my duty to decline. While clinging to the hope of a communication from Mr. Parnell, to whomsoever addressed, I thought it necessary, viewing the arrangements for the commencement of the session to-morrow, to acquaint Mr. McCarthy with the conclusion at which, after using all the means of observation and reflection in my power, 1 had myself arrived.

BIt was that, notwithstanding the splendid services rendered by Mr. Parnell to his country, his continuance at the present moment in the leadership would be productive of consequences disastrous in the highest degree to the cause of Ireland.

One or the Other Must Retire.

I think I may be warranted in asking you so far to expand the conclusions given above as to add that Mr. Parnell's continuance as leader would not only place many hearty and effective friends of the Irish cause in a position of great embarrassment, but would render my retention of the leadership of the Liberal party, based, as it has been, mainly upon the prosecution of the Irish cause almost a trullity.

This expansion of my views I begged Mr. Mc Carthy to regard as confidential, and not intended for his colleagues generally if he found that Mr. Parnell contemplated spontaneous action; but I also begged that he would make known to the Irish party at their meeting tomorrow that such was my conclusion if he should find that Mr. Parnell had not in conemplation any step of the nature indicated. I now write you in case Mr. McCarthy should be unable to communicate with Mr. Parnell, as understand you may possibly have an opening to-morrow through another channel. dd you have such an opening, I beg you to make known to Mr. Parnell the conclusion stated in this letter.

A Simple and Direct Statement.

I have thought it best to put it in terms sample and direct, much as I should have liked, had it lain in my power, to alleviate the personal nature of the situation as respects the anner of conveying what my public duty has made it an obligation to say. I rely entirely on your good feeling, tact and judgment. WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE.

In the lobby of the House of Commons at 10 o'clock this evening nothing is being talked about but Mr. Parnell. The scene in the lobby is extraordinary. Excited groups of Liberal members are besieged by pricets, reporters and personal friends seeking for information. The attitude of the Irish members is one of defiance to the Liberal party. They have been entreated and threatened, but in vain. They remain contumacious and loyal to Mr. Parnell.

Everything in a State of Confusion.

This attitude has simply dumbfounded the Liberal party. The debate and with it the business of the House collapsed, rendering it difficult to foresee the course of events of the next few days. Mr. Parnell's reelection to the leadership at the meeting of the Irish Parliamentary party was moved by Mr. Sexton, seconded by Mr. Nolan and a unanimous vote was taken on it.

The Irish meeting was harmonious and unanimous throughout. Mr. Parnell tendered thanks for his reception and said it was for the Irish members to decide whether he should lead them. Had their decision heep in the negative or had there even been a diversity of opinion he would cheerfully have withdrawn from public life. Nothing but the conviction that his colleagues 'desired to continue to utilize his services induced him to resume the position which, under the present altered circumstances, had exposed him and them to attack.

In the House of Lords this evening Baron Windsor, Conservative, moved an address in reply to the speech from the throne, and Baron Ardilaun, Conservative, seconded the motion. One of the bollers was blown through the end of the mill and fell 500 feet away, while the other landed on the side of a hill 100 yards dis-tant. He got on top of the bollers and was carried with the boller into the bay and torn to pleces. James Kaird, a son of his, is also among the killed. After the explosion the mill took fire and was completely destroyed. The mill was occupied by Dunn, and there was an insurance of $15,000 on it. JII 11.
