BALFOUR STILL CONTINUES HIS PROMISES

IBY CARLS TO THE DISPATCE. LONDON, November 22 .- [Copyrighted.] -Mr. Parnell is just now the object of what is probably the most venomous and unscrupulous attack ever directed against a public man in this country. The proceedure and methods of his assailants have practically no parallel in British history, for even the despicable conspiracy of which Pigott was the central figure just now takes secand place in the shameful series of plots to ruin the Irish leader and the cause of home Tule.

Home Rule Cause Endangered.

The dissentient Liberals, whose return to the home-rule fold, as proved by nearly every bye election, has been the chief cause of an almost unbroken series of electoral triumphs, would find fresh cause or excuse for renewed apostacy. They would be joined by a small army of ultra-moral malcontents, and the slow, dreary work of conversion would have to be recommenced. It is true that the blow to home rule would not Making Promises of Relief.

One might have been excused for thinking that the vocabulary of vituperation was almost exhausted in the prolonged and furious babel which followed the publication in the Times of the forged letter; but the Tory lexicon proves to be fuller and fouler than one could have supposed to be possible. "These so-called leaders of the Irish forced him to show no mercy. Fortunately, all the Irish landlords are not like Olphert people are a set of as despicable miscreants and his aiders and abettors. P., the friend of Salisbury and the trusted chief of the landlord Orange party in Ireland. "If the Irish race," howls the Methodist Times, the organ of smug mugwump dissent, "deliberately select as their recognized representative an adulterer of Parnell's type, they are as incapable of self-government as their bitterest enemies have asserted. So obscene a race as, in those circumstances, they would prove themselves to be, would obviously be unfit for anything

BACILLI CAUSE IT. No Doubt That Koch Has the Correct Theory of Consumption.

OPINION OF A BACTERIOLOGIST.

Susceptibility to the Microscopic Organisms is Hereditary.

THE TENNESSEE SANITARIUM PROJECT

TEPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCE. NEW YORK, November 22 .- As the leading bacteriologist of America, author of "The Story of the Bacteria," "Dust and Disease," etc., and Director of the Physiological and Pathological Laboratory of the Alumnm Association of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, Dr. T. Mitchell Prudden was naturally expected to have formed important conclusions as to the value of Prof. Koch's already world renowned discovery of the lymph from which so much is hoped for and by consumptives.

Dr. Prudden, who gives himself up to laboratory work to the exclusion of practice, was found in the magnificent rooms of the Vanderbilt College, on West Fiity-ninth street. His views are these:

"This discovery has been announced under very peculiar circumstances. Last summer, in the course of an address before the International Medical Congress, which was largely a retrospective summary of what had been accomplished in bacteriology in the past few years, Dr. Koch mentioned that he had been experimenting with various chemical substances to see it he could not find something which would enable physicians to more successfully treat tuberculous diseases. Upon what subjects his experi-ments had finally been fixed he did not say.

STATEMENT FORCED FROM HIM.

"Now a very curious thing happened. So strong was the confidence of the medical profession at large in the scientific acumen and the personal integrity of the man who had discovered the cause of consumption and who had solved the riddle of the hidden cause of Asiatic cholera, that they were prepared to accept as practically final any utterance of Dr. Koch on subjects in his chosen field. The deplorable irequency of tuberculosis and its universality in all parts of the world had fanned the interest in the subject to a fever heat and at last so great had been the popular clamor to know what results Dr. Koch had reached since his summer address that he was practically forced, a few days ago, to make a statement as to his work and its results.

as to his work and its results. "His experiments were not yet complete. so his statement could be but a partial one, but such things as he was ready to say he said. He said them, too, with such clear-ness and precision and such practical detail that any educated, practicing physician would be competent to apply the remedy as soon as he could get it. Dr. Koch is not yet through as he are with his averiment and through, as he says, with his experiments on the lymph itself and its mode of preparation, and it is characteristic of the caution and at-tention to detail of the man that he is unwilling to make any premature announce ment on that part of his work.

THE CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

of preparation, we must wait until the ex-periments are done, and Dr. Koch would cer-tainly not be justified in yielding to the popular desire to know its nature until he is convinced that he can make it known with safety. Now, the different kinds of thereula-is are all observationed by the same heat the sis are all characterized by the same bacillus, and as to the mooted question whether or not the tubercular bacillus is the cause of consumption or any tuberculous malady, or only a product of the disease processes, that ease. There is no foundation for it. The breath never carries any germs whatever. "In plain words, which the non-profes-sional public may readily understand, Dr. Koch's present discovery is essentially this: He has obtained, or has discovered, a sub-stance its neuron as not unknown to us stance, its nature as yet unknown to us, which when introduced into the body in certain quantities and with certain precau tions, is capable of so affecting the tubercle tissue in the body that it apparently die off; thus is effected the commencement of a

GIVES NATURE & CHANCE.

