A DUEL IN PITTSBURG

One of the Probabilities of the Future, if the Interest in Fencing Continnes to Increase.

NUMEROUS GOOD SWORDSMEN HERE

And All That is Needed is a Dispute to Cause a Blood-Red Spot to Appear in Schenley Park. EAST ENDERS TAKE PART IN THE SPORT

Great Benefits to be Durived From the Use of the Foils

That interesting farcical comedy, "A French Duel," has gained a wonderful popularity in Pittsburg, and especially in the East End, where the clash of the sword is becoming one of the favorite pastimes.

Fencing, as one of the arts essential to the refined athlete's repertoire, is gaining a refined athlete's repertoire, is gaining a great foothold with aristocratic gymnasts, notwithstanding the fact that it is one of Finding that I cannot give the necessary the most difficult things to attain. For this reason, where one American can handle the cided to dispose of my Smithfield street foils a dozen Frenchmen or Germans are to be found who are his equals and many who are his peers in swordsmanship. The Turners of the city make jewelry establishments. The consolidation fencing one of the features of their of the two stocks would be too large for one athletic training, and it is rapidly growing in favor with the American athletic clubs. The East End Gymnastic Club is now making fencing one of the features of their athletic rooms, and although it has been on the programme but a short time several of the members are growing quite proficient in the art. Prof. Kirchner spent his vacation in Philadelphia the past summer in training up on fencing. He had been quite good with the foils before, but had laid them away and he, as well as the foils, had grown rusty from disuse.

A VERY PATIGUING SPORT. The professor is a strongly built man, bu

he had to give in when he had had three days of the hard work with his fencing master. It is certainly one of the most fatiguing of sports, and for this reason it is very difficult to keep the young men at work.

A dozen young men started in to learn fencing under the tutorship of Prof. Kirchper, at the East End Club, and, as all were ambitious, nothing short of an hour would do for the first night's work. The boys all felt excellent after the exercise was over, and went home and to bed feeling that there was nothing like an hour's fencing to brace a man up. But the next morning! A dozen young men in the East End were lying in bed, all tied up in little knots and wondering why on earth they were living. At last they managed to get out of bed, take a bath and have a good rub down and all felt better. But yet each imagined he had been in a railroad accident, cut to pieces and then put together again with only a few mistakes, such as getting the legs and arms slightly mixed.

One week later the class in fencing was called, and numerous vacant places and idle foils were to be found in the room. The professor felt rather discouraged to see only four or five out of a dozen. Those who did survive were not anxious for an hour's work, but showed a determination to learn all the mysteries of the art.

DOING A LITTLE DUELING. They took their medicine with the stolid-ity of young Germans, who consider fencing 3 hs. new evaporated raspberries for... 1 00 a prime necessity of life. Their second at-tack didn't prove quite so bad, and after awhile they began to look forward to the fencing night with pleasure, and even sometimes would do a little "dueling" between times. Thus it has picked up, and what at first looked like an inglorious failure is beginning to bear the aspect of success. The class has turned out several good men with the foils, and as they continue to rapidly improve they will doubtless soon become experts, and then blood will surely flow down the gulleys of Schenley Park or some other sequestered spot, where a man's wounded honor can be satisfied. Among those who have proved to be the material of which good swordsmen are made are H, C. Fry and Will Myer, and their exhibitions are not only pretty to look at, but are really scientific, and show great judgment and nerve. George Lang, the club's corresponding secretary, can also show some excellent work. He is greatly interested and will not allow the sport to full behind the procession of arts acquired in the rooms of the club.

Prof. Shearer, of the Forbes street Turn-ers, is a remarkably fine swordsman, perhaps the best in the city. He is at least the finest fencer among those who make ath-letic sports a pastime. There is a young newspaper man in the city the walls of whose room could be plastered with certificates received in the Hungarian army as one of the leading swordsmen. He is quite small, but his agility, nerve and quick eye won him many "honorable mentions" in the sword contests during the time he was in service. He is very proud of these memen-toes, though he now has no use for the word, the sharpest cutting he now does being with the fine point of a pencil. PERSEVERANCE A NECESSITY.

