Given by Rev. J. W. Riddle, of the Union Baptist Church. Rev. J. W. Riddle, of the Union Baptist Church, Southside, last evening delivered a sermon from the theme, "How to Make Home the Happiest Place on Earth." His text, "Love one another," was taken from John i., 3-11. He said: "That home is the happiest which has the most love and provides the most channels for it to flow through. Every home begins with love, hence has the basis of happiness. The ques-tion is, how to keep love in the home; how to stimulate, how to increase and how to expand it.' As means to bring about the desired end Rev. Mr. Riddle suggested the cultivation of cleanliness, congenial surroundings, kindness in manner and speech, a forbearing spirit. "Don't scold or find fault," said he. "If you have done wrong be manly enough to acknowledge it. Have a fixed ame daily to kiss your wife and children. 🕵 "Never receive a favor without showing your appreciation. If you have a mothern-law, let her know that the only way for her to get along is to know that you are master or mistress in your own house. If you have elderly people in the house, try to pave their way to the grave with kindness. If you have little children in the house, not your offspring, remember that they have the