GIVES NATURE A CHANCE. "The Koch lymph, or whatever it be, does not kill the bacilli, but destroys the tissue which the bacilli have formed. The Koch remedy is not, therefore, even claimed in most cases to so change the tubercle tissue that the recuperative powers of the body itself can have play, or in certain cases to so change this tissue that the surgeon may assist nature. Dr. Koch specifically urges that all those means which have been here-to/ore found most efficient in treating tuber-culosis. viz.: good food. good air, suitable culosis, viz.: good food, good air, suitable climate and regimen will still be necessary in most cases, at least to complete the cure, when possible, which the Koch remedy has initiated "He does not claim that all cases of consumption will be cured or even benefited by his remedy. Apparently the most definite observations which have been made by Dr. Koch and his clinical conferes on the effects Koch and his clinical confreres on the effects of this remedy have been made on those forms of tuberculosis which can be more or less directly observed, such as lupus, tuber-culosis of the joints, etc. How far these ob-servations can be applied to tuberculosis of the lungs, we cannot personally judge until we can have more details than his paper gives or can ourselves apply and study the ef-fects of the new remedy.

fects of the new remedy. WHAT LYMPH 18.

"Nobody has the slightest idea of what the new remedy is. It has been spoken of in the public prints as lymph. Lymph primarily is one of the body fluids which bathes the tissues and nourishes them. The material used in vaccination is called lymph, and it is in fact a little of the dried body fluid which serves to protect against smallpox.

"For this reason any substance used to noculate with in the treatment of a disease might properly be called lymph. But whether the substance which Dr. Koch uses contains any of the body fluids or is a sim-ple chemical substance is not known."

CONDEMENONDENCE OF THE DISPATCH.1

PARA, BRAZIL, November 4 .- As previously indicated in this correspondence, the trade and transportation, as well as every other business in the Amazon Valley, is dependent on the indigenous produce of its rich soil, i. e., rubber. It has been shown that this crude article of commerce is, perhaps, next to the coin or bullion which came from the early Californians, the most valuable cargo affoat.

The United States absorbs two-thirds of this export. The British ship Ambrose, carrying this mail, takes out an enormous cargo, probably valued at $1,000,000, the handling of which is probably confined to half a dozen American firms. The English and Germans who have been long established here, however, import more than two-thirds of everything that is consumed by the laborers connected with the business. In a word, the balance of trade is against us, almost two to one.

NOT DEVELOPING TRADE.

The large amount of American capital and enterprise ably represented by a few of our countrymen is here to buy rubber for cash only, and therefore may not be depended upon to develop American trade in this section. It has been the general experience in the business of mining for ores, oil and gas that these middlemen who did the outside or general business of those countries were the fellows that in the end reaped greater benefits than the miner or operator.

This is not only the hottest and unhealthiest, but also the most expensive, place in Kilmninham," raves the Sheffield Telegraph, the mouthpiece of two members of Salisbury's Government, "fastened its torturing fangs upon the very hand that had uneaged him and left its slimy trail upon the domestic Eden into which he had crept: this living scandal, this convicted fraud, this being whose moral leprosy taints the sir, this thing has been swimming in a sea of falsehood."

It is not to be wondered at that the generous Irish people, nmazed, horrified, disgusted at this shamefully impudent attack upon the leader whom they have trusted so long and to whom they are under so many obligations, should fling prudence to the winds and passionately declare that Parnell shall not relinquish the helm which he has gripped so resolutely, held so tenaciously and manipulated so skillfully during the long years of the stormiest political weather.

But truth to tell, this blind love for the leader is not calculated to help the cause. No man skilled in British political meteorology can fail to see signs of a coming storm. The non-conformist, middle and lower-middle classes, whose defection has before now temporarily reduced the great Liberal party to impotence, have been deeply stirred in their moral depths by the result of the O'Shea-Parnell divorce case.

No Excuse With Them

The people of whom those classes are made up will hear of no excuse or palliation where a breach of the moral code has been committed, and above all, admitted. Parnell might have gone on the witness stand, denied his sin, and all Ireland and not a few Englishmen would have taken his word, had 50 witnesses sworn against him. But here we have the rare spectacle of a self-confessed sinner, and there is heard endly the general cry of "stone him?" The palpably litical character of the outcry against Parnell counts for nothing now, and there is much reason to fear will have little if any weight at the polls. "The chapel bell" is ringing all over the land, and in the dealening aggregate of sound the voices of the advocates of Christian charity are lost. Regarded from the point of view of political expediency, Parnell's duty is to withdraw temporarily from the leadership of the Irish Parliamentary party. The members of that party, and the Irish people generally, have emphatically declared against such a course, and few people know or ever will know how keenly that generous forgiveness has touched the heart of the outwardly impassive statesman to whom it has been ertended.

Practical Indorsement of Parnell

It amounts, practically, to a renewal of been suggested, by an appeal by Parnell to the electors of Cork and his re-election, the indorsement would be complete enough to satisfy Gladstone and most of the Liberal politicians. Even as things stand, the Liberal leaders, if required, will offer no objection to working with him in the future with as much energy, although perhaps with less cordiality, than in the past.