Fencing as an exercise hardly receives the proper amount of attention. The fact is that it requires an amount of perseverance The fact is that the average American is unwilling to bestow upon it. The Germans and French as well as our Italian consins across the water, in their slow, go-shead way, manage acquire a skill with the foils that to surpass costs the Americans too much time. A few years age a French and an Italian professor gave a number of exhibitions in New York and created quite an interest in the sport, but for some reasons the Young Americans neem to prefer boxing to fencing.

There are three specific styles of fencing, the German, French and Italian, and then comes the American, which is a symplifica-tion of the French style. About the only place in America where the art really flourishes is at West Point, where soldiers are made to order and where the young man don't have time to think of the fatigue. If he rebels a knapsack filled with bricks and an extra amount of guard duty makes him feel that fencing is a vacation and pionic to which Thanksgiving and Christmas has no comparison. Thus he becomes an expert before he knows it, and is then ready to go to his regiment at some army post and cope with the smiles of the young ladies in the

There are no professional fencing masters in Pittsburg, and only the turn verins, and amateur athletic clubs give opportunities to learn the art. The number of these are on the increase in the city, and thus the opportunities for acquiring a knowledge of the art of fencing increase. This sport is one of the most beneficial for the development of the body. It brings into play every muscle in one's physical being, and also greatly'develops the mind. It quickens the eye, strengthens the nerves and causes a surprising amount of agility to be acquired. It especially exercises the call, thigh, arms, shoulder and entire right side, but at the same time brings into play all the muscles, nerve and mental force a man can muster The system used in Pittsburg is the same as that taught at West Point. If the young men were to try one of old country systems, he would suddenly conclude that the modification is difficult enough for him, though it would prove very easy for the Frenchman

MARRIAGE LICENSE CROP GOOD.

The Rate Increasing and the Holiday Out "How is the marriage license crop this fall?" asked a DISPATCH reporter of Register Sam Connor yesterday afternoon.

"Never was better," came the reply. "Piling in on us by the score, and the outlook is that the holiday run will be im-mense. But that's what we are there for. If two hearts have a longing to beat as one, and they have the necessary soul embellishment of thought, we can always be found doing business at the same old stand." "What has been the increase in licenses issued since the new law went into effect, five years ago?"

"Well, in round numbers it will amount to 40 per cent. The yearly incresse now is 10 per cent, and next year it will likely be 15 per cent."

"What becomes of all the licenses issued to parties that indulge in so-termed high-toned weddings?" "There is nothing in the law that compels us to publish licenses, and, in consequence, we withhold the publication of licenses by request. It makes no difference whether the parties are 'high rollers' or 'low rollers,' the rule is the same. It used to be different, but marriage is a sacred institu-tion, and the wishes of the contracting parties must be respected."

Closing Out Auction Sale store and atterward give my entire atten-tion to the store at 36 Fifth avenue. Both establishments have large and complete stocks of goods usually carried in first-class store, in consequence I have decided to close out my stock at 533 Smithfield street, at auction, and have secured the services of Colonel J. M. Rutherford, of Philadelphia, as salesman. My stock is composed of over $75,000 worth of strictly first-class watches, diamonds, jewelry, silverware, clocks, bronzes, etc. This stock must be closed out as quickly as possible. All goods are guaranteed. I am not retiring from business. After disposing of my Smithfield street store, I will be located at 36 Fifth avenue. Sales begin Monday, November 24, at 10 A. M., 2:30 and 7:30 P. M., and will continue daily until entire stock and fixtures are disposed of, at M. G. Cohen's, Diamond Ex-pert and Jeweler, 533 Smithfield street.

WINTER OPENING.

