters and piled at the corner of Seventeenth and Liberty go before an Alderman and make an affidavit to this effect.

Accordingly they adjourned to Squire Donovan's office, in the Ninth ward, and cents, the money to be paid as soon as the iron had been weighed on the city scales at Tenth street.

Schaefer then secured his horse and borrowed a wagon of M. Sherman, a rag dealer at No. 77 Seventh avenue, and in company with the latter started after the purchase.

They had succeeded in getting on a half wagon load of the iron when Health Officer Price came along, and Sherman asked him if he knew of a city employe named Gilson. Price remarked that he did not, and after hearing the story of the deal, warned the men to be careful, as he was certain the man was an impostor, and that the castings belonged to the city. With this warning the men at once uahitched the horse, leaving the wagon there, where it remains at the present time.

When Inspector McAleese was notified of the affair he at once set sail for Gilson. He was not located until Toesday night, when Officer Ross Rorison arrested him near Sixteenth street. A tussle ensued in which the officer got the foot and Gilson escaped, though not until he had dodged four bullets from a 38-caliber revolver. The castings which Gilson had offered for sale were of charcoal iron, one of the most valuable kinds.

The prisoner is a most notorious character. During the last lo years he has put in a number of terms in the workhouse and has also been in the penitentiary. The officers say that he has spont at least 1b years of his life in this way. His brother Larry is now serving a six-year sentence in the workhouse. He had a sister who served a long time in this same institution, and Larry's wife devoted three years to the same cause. Members of the tribe have also been arrested for keeping speak-easies.

A story was started some time ago that Sena tor Quay proposed to give up his home in Beaver and move to Pittsbur, and, though it was said that he proposed to take up his resi-dence there. C. L. Reno, the assignee of the firm of Fleming Bros, who failed a short time ago, says that he has no knowledge of Senator Quay's intention to remove to Pittsburg. large crowd of people and escorted up Third avenue to Gusky's, and from there to Fifth large crowd of people and escorted up Third avenue to Gusky's and from there to Fifth avenue to the market house. All along the line of march the baby was greatly adn-ired, particularly as it was known that it had come to take bed and board with Pittsburgers as a steady thing. The little stranger showed the wear and tear of the long ocean voyage and the final journey on the cars. Its hide hung loosely on its anatomy, but it had the calm and patient look of its kind upon its face and part way down the trunk. At the market house it was received with open arms by Superintendent McKnight and Hokey, and the former was seen to brush away a tear as he observed with what heroic fortitude his future pet had braved the hardships of the journey. His coat sleeve came into play once more as he remarked to Hokey that it must have been mighty tough to tear the little creature away from its parents and home surroundings of tigers and such. But he soon rallied, and a royal feed was given the new arrival.

Gusky, as the baby will be known in the future, arrived in New York on Saturday last via the steamer Delcorno. It was met in New York by Mr. Levi De Wolf and a party of Pittsburgers and piloted to this city in style. Mr. De Wolf is very producer, and says that if he was not already in business he thinks he could make quite a hit in cultivating the finer qualities and tastes of these animals, that, taking their chances of moral and mental advancement and early education into consideration, rank among the most intelligent of the brute creation.

AN EXPLODED STORY.

Big Purchase of Property That Has Not Materialized. There have been rumors for some time to the effect that the ground on which St. Peter's P. E. Church, the McTighe block, and in short all E. Church, the McTighe block, and in short all the space between Grant street, Fifth avenue, Cherry alley and Diamond street, was to be purchased and a great building erected thereon, Nearly all the parties in interest, however, deny knowledge of any such purchase. The story as first told also included the vaca-tion of Scrip alley, the projectors proposing to add its width to Cherry alley and make it a street.

The ladies of St. Andrew's Church, Ninth street, will serve their annual lunch in the society rooms on the first floor of the church to-day (Thursday) and to-morrow.