As regards the House of Commons, there would be little difficulty, and if Ireland plone had to be consulted, there would be practically none. But the political situation has vasily changed since the days when the Irish party in the British House of Commons was a guerilla force and used the weapons of irregular warfare, thanks to Gladstone and Parnell, friends.

ROYAL MATCH-MAKING.

Ramored Alliance Between the Prince of Wales and Comte de Paris Families INT CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, November 22 .- A curious ru mor comes from Rome that the recent visit of Princess Heleue with General and Mme. de Charette to the Vatican was connected with a project for the marriage of this charming and accomplished daughter of the Comte de Paris to the Duke of Clarence and Avondale, otherwise Prince Albert Victor, of Wales, the object of the visit being to bring about, if possible, some arrangement by which the Princess might withdraw, in accordance with the Euglish act of settlement from the Catholie Church. The rumor is improbable on the face of it. But it orig inates in quarters where the truth should be known, and is coupled with the story that the Prince and Princess upon their marhe will be a valuable subject for the expeririage would proceed to Ireland to take up their abode as Viceroy and Vicereine of that island.

The intimate relations between the Prince and Princess of Wales and the Comte and Comtesse de Paris have certainly been drawn closer than ever during the last pear and if the grandson of the Queen is to marry a Catholic princess at all it would be impossible to find in Europe a wife more womanly, charming and accomplished that this younger sister of the Queen of Portugal.

nower, it "means business" only at about 25 cents worth. It bears the words "Quin-hentos reis" and "Imperio do Brazil," with the identity of the purchasing interest. It is assumed to start with that Mr. Noble the likeness of the "late" Dom Pedro, now Mr. Pedro d'Alcantara, as still does almost doesn't care to run a street railway all by himself. A man had much better own a all the paper money of Brazil; though the silver and nickle coinage of the Republic, is already in extensive circulation.

The other day I stepped into a shop and succeeded, by a deaf and dumb exhibit, in making the Portuguese merchant understand that I wanted to buy some shirts. I paid at the rate of 4,500 reis for a 49-cent shirt, or four and one-half times its cost in New York. As it takes from two to four weeks for the leprous laundrymen or women to do a day's washing, quite a supply of linen is necessary in this perspiring latitude.

THEY BORROW WHITE SHIRTS.

The delay in the washing is commonly renow on the road, the purchase was not a particularly great bargain. Mr. Noble said norted to be not entirely due to the laginess of the laundress. It is sometimes quite convenient for her husband and other members of the family, who want to cut a swell at a festival, to extemporize one of the United States Consul's white shirts for the evening or the Sunday, as the case may be. In proo money in grading and that the material of the accuracy of the story, the Methodist missionary here tells me that only one week ago this evening at a prayer meeting in a mud shanty in the suburbs of the city, a laundress was present with her family. One of the little urchins wore nothing exllevernon cept a large white bath towel about his shoulders, while an older son, about 8 years old, had on nothing but a nicely stare white shirt, which trailed in the mud and looked for all the world like the ones the writer wears. My first laundry bill was also in five figures, and not being as yet familiar with the value of the money, I was disposed to resent it as an imposition, until my friends lauchingly interfered, when I set up the "bug juice" and water for two, which was taxed at 1,200 rels. This made me sick at the stomach.

A RETIRING CONSUL'S JOKE.

This reminds me of the story told of a departing Consul and his "tenderfoot" successor, to whom he handed one of those tempting looking "500" bills just as the former was embarking. "Take this bill," said the tender-hearted fellow, with sympathetic look like a murderess. She is the first woman to commit a murder since the new law made for the disposition of murderers went into effect. The grand jury will in-vestigate Sadie's case the coming week, and tears in his eyes, "and settle with any of my oreditors, who may call to see me after I am then if she is found guilty of murder she gone," and interrupting the receiver's sug-gestions as to amounts and disposition of will be the first woman to be electrocuted. Facts have come to light which go to show balance remaining in his hands, he con-tinued, "Oh, never mind sending me the that Sadie was in love and her love was not reciprocated. A letter written by the acchange; just set it up all around for the boys." Recalling the value of the bill, 23 cents, the joke will be appreciated. PLENTY OF SAMENESS.

I am having some funny experiences in rubbing against the manners and customs of the people that help to vary and relieve the terrible monotony of life in the tropics, where the country is as flat as the broad ocean, the only scenery being the dense green foliage of the forests that grow down to the very edge of the mighty Amazon. The "leaves do not begin to fall" here. Every day is alike. There are no foyous budding springtime, no invigorating au-tumn, but all are melaacholy days. One of the customs that I cannot quite adapt myself to is waiting for breakfast till midday. The early mornings here are simply glorious. I love to rise with the sun and enjoy a walk while it is cool and re-freshing; but you cannot get anything but "early coffee," which consists of a small French cup of black coffee and a piece of Of fat Thanksgiving bargains in men's and boys' overcoats is awaiting you at Kaufbread.