True Economy Dictates that Buyers Go to Lynch's, 438 and 440 Market Street. Winter has come and with it merchants are displaying their winter lines of goods, but it is safe to say that a more complete stock than that of H. J. Lynch's, 438 and 440 Market st., cannot be found. That this is recognized by buyers is attested by the rapidly increasing patronage of this house. The stock comprises all the latest novelties in French and American dressgoods, Scotch plaids, serges, cashmeres and henriettas in all the leading shades. The underwear department is especially noted for its complete stock and low prices. It comprises cashes he is Scotch and partment and comprises cashes he is Scotch and property and present and comprises cashes and present and comprises cashes and comprises camel's hair, Scotch wool, merino and scarlet underwear of every grade. mighty continent, Atlantis. One lies buried beneath the foam-specked waters of the turbulent Atlantic Ocean, while the other has sunk beneath the dark waves of oblivion. Here and there a point of the lost continent rises above the ocean, and there still lingers with us a few relics of the golden age of gnomes, giants and fairies.

The big bell in the City Hall tower had called the turn at midnight, when an expedition of mortals stormed that portion of fairyland located in a Fifth avenue museum. As the party stole cautiously upstairs, crushing a stray peanut shuck under foot and inhaling the fragrant scent of popcorn, strains of music were heard. The voices were not those of gross humans, and their song was the same as that sung by the elves to Titania, the Queen of Fairyland, and overheard by Shakespeare while strolling through an English meadow at midnight when the moon was full:

Come not near our fairy queen. Philomel with melody Sing in our sweet fullaby. Lulla, lulla, lullaby, lulla, lulla, lullaby. Never harm, Nor spell nor charm, Come our lovely lady nigh,

So, good night, with lullaby, THE FAIRY QUEEN AT REST. The chorus having gotten out of the way as a discreet chorus should do when the principals have something to say, the fairy queen's bower was promptly invaded. It was a small apartment partitioned off from the curio hall, and without any leafy canopy through which the night winds might softly sigh. Occupying nearly the whole of the interior was a couch wrought by Vulcan out of the very stoutest of tough steel springs. This was shored up at the corners by chairs, and the head was braced by a heavy, iron-bound trunk. Here recline the Fairy Queen, a blithesome being who can give a Fairbanks scale a shock at 718 In one corner of the bower nestled in a bed which would give an ordinary 4-year-old a cramped sensation, was a handsome and dignified little lady who travels under the name of the Princess Nors. Her bright eyes sparkled as she viewed the visitors although a shade of dread passed over her face as the Fairy Queen turned on her couch, while the springs squeaked ominousy. Nothing gave way, however, and confidence was restored.

In another little room, also petitioned off from the curio hall, rested Colonel Picket

Nelson, who never enters a dwelling with out first taking off his hat and bowing. This abit is not the result of a study of Chester field's advice to his son, who had an am-bition to excel as a dude, but from fear that he might dash out his brains against the

THE PENALTY OF GREATNESS. There is always a penalty attached to greatness, and the Colonel's trouble is to ind a bed which will allow him the luxury of stretching. He has not found it yet. When the Colonel reposes he folds himself up like a carpenter's two-foot rule, and then has to lie cornerwise. When he becomes cramped he stretches one length of himself at a time, and it takes him quite a while to get all the kinks out of his frame. In the same room, but in another bed, reclines General Turner Wood. The latter gentleman has plenty of room. His only trouble is to find himself when he wants to arise in the morning. Occasionally it is neces sary to get out a search warrant to discover his lurking-place.

Tall and short, large and small, they sleep soundly, soothed by the singing of the elves, who have been forced by the advance of education to emigrate from their favorite haunts, and now attach themselves to these beings for whom they feel an affinity. The sound which disturbs their slumbers is the hoarse yelping of the lion-killing ape, who strongly objects to being incarcerated in a drygoods box. His remarks arouse the cockatoos, and they have something to say in a discordant voice, which wakes up a cageful of monkeys. They join in the condogs. For a tew minutes the building is

The Fairy Queen, who is known at home as Mrs. Bowen, and to audiences as "Big Hattie," takes as much delight in looking at people as the latter do in commenting on her appearance. She is a jovial woman, with a keen sense of humor tempered by a strong religious feeling.
"How do I like being a freak? Well, do you know, I enjoy it," said Mrs. Bowen last night. "People come here in thousands to see me, but they don't get half as much pleasure as I do in looking at them. Some-times I am sorry when the show closes, because I have not had time to study the audience as thoroughly as I desire. I thought before I went out on my first street parade that it would be dreadful, but really, I enjoyed it. The band went ahead and stirred up the excitement, and by the time I came along there were thousands of people waiting to see me. The sidewalks would be crowded, and the windows filled with faces, I would watch the varying expressions on the faces, and you have no idea how interesting and laughable it was to me.

