OPPOSING VIEWS ON THE FORCE BILL

The President's message to Congress is not read with undue eagerness in Pittsburg.

Yesterday, hours after the publication of Mr. Harrison's missive, hundreds of prom-ipent and intelligent citizens were asked comparatively, had read it. The majority of the persons approached said that they had

This has been demonstrated in the case of plate glass. Home production has brought down the

I believe they will prove of great benefit.

As for reciprocity, I am more and more convinced every day that it will become one of the great bulwarks of the Republican party. I am astonished at the remarkable showing made by the farmers. The increase in the market price of their leading products far surpass my most sanguine expectations. That part of the

I am also pleased with the President's bold.

Colonel William H. Reed-The message is clean cut, dignified and very forcible, particularly as it refers to the great issues that now confront the people. The President's views on the subject of free and honest elections suit me to the letter. This is an issue that must be met, and the Republican party must be largely depended upon to meet it. The indersement of the McKinley bill is also a strong point, and a sound one. Taken as a whole, I regard the message as one of the ablest that has ever gone before the people.

Ex-Secretary William Martin, of the Amalgamated Association-President Harrison is undoubtedly correct when he says the recent tariff legislation is not properly understood. My firm belief is that when the various branches of it are in full opera-

From a hasty perusal I also think the ut-Samuel P. Andrews, Principal of the Howard School-I expected the late tariff legislation would receive hearty support, but with all due deference to Major Mc-Kinley and his bill, I doubt whether it will suit the whole country, particularly the farmers of the great West. The arguments in favor of reciprocity are strong, and I think that this issue will have to be relied upon largely for the salvation of the Re-publican party.

Major J. F. Denniston, City Treasurer—

The President's recommendation for a close inspection of private pension bills is well-timed. I have always held that the Gov-erament has, been very liberal in its dealings with veterans, and I am not in favor of private pension bills, except in exceptional General and private went into the