"I enjoy traveling around the country. "I enjoy traveling around the country. I like to see different places and different people. When I married him I weighed five pounds more than the other five members of my family. I have lots of friends in New Bedford. I used to sit up with sick people, but it was considerable trouble for me to make visits, as I could not walk and it took "My greatest trouble is that I cannot to church. While I am a Methodist I don't care whether I go to a Salvation Army or an Episcopal church, just so long as they preach the gospel of Christ. THE WILLOUGHBY,) SARATOGA, August 25, 1890. The Chickering piano rightfully stands alone, for on this earth it is not only unsurpassed but unequaled. I can give logical and esthetic proofs of my assertion. When one asks: Why do these unique manufacturers attain perfection? the answer is: Because they have endeavored to secure (as no others have done) and have succeeded in securing the nearest possible approach to the tone of nature, to what is known as the human voice; the Chickering piano sings like a lovely voice. First Production in Pittsburg of New Comic Opera

The Wm. J. Gilmore Organiz sent the Work.

Story of the Opera, List of Principals, &c.

A week from to-morrow evening there will be presented at the Bijou Theater a comic opera which, from all accounts, has proved to be the hit of the present season in New York, where, at Palmer's Theater, the Will-iam J. Gilmore Opera Company introduced itself as one of the foremost companies ever organized for the presentation of comic opera, and in presenting "The Sea King," the latest opera comique, Mr. Gilmore has made a reputation that has been unequaled not alone in the opera itself, but more espe-cially so in the magnificent manner in which he has placed it before the public, and surrounded it with one of the strongest casts ever in opera comique. Since its orig-inal production, the opera has been given in the principal cities only, and the engage-ment in Pittsburg, which will begin Monday evening next, will be the only appearance of this company this season.

The story of the opera, the scenes of which are laid in Spain, is as follows:

Don Bamboula, who is the ruler of an obscure province, comes with his retinue for the purpose of hunting, and also with the idea that he may find, at a distance from the court, a village girl willing to marry

A male heir is necessary to preserve the title to his Dukedom, and Don Bamboula is therefore most anxious to marry, but he is so painfully ill-featured that none of the court ladies will listen to his suit, and his estates are in a fair way to go to his niece, Dolores, who is next in succession. Dolores, who is next in succession.

On this part of the coast there is a legend regarding a fabulous personage known as the Sea King, who is supposed to visit the coast once a year for the purpose of carrying off one of the village girls.

The Sea King is, in reality, Mateo De Villereal, the rightful heir to the Dukedom which Don Bamboula has usurped. The latter has been the course of the heightful latter has been the cause of the banishment and death of Mateo's father, and Mateo himself maintains his existence by smug-gling, and is vested by the peasantry with a unernatural characte Mateo and his band visit the coast simultaneously with Don Bamboula and his courtiers, and Dolores and the smuggler chieftain fall in love with each other.

Among the supernatural characteristics imputed by the peasantry to the Sea King is the power to render handsome all with Don Bamboula is in reality practicing duplicity, for he means Dolores to wed Pedrillo, a young nobleman of wealth, for his own pecuniary benefit. Learning of this contemplated treachery, Mateo and his crew carry off Dolores, Don Bamboula and other members of the court to his stronghold, the entrance of the Sea King's ship and the embarkation constituting the striking finale The scene of Act II is the grotto of the Sea King, known as the Pearl Palace—a most picturesque and effective setting.

It is Mateo's intention to hold Don Bamboula prisoner until he is brought to terms, when the Sea King will wed Dolores and recover his datadam.

when the Sea King will wed Dolores and recover his dukedom.

Don Bamboula, not altogether confident of Mateo's ability to improve his looks, engages himself to Donna Olima, an aged court lady who has for years been a captive of the smugglers, in order that he may be sure of a wife should he fail to win Rosita.
The anxious old bachelor, resolved to wed, despite all obstacles, is lavish to prodigality with his affections, and, together with two of his retinue, lays siege to the smugglers' wives, thinking them captives of the Sea wives, thinking them captives of the Sea King's followers. Their wooing is over-heard by the smugglers, who swear venge-ance, and but for Mateo's intervention it would bave gone hard with them.

would have gone hard with them.

Mateo again asks for Dolores' hand, revealing his identity when Don Bamboula declares he cannot give his niece to one who is not of noble birth. Fearful of consequences, Don Bamboula again effects to consent, but secretly dispatches Miguel, his favorite page, by a secret path to the nearest town for the military. At an opportune moment the soldiers appear, rescue Don Bamboula and his companions and carry Mateo away with them a prisoner.

Act III. takes place in Don Bamboula's palace, where preparations for the marriage of Dolores and Pedrillo are rapidly being carried out. Mateo is retained a prisoner in the dungeons of the palace, awaiting his trial for treason.

Miguel, however, proves a true and valuable friend to Dolores and her persecuted lover; brings them together, and lays plans not only to thwart the intended marriage of Dolores and Pedrillo, but that of Don Bambanla and Pedrillo.

Dolores and Pedrillo, but that of Don Bamboula and Rosita as well.

Rosita has finally consented to wed Don Bamboula, notwithstanding he has not improved in personal appearance, and in spate of the fact that she has been carrying on a serious flirtation with Pedrillo, who is half inclined to mate with the vivacious village maiden in preference to the stately Dolores, for whom he has but little affection.

eccentric whims, and subtly abetted by Miguel, has concluded to have the double marriage ceremony celebrated in carnival marriage ceremony celebrated in carnival fashion, with everyone en masque. This affords the desired opportunity for Miguel, who by ingenious planning and plotting unnecessary to detail, juggles with the propective brides and bridegrooms most effectually, so that upon unmasking, after the ceremony, Mateo is found to have wedded the lovely Dolores, while Miguel, having impersonated Don Bamboula's bride, has saved Rosita for Pedrillo.

impersonated Don Bamboula's bride, has saved Rosita for Pedrillo.

For Don Bamboula, disaster follows disaster, and he is forced to see even his aged flame, Donna Oilma, led away by Pedro, one of his followers; whereupon he gives up the struggle for a wife.

However, with the best grace possible under the circumstances, he succumbs to the inevitable, netwowledges Matro as his inevitable; acknowledges Mateo as his nephew-in-law, as well as his true nephew and legitimate heir to the Dukedow. Mateo not to be outdone in magnanimity, permits Don Bamboula to continue his rule over the Province on the condition that he never again tries to get a wife, and, with the finale, sails away with his bride in the ship of the Sea King. The scenery for the three acts was painted from actual sketches made in Spain, and represents the brushes of Homer Emenis and Maedder & Schneffer. The costumes, of which there are 42 plates, are from original designs, and made by the Eaves Costume Company. Of the company, which comprises 70 people, the best known are Mark Smith, R. E. Graham, Charles B. Church, Frank A. Howard, Ada Glasca, Katie Gilbert, Augusta Roche and Mamie Cerbi. The chorus numbers nearly 40, and the orchestra will be under the direction of Charles Bergman. The sale of seats will open Thursday morning next.

Both See What They Want

There may be people who do not know what they want, but we have never met any. Why? Because we know that tastes vary, and for every different taste we have a different variety, either of material or of cut. We cannot only consult your tastes, however fastidious they may be, but we can come within your means, however moderate they are. We have just concluded to mark down our entire stock of Men's, Youths' and Boys' Clothing, which will enable every Man, Youth and Boy to wear a handsome Suit at a very low price. It is not only the first and foremost concern of the kind in Western Pennsylvania, but it hasn't even a fair second. It leaves its followers 2way behind in the race for popularity and patronage. This fact can be attributed to one thing only, viz.: SUPPLYING THE PEOPLE WITH BETTER GOODS AND AT LOWER PRICES THAN THEY CAN POSSIBLY OBTAIN ELSEWHERE. This, and this only, is the key of Keech's wonderful success.
